How to Access Our Reports

We've got you covered! Access our reports in the way that works best for you.

ON YOUR COMPUTER

All three of the USDOL flagship reports on international child labor and forced labor are available on the USDOL website in HTML and PDF formats, at www.dol.gov/endchildlabor. These reports include the Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor, as required by the Trade and Development Act of 2000; the List of Products Produced by Forced or Indentured Child Labor, as required by Executive Order 13126; and the List of Goods Produced by Child Labor or Forced Labor, as required by the Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2005. On our website, you can navigate to individual country pages, where you can find information on the prevalence and sectoral distribution of the worst forms of child labor in the country, specific goods produced by child labor or forced labor in the country, the legal framework on child labor, enforcement of laws related to child labor, coordination of government efforts on child labor, government policies related to child labor, social programs to address child labor, and specific suggestions for government action to address the issue.

ON YOUR PHONE

The USDOL Sweat & Toil mobile application contains more than 1,000 pages of research from all three reports. Sweat & Toil helps you easily sort data by region, country, assessment level, good, and type of exploitation, all without the need for an Internet connection. You can download the free App from the iTunes or Google Play store and access the data on our website: <https://www.dol.gov/general/apps/ilab>.

The USDOL Comply Chain: Business Tools for Labor Compliance in Global Supply Chains mobile application contains best practice guidance for companies on ways to develop strong social compliance systems to reduce child labor and forced labor in supply chains. The application includes eight modules ranging from stakeholder engagement to code of conduct provisions, and from auditing to remediation to reporting. Companies that are new to social compliance can work through the modules in order, and more experienced companies can select modules based on their continuous improvement goals. You can download the free App from the iTunes or Google Play store, or access it on the USDOL website: <https://www.dol.gov/general/apps/ilab-comply-chain>.

ON PAPER

Our Findings report is available in a hard-copy magazine format, which provides an overall summary of the report, regional findings related to meaningful efforts made and gaps for countries to address, and the assessment levels of each of the 132 countries. In addition, our List of Goods Produced by Child Labor or Forced Labor is also available in hard copy format. Send an e-mail to GlobalKids@dol.gov to request hard copies or download them from the USDOL website at <https://www.dol.gov/endchildlabor>.

Foreword

When the U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of International Labor Affairs (ILAB) began researching international child labor 25 years ago, information moved slowly. Policy analysts placed phone calls to overseas organizations and waited for faxes from foreign governments. This was all to shed more light on a problem that mostly existed in the dark, and global estimates on the magnitude of child labor did not yet exist. The result was the first ILAB child labor report, By the Sweat & Toil of Children, which was mailed to hundreds of locations across the globe.

Today, information moves faster, and the knowledge base is broader. Sweat & Toil is now an app, available on iTunes and Google Play, that aggregates over 1,000 pages of child labor and forced labor research.

This is an "Age of Acceleration." Technology is changing the way we live and work, and inventors and companies are spearheading innovation to improve our lives. Yet, a relic of the previous era persists: 152 million child laborers and 25 million forced laborers are estimated to still sweat and toil worldwide. These adults and children work in hazardous, abusive, or even slave-like conditions. And U.S. workers have been left to compete on an uneven playing field.

R. Alexander Acosta, U.S. Secretary of Labor

The United States should not have to compete with other countries that fail to play by the rules, and seek an unfair advantage by turning a blind eye to labor abuses. Trade between nations should be fair, and profits should not come from the backs of children or slaves. The cost of child labor and forced labor is simply too high for all involved.

I am proud to release the 17th edition of the annual Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor, and the 8th edition of the List of Goods Produced by Child Labor or Forced Labor—the flagship reports in the series we began publishing 25 years ago. The research in these reports helps shine a light on these conditions overseas, and offers concrete actions U.S. trading partners can take to accelerate efforts to eliminate child labor and forced labor. While there has been significant progress over the last two decades, including 94 million fewer child laborers estimated today than there were in 2000, these reports show us that we need to accelerate progress toward ending child labor, forced labor, human trafficking, and modern slavery. This is vital if we are to make trade fair for all.

American workers cannot compete with producers abroad who use child labor or forced labor, provide unsafe working conditions, or do not pay workers what they are legally owed. These reprehensible practices undercut the higher standards we maintain to protect the well-being of our workforce here at home.

