OK

people are going to die for the reasons

We're about 100,000
cases

80-100,000 beds

100s of 1000s after peak

What is the peak?

Peak deaths? So we are trying to ensure the amount of maximum protection for the elderly and vulnerable coincides with the ~~maximum~~ peak

Or we are trying to ensure that to wait when the disease's effects on most people, the elderly are the most protected

You don't want to do it too early because

If you put elderly people into what would be a long period where they are not at risk when you are directly people from that time to look after them

Why are we delaying whole household isolation?

Because the chance of catching it are still low and you will be adding large numbers of people to stay at home when they might not be ill

But what if not some some live?

No - because I would simply suppress the virus & it's catching up again

Social distancing for 80% and 70% will reduce deaths by 20-35%.

Why is social distancing less effective for the 80+ group?

Stopping specific events is not advising stay at Sage has high confidence in the effectiveness of the dosing & deos

75% of the cases will be over a peak of 5 weeks

At its peak with a reasonable worst case scenario we will need 8000 beds

So under no circumstances can the NHS have coped - people are going to be cared for at home

We don't want to flatten it so much but we feel to build up any herd immunity

The next development is that people
w. mild symptoms are being asked to stay at home

Stage 1 - stay at home - rely on friends & family to deliver food

Stage 2 household -
It's not clear why

The household members ^{should} need to stay at home for 14 days to see if the symptoms develop

If it does, they stay for a further 7 days - so you'd be at home for 21 days

Friends & family personally deliver food by leaving it on doorstep. What if they have no friends & family?

Will you or not do intervention 2 days

How many tests are we going to do? Does everyone get tested?

9-2 in the 20s & UK
