About the Department of Children, Youth, and Families (DCYF)

DCYF is a cabinet-level agency focused on the well-being of children. Our vision is to ensure that “Washington state’s children and youth grow up safe and healthy — thriving physically, emotionally and academically, nurtured by family and community.” DCYF’s work includes early learning, child welfare, prevention, and juvenile rehabilitation.

DCYF Public Disclosure

DCYF believes in the importance of the public’s right to know about its operations and activities. Many public documents are available on the DCYF website and may be located using the search function on the site. If you do not find the information you seek, you may make a public records request.

The Public Records Act requires that identifiable public records be made available to the public for inspection. Due to confidentiality of agency records, inspection and copying of records is available by appointment only, during the customary office hours of the agency. For public inspection of records, please contact the Public Disclosure Unit at dcyf.publicdisclosure@dcyf.wa.gov or 360-407-5520.