Accelerating progress means intensifying efforts on what we are already doing and what we know works. That means enforcing trade commitments, strengthening labor standards, and removing children from dangerous or demeaning work that robs them of their childhoods. This means prosecuting and holding accountable those individuals who force children to traffic drugs, wage battle as part of armed groups, or perform sex acts. It means permanently shuttering dishonest recruitment agencies and illicit companies that lure workers with false promises of decent work into abhorrent conditions of forced labor. And as we intensify our efforts, we must also seek innovations and creative solutions to more effectively address these challenges.

At the U.S. Department of Labor and across federal agencies, we are doing our part to accelerate progress on these issues. Here at home, our Wage and Hour Division investigated 750 cases with child labor violations last year, and debarred employers from applying for certification to request temporary foreign workers due to frequent abuse of workers in the H-2A agricultural worker visa program. Our Occupational Safety and Health inspectors have also assessed thousands of dollars in civil penalties for failing to protect employees from falls and other safety hazards. We must also seek innovations and creative solutions to more effectively address these challenges. Businesses can also accelerate progress by using our data and consulting our Comply Chain app, now available in Spanish and French, to be vigilant and dig deeper in their supply chains to ensure that child labor and forced labor are not in the mix of goods or services they offer.

In May of 2018, the Department of Homeland Security's Customs and Border Protection (CBP) used ILAB's extensive research documenting the use of forced labor in the production of cotton from Turkmenistan in making the historic decision to block all goods made with Turkmen cotton from entering the United States. The message here is clear: If you are a trading partner that does not abide by and uphold your commitments to end child labor or forced labor, the U.S. will do what it takes to protect vulnerable workers from exploitation, safeguard American jobs, and create a fair playing field for countries that play by the rules.

Like the rest of the international community, as communicated in the G20 Labor and Employment Ministers' Hamburg Declaration, the United States acknowledges that meeting the ambitious goal of ending child labor, forced labor, human trafficking, and all forms of modern slavery requires that we accelerate the very real progress that has been made over the past quarter-century. In this Age of Acceleration, we must keep pace by forging new partnerships, introducing innovations, and accelerating actions that take us closer to a world free of child labor and forced labor.

It is my hope that these reports will provide you with a renewed sense of urgency to continue this fight and bring others along who will join us in the race toward fair global trade—one that gives children their childhoods, forced laborers their freedom, and U.S. workers a fair playing field.

R. ALEXANDER ACOSTA
Secretary of Labor
September 2018

When Secretary of Labor Alexander Acosta named me to be Deputy Undersecretary for International Affairs in September 2017, it was my great honor to return to a bureau I had departed over 10 years earlier, but whose mission had never left me. My return marked the 70th anniversary of the Bureau of International Labor Affairs, or ILAB, as we call it. While our work, like the world, may look very different today than it did in 1947 or even in 2006, it still serves the same vital purpose: to help ensure a fair playing field for U.S. workers and businesses by improving labor standards overseas.

“The Age of Acceleration” Secretary Acosta mentioned has resulted in the swift rise of international trade and increasingly complex global supply chains. Yet we must ensure that as we accelerate, we also leave behind backward practices like child labor and forced labor.

Whether these abusive labor practices are checked or unchecked, the existence of child labor and forced labor run counter to our values as a nation. We want the goods we consume to be made by workers free from exploitation, not made by children or slaves. We also want workers in the U.S. to be able to compete on a fair global playing field.

Martha E. Newton, Deputy Undersecretary for International Affairs

That is why Secretary Acosta is committed to seeing accelerated action among our trade partners, including stronger enforcement against labor violations and demonstrated action to protect workers and children, especially those most vulnerable to exploitation. I am particularly proud that creating the knowledge base for such accelerated action is one of ILAB’s key contributions to the global effort to protect workers around the world.

Over the past 25 years, ILAB’s Office of Child Labor, Forced Labor, and Human Trafficking has been providing groundbreaking and influential research that equips governments, workers, businesses, and civil society with the information they need to take effective action against labor exploitation.

And we’re not resting on our laurels. The country assessments in this year’s Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor report, mandated by the Trade and Development Act of 2000, are based on the most stringent criteria ever. In order to earn a “Significant Advancement” assessment, a country must establish a basic floor of labor protections. This year, there were 14 countries that achieved this distinction, including Colombia, Paraguay, and India.

Of the approximately 1,700 country-specific suggested actions in this report, 1,100 of them are directed at improving laws and strengthening enforcement, providing a roadmap for over 140 governments to follow to accelerate progress in eliminating child labor in their own countries.

These are concrete actions governments can take to accelerate change and improve lives. The Government of Uzbekistan's work with the international community to significantly reduce the forced mobilization of children in the cotton fields is one example of how such change can and does happen. We commend this effort and appeal to the government to build on it by extending protections to adults who are forced to work under the threat of retaliation.

Our List of Goods Produced by Child Labor or Forced Labor, mandated by the Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2005, also provides vital information for both governments and businesses to accelerate change in improving the lives of workers abroad and creating a level playing field. The 2018 edition covers 148 goods in 76 countries. This includes the addition of 10 new goods, including some goods that consumers in the United States use every day, such as peppers from Mexico and mica from India.

By pinpointing specific industries where child labor and forced labor are occurring, the report equips governments and companies with information to help them target appropriate policy responses or direct resources as part of due-diligence or risk-management systems. While there are new goods from the governments of Brazil, El Salvador, and Paraguay, it is because they have proactively invested resources and collected and used their own data to determine where they can be most effective in addressing labor abuses in their own countries. Their commitment to data-driven policy-making serves as an example to other countries working to end child labor and forced labor, and these governments should be commended for these efforts.

Consumers, too, are growing more savvy and selective in their purchases—demanding not only quality products but responsible production practices—and social entrepreneurs are channeling the report's data into point-of-sale tools to inform purchases. ILAB welcomes this virtuous cycle of consumer advocacy and business response to consumer demand, as it gets more people involved, who can be a part of the solution.

Twenty years ago, 7 million people marched across 5 continents in the Global March Against Child Labor. The spirit of that march continues today, and must energize our collective commitment to march on behalf of the 152 million children still in child labor and 25 million adults and children in forced labor. As we seek inspiration from the past, let us recommit ourselves and show a renewed sense of purpose to accelerate progress toward the goal of eliminating child labor and forced labor.

Acknowledgments

The U.S. Department of Labor's (USDOL) Bureau of International Labor Affairs (ILAB) published this report under the leadership of Martha Newton, Deputy Undersecretary for International Affairs; Mark Mittelhauser, Associate Deputy Undersecretary for International Affairs; Marcia Eugenio, Director of the Office of Child Labor, Forced Labor, and Human Trafficking (OCFT); Kevin Willcutts, Deputy Director, OCFT; and Charita Castro, Division Chief for Research and Policy, OCFT.

Chanda Uluca and Rachel Raba managed the research, writing, and production of this report, with major contributions from Fan Yang, James Gyenes, and Teodora Mladenovic. The following OCFT staff carried out the underlying research that made the report possible: Ahoura Afshar, Ashley Lippolis Aviles, Rommel Calderwood, James Gyenes, Monika Hartsel, Randall Hicks, Adrienne Long, Michelle Mills, Teodora Mladenovic, Jennifer Oetken, Lukas Olynyk, Carolina Rizzo, Luis Pablo Solorio, Jasmine Whelan, and Fan Yang. Critical portions of the report were edited by Dan Arp, Austin Pedersen, Crispin Rigby, Rachel Rigby, and Brandie Sasser; vital research and administrative support were provided by Marco Campos, Erich Doerr, Christelle Domercant, Tina Faulkner, Claudia Guidi, Alexa Gunter, Caitlin Harwood, Erica Herrmann, Carolyn Huang, Kyle Livingston, Karrie Peterson, Julia Reinitz, and Thomas Szymanski.

Other personnel within OCFT who made important contributions include Christine Carlson-Ajlani, Kathryn Chinnock, Lorena Davalos, Cortney Donnalley, Rana Dotson, Marisa Ferri, Branton Kunz, David LaBoy, Deborah Martierrez, Eileen Muirragui, Yaniris Perez, Ingris Ramos, Sherry Richmond, Doris Senko, Tanya Shugar, Leyla Strotkamp, Sarah Sunderlin, Honoré Tchou, Pamela Wharton, Shelley Stinelli, Jon Underdahl-Peirce, and Pilar Velasquez.

Deborah Birnbaum and Derek Baxter from USDOL's Office of the Solicitor, along with Jay Berman from the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Policy made major contributions. Other staff from ILAB, the Employment and Training Administration, the Executive Secretariat, the Office of Public Affairs, the Office of the Solicitor, and the Wage and Hour Division who contributed include Olaoluwa Abina, Micole Allekotte, Ana Aslan, Andy Bailey, Alice Browning, Rakiyah Canty, Ryan Carrington, Katherine Cook, Cleveland Fairchild, Troy Finnegan, Mary Francis, Jane Garrido, Keith Goddard, Jennifer Goodyear, Jeff Grappone, Rob Hines, Tamara Hoflejzer, Eric Holland, Josh Kagan, Michael Kravitz, Emma Laury, Marie Ledan, Steve Marler, Katy Mastman, Ed McCarthy, Cierra Mitchell, Hannah Montgomery, Tecla Murphy, E.J. # Purpose of this Report

The U.S. Department of Labor (USDOL) has prepared this 17th annual report on the 2017 Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor in accordance with the Trade and Development Act of 2000 (TDA).<sup>(1)</sup> The TDA set forth the requirement that a country implement its commitments to eliminate the worst forms of child labor for the President to consider designating the country a beneficiary developing country under the Generalized System of Preferences (GSP) program.<sup>(2;3)</sup> The TDA also mandated the President to submit to Congress the Secretary of Labor's findings with respect to each "beneficiary country's implementation of its international commitments to eliminate the worst forms of child labor."<sup>(4)</sup> USDOL's Bureau of International Labor Affairs (ILAB) carries out this responsibility on behalf of the Secretary.

Research Focus

Country Coverage

This report covers 120 independent countries and 15 non-independent countries and territories designated as GSP beneficiaries. This includes former GSP recipients who have negotiated free-trade agreements with the United States.

<sup>(4)</sup> Because the population of children is extremely small (fewer than 50) or non-existent in the British Indian Ocean Territory, Heard Island and McDonald Islands, and the Pitcairn Islands, the report does not contain a discussion of these three non-independent countries and territories. The 2017 report presents information on child labor and the worst forms of child labor and efforts to eliminate this exploitation in the remaining 120 countries and 12 non-independent countries and territories. The five regions of countries and non-independent countries and territories in this report are Sub-Saharan Africa, 46; Asia and the Pacific, 32; Europe and Eurasia, 18; Latin America and the Caribbean, 24; and the Middle East and North Africa, 12. The use of "countries" in the report includes territories, and because the report focuses on government efforts, non-independent countries and territories are classified by their associated regions.

Population Covered

In undertaking research on the "worst forms of child labor," ILAB relied on the TDA definition of a child, which is the same definition contained in ILO Convention 182 on the Worst Forms of Child Labor (ILO C. 182). The TDA and ILO C. 182 define "child" to be a person under age 18.

Reporting Period

The reporting period for this year's report is January 2017 through December 2017. In certain cases, significant events or government efforts that occurred in early 2018 were included, as appropriate.

Type of Work

This report focuses on child labor and the worst forms of child labor. Definitions related to these types of work are guided by ILO C. 138 on Minimum Age and ILO C. 182 on the Worst Forms of Child Labor. Child labor includes work below the minimum age as established in national legislation (excluding permissible light work), the worst forms of child labor, and hazardous unpaid household services. The definition of the "worst forms of child labor" is found in the TDA and is the same as that included in ILO C. 182. It includes (a) all forms of slavery or practices similar to slavery, such as the sale or trafficking of children, debt bondage and serfdom, or forced or compulsory labor, including forced or compulsory recruitment of children for use in armed conflict; (b) the use, procuring, or offering of a child for prostitution, for the production of pornography, or for pornographic purposes; (c) the use, procuring, or offering of a child for illicit activities, in particular for the production and trafficking of drugs; and (d) work which, by its nature or the circumstances in which it is carried out, is likely to harm the health, safety, or morals of children.<sup>(1)</sup> Similar to ILO C. 182, the TDA states that the work described in subparagraph (d) should be "determined by the laws, regulations, or competent authority of the country involved."<sup>(1;5)</sup>

The Year in Review: A Call to Accelerate Global Action against Child Labor

Executive Summary

Over the last two decades, the world has come to know about the plight of child laborers. There remain 152 million of them, even as there has been global decline in their numbers. Between 2000 and 2017, the International Labor Organization (ILO) estimates that there were 30 percent, or 94 million, fewer children being exploited in low-wage industries or illegitimate work. A major force behind this has been the worldwide movement against child labor, which has declared that enough is enough. With human rights activist Kailash

Satyarthi leading the charge in 1998, 7 million men, women, and children marched across 5 continents and 103 countries with one clear message: The world should not tolerate the exploitation of children in the worst forms of child labor.

Governments, workers, and employers heard the intensity of that message, and soon after unanimously adopted ILO Convention 182 on the Worst Forms of Child Labor (ILO C. 182) at the 87th International Labor Conference on June 17, 1999. Ratifying this convention committed countries to address the plight of children who are forced to work in slave-like conditions, subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, used in illicit activities, and exposed to hazardous conditions.

At 20 Years: The Global March Against Child Labor Presses Onward

Manila, January 17, 1998. It was in this setting that a massive global groundswell began to raise public awareness of child labor. On that day, a group of child's rights activists, led by Kailash Satyarthi, set off on a 50,000 mile-long journey from Manila to Geneva.<sup>(6)</sup> The Global March Against Child Labor featured events, rallies, foot marches, and bus caravans to raise awareness of child labor issues. Passing through 103 countries before ending in Geneva in June 1998, just in time for the ILO's annual meeting, the Global March drew the participation of more than 7 million people, including representatives from NGOs and trade unions, teachers, children, and other concerned individuals.<sup>(6)</sup> World leaders could not—and did not—ignore them.

The ILO, in particular, heard the message, and a year later, ILO members unanimously adopted ILO C. 182 on the Worst Forms of Child Labor. This convention commits countries to take immediate actions to prohibit and eliminate the worst forms of child labor, and has enjoyed the fastest ratification of any ILO convention in history. To date, 181 out of 187 ILO member states have ratified the Convention. In addition, with India's ratification of the Convention in 2017, Kailash's home country joins the growing coalition. Kailash himself was recognized in 2014 as a co-winner of the Nobel Peace Prize.

Twenty years after the journey that began in Manila, Kailash and the Global March continue to influence worldwide efforts to protect and promote the rights of children. Supporters continue to be advocates for children's rights, especially free and meaningful education, freedom from economic exploitation, and freedom from work that is harmful to a child's physical, mental, spiritual, moral, or social development.

The Global March organized a virtual march in May and June 2018, commemorating the Global March's 20th anniversary, and spreading awareness about hazardous child labor and the safety and health of young workers. It also advocated for the universal ratification and implementation of ILO C. 138, which establishes the minimum age of admission into employment or work in any occupation, and ILO C. 182. This social media blitz was hailed as a success, receiving 858,000 comments on Twitter and 206,000 on Facebook.<sup>(7)</sup> This is an example of the hard work and sacrifice from people both online and on the road who continue to focus attention on the problems facing young workers globally.

Twenty years later, Kailash Satyarthi, now a Nobel Peace Laureate, is sending the same message to rally the world to continue its fight against child labor and modern slavery (see Box 1).<sup>(6)</sup>

The Bureau of International Labor Affairs (ILAB) of the U.S. Department of Labor (USDOL) has been a proud partner in the global fight against child labor. Beginning with the seminal Sweat & Toil report, prepared in response to a congressional request in 1993 to study child labor practices in manufacturing and mining industries that export to the United States, ILAB's Office of Child Labor, Forced Labor, and Human Trafficking (OCFT) has been providing timely, quality research to identify and address these abuses for over 25 years.<sup>(8; 9; 10)</sup> In addition to research, ILAB has been at the forefront of efforts to eradicate child labor through support for on-the-ground initiatives and policy engagement with foreign governments, civil society, and businesses. ILAB has worked alongside partners to build the capacity of governments to strengthen legislation and law enforcement, support civil society efforts to rescue children from exploitative labor, and provide social compliance training to businesses active in supply chains in over 90 countries. These initiatives have given nearly 2 million children access to education and training opportunities and offered approximately 185,000 families better alternatives to meet their basic needs and discover decent work. In the process, ILAB has contributed to the global reduction of over 94 million child laborers (see Figure 2).

The problem of labor exploitation of children persists, however, in virtually every sector of the global economy. Of the 152 million child laborers that remain worldwide, nearly half—73 million—are engaged in hazardous work, which by its nature can have adverse effects on children’s health, safety, and moral development (see Box 2 and Figures 3-4 on page 14). Most child labor—some 70 percent—occurs in agricultural sectors. While the global trend in child labor is downward, in Sub-Saharan Africa, in particular, the proportion of children in child labor is actually rising—with one-in-five children engaged in child labor. <sup>(11)</sup>

This past year also witnessed the sustained, gruesome involvement of children in gang and criminal activities, in particular in Guatemala and the Philippines, and mainly for the purposes of drug trafficking (see Box 3 on page 15). Meanwhile, migrant and oppressed populations remained extremely vulnerable to labor exploitation. In Turkey, poverty and a lack of meaningful work opportunities put at risk the children of 3.5 million refugees in the country. In Burma, the military’s brutal ethnic cleansing of the Rohingya people resulted in the displacement of children to refugee camps in Bangladesh, where many were trafficked for labor and commercial sexual exploitation. National armies and armed groups continued to recruit children for combat; and children displaced by fleeing conflict zones were more vulnerable to labor exploitation, particularly in refugee-receiving countries like Jordan, Lebanon, and Turkey. Natural disasters, such as tragic flooding in Peru and Sierra Leone, and Hurricane Maria in the Caribbean, not only destroyed property, but also left thousands of children orphaned, homeless, and vulnerable to labor exploitation.

All this upheaval and unrest—armed conflict, natural disasters, violent crime, and recruitment by gangs—creates barriers to educational access and equity that are often prohibitive, especially for those vulnerable to discrimination, including female children, disabled populations, and ethnic minorities. For far too many of the world’s children, the trauma of destabilization and exploitation supplants the hope and promise of a quality education.

The sooner the world can rid itself of such abusive practices, the sooner innocent children can enjoy lives free of exploitation. Achieving this goal will also help American workers, who should not need to compete on an unfair global playing field. The new global estimates of 64 million girls and 88 million boys still in child labor reaffirm the urgent need for the global community to act. As Secretary of Labor Alexander Acosta states in the foreword to this report, this “Age of Acceleration” can and must translate to an acceleration of efforts to permanently eradicate child labor.

USDOL’s 17th annual report, 2017 Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor, analyzes the state of child labor in 132 countries and territories and provides a detailed roadmap for each government to accelerate its efforts in eradicating these labor abuses. The following summary highlights key findings on efforts governments are making to end child labor in their countries, egregious forms of labor abuse or conditions that continue to plague children, and major gaps and promising practices for addressing the worst forms of child labor. The year in review concludes with priority areas for future action.

BOX 2

Not Miniature Adults: Dangerous Work is Inherently More Dangerous for Children

Of the 152 million children who work worldwide, nearly half—73 million—work in dangerous conditions. According to European data, children and young adults up to age 24 are 40 percent more likely to suffer from a non-fatal workplace injury.<sup>(12)</sup> In the United States, the risk that young workers between the ages of 15 and 24 will suffer a non-fatal occupational injury is approximately twice as high as that for workers age 25 or older.<sup>(13)</sup>

Children are at risk of working in unsafe or unhealthy conditions in all countries and in a diverse range of sectors. Nearly 75 percent of workers between the ages of 15 and 29 work in the informal economy, in which they are more vulnerable to occupational accidents and diseases because those jobs are more likely to lack protections for workers against workplace hazards.<sup>(14)</sup> For example, selling items on the street exposes a child to toxic fumes from vehicles, extreme temperatures, and even violence or sexual abuse. In the mining sector, children may suffer from musculoskeletal disorders caused by carrying heavy loads or they could be killed by collapsing mining shafts.

About half of the laborers in employment sectors that are prone to dangers, such as construction, mining, and agriculture, are children.<sup>(15)</sup> Although child laborers are vulnerable to the same dangers adult workers face, children, because of their level of behavioral and cognitive development, are less able to recognize unsafe conditions and take precautionary safety measures. Risk factors for exposure to dangerous work include a child's level of education, job skills, work experience, and stage of physical, psycho-social, and emotional development. Youth of legal working age also are often unaware of their rights as employees, and they lack the bargaining power that more experienced workers may possess. These factors can lead to their accepting dangerous work tasks or poor working conditions.

ILO C. 182 deems a worst form of child labor “work which, by its nature or the circumstances in which it is carried out, is likely to harm the health, safety or morals of children.” In 2017, the World Day Against Child Labor (June 12) and the World Day for Safety and Health at Work (April 28) highlighted the need to address hazardous child labor and improve the safety and health of young workers.<sup>(12)</sup>

These efforts demonstrate the enormous cost that families and communities bear when young people or children are seriously injured or impaired while doing dangerous work. The goals of eliminating dangerous child labor and improving the occupational safety and health of young workers are closely linked.

What is Hazardous Child Labor?

ILO Recommendation 190<sup>1</sup> calls on governments to consider the following when determining work that is prohibited for children.

Work which exposes children to physical, psychological, or sexual abuse

Work underground, under water, at dangerous heights, or in confined spaces

Work with dangerous machinery, equipment and tools, or which involves the manual handling or transport of heavy loads

Work in an unhealthy environment which may, for example, expose children to hazardous substances, agents or processes, or to temperatures, noise levels, or vibrations damaging to their health

Work under particularly difficult conditions such as work for long hours or during the night or work where the child is unreasonably confined to the premises of the employer

Micro-trafficking a Mega-Problem

The term “micro-trafficking” refers to the transport and sale of drugs in small quantities for local consumption, and it is a large and growing problem throughout Latin America.<sup>(16; 17)</sup> Criminal organizations rely on child labor to transport and distribute drugs because children are easy to manipulate and less likely to arouse suspicion or to face as harsh punishment as adults. Children have been forced to become key players in the illicit drug market, especially in the case of micro-trafficking.<sup>(18)</sup>

While ILO C. 182 specifically states that countries should prohibit using, procuring, and offering a child, in particular for the production and trafficking of drugs, often gangs and other illicit organizations still prey on children.<sup>(5)</sup>

Gangs in Colombia, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, and other countries forcibly recruit children to transport and sell drugs.<sup>(19; 20; 21; 22)</sup> School administrators, public officials, and enforcement agencies report that gangs force children to join their criminal operations through direct attacks, extortion, intimidation, and threats, and sometimes in or near the schools children attend.<sup>(23; 24)</sup> Children also find themselves in unsafe communities torn apart by turf wars, and have little or no access to education.<sup>(17; 23)</sup> Children who live in fear of being harassed by gangs sacrifice their childhoods; some flee their hometowns and others ultimately give in and join the gangs they believe will protect them and provide them with a livelihood.<sup>(24)</sup>

In response, USDOL encourages governments in the Central American region to develop and increase funding to enhance efforts to protect students from gang recruitment and violence in schools. Governments should also identify the geographic areas where micro-trafficking most often occurs and focus on investigating and prosecuting the adults who recruit children for this purpose.

Country Assessment Criteria

Each country in this report receives an assessment to indicate clearly the U.S. Department of Labor's findings on the country's level of advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor during the reporting period. There are five possible assessment levels: Significant Advancement, Moderate Advancement, Minimal Advancement, No Advancement, or No Assessment.<sup>(41)</sup> Box 4 lists the criteria for minimally acceptable laws and regulations.

1. SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT.

A country significantly advanced efforts in 2017 if the country: (a) instituted minimally acceptable laws and regulations, mechanisms, and programs to address and prevent the worst forms of child labor (see Box 4); and (b) during the reporting period made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas covering laws and regulations, enforcement, coordination, policies, and social programs, which may have included taking suggested actions recommended in the 2016 Report.

BOX 4

Minimally Acceptable Laws and Regulations, Mechanisms, and Programs to Address and Prevent the Worst Forms of Child Labor

In order for a country to be eligible to receive a Significant Advancement level, a country must have:

- Established a minimum age for work that meets international standards;
- Established a minimum age for hazardous work that meets international standards;
- Established legal prohibitions against forced labor that meet international standards;
- Established legal prohibitions against commercial sexual exploitation of children that meet international standards;
- Established legal prohibitions against the use of children for illicit activities that meet international standards;
- Designated a competent authority or implemented institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor;
- Imposed penalties for violations related to the worst forms of child labor;
- Directly funded a social program that includes the goal of eliminating child labor or addressing root causes of the problem, such as lack of education opportunities, poverty, or discrimination; and
- Ensured that child victims are not inappropriately incarcerated, penalized, or physically harmed solely for unlawful acts as a direct result of being a victim of the worst forms of child labor.

2. MODERATE ADVANCEMENT.

A country moderately advanced efforts in eliminating the worst forms of child labor in 2017 if it made meaningful efforts during the reporting period in some relevant areas covering laws and regulations, enforcement, coordination, policies, and social programs, which may have included taking suggested actions recommended in 2016.

3. MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT.

Three types of countries made minimally advanced efforts in eliminating the worst forms of child labor in 2017. The first is a country that made meaningful efforts during the reporting period in a few relevant areas covering laws and regulations, enforcement, coordination, policies, and social programs, which may have included taking suggested actions recommended in 2016.

The other two types of countries are those that, regardless of meaningful efforts made in relevant areas, minimally advanced as a result of establishing or failing to remedy regressive or significantly detrimental laws, policies, or practices that delayed advancement in the elimination of the worst forms of child labor. Examples of regressive or significantly detrimental laws, policies, or practices include lowering the minimum age for work below international standards, recruiting or using children in armed conflict, and continuing to impose administrative barriers to child labor inspections. The following points make distinctions between regression and continued law, policy, or practice:

- Regression in Law, Policy, or Practice that Delayed Advancement. This type of country made meaningful efforts in a few or more relevant areas but established a regressive or significantly detrimental law, policy, or practice during the reporting period that delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor.
- Continued Law, Policy, or Practice that Delayed Advancement. This type of country made meaningful efforts in a few or more relevant areas but failed to remedy a regressive or significantly detrimental law, policy, or practice established in previous years, which delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor.

4. NO ADVANCEMENT.

Three types of countries made no advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in 2017. The first is a country that made no meaningful efforts to advance the elimination of the worst forms of child labor during the reporting period.

The other two types of countries are those that, regardless of whether meaningful efforts in relevant areas were made or not, had a policy or demonstrated a practice of being complicit in the use of forced child labor in more than isolated incidents, which is considered an egregious form of exploitation. Complicity can occur when a government is involved in forced child labor at any level of government, including at the local, regional, or national level. Such involvement is direct or proactive government action to compel children under age 18 to work. The following points make distinctions between no efforts and complicit and efforts made but complicit:

- No Efforts and Complicit in Forced Child Labor. This type of country made no meaningful efforts, took no suggested actions reported in 2016, and had a policy or demonstrated a practice of being complicit in the use of forced child labor in more than isolated incidents in 2017.
- Efforts Made but Complicit in Forced Child Labor. This type of country made meaningful efforts, which may have included taking suggested actions reported in 2016, but had a policy or demonstrated a practice of being complicit in the use of forced child labor in more than isolated incidents in 2017.

5. NO ASSESSMENT.

This assessment is reserved for countries in which the population of children is either non-existent or extremely small (fewer than 50), there is no evidence of worst forms of child labor, and the country appears to have an adequate preventive legal and enforcement framework on child labor; or when a country is included in the report for the first time or receives a suggested action for the first time. Currently, only Wallis and Futuna falls into this category.

2017 Country Assessments

In 2017, 17 countries received assessments of Significant Advancement, 60 countries received assessments of Moderate Advancement, 42 countries received assessments of Minimal Advancement, 12 countries received assessments of No Advancement, and 1 country received an assessment of No Assessment. The global breakdown of assessment levels for advancement in efforts to eliminate child labor for the 132 countries and territories included in this report is shown in Figure 5.

This year, USDOL developed more stringent criteria by establishing certain basic child labor protections that countries must meet to be eligible to receive an assessment of Significant Advancement. In addition to taking actions suggested in last year's report or making other meaningful efforts during the reporting period in all relevant areas assessed in this report, these countries must have instituted minimally acceptable protections in laws and regulations, coordination mechanisms, and policies and programs to address and prevent the worst forms of child labor. For instance, countries must establish legal prohibitions against forced child labor and a minimum age for work that meets international standards. The U.S. government commends the following governments for receiving an assessment of Significant Advancement, based on their efforts to accelerate the elimination of child labor: Argentina, Brazil, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cote d'Ivoire, Ecuador, Guatemala, Honduras, India, Mauritius, Paraguay, Peru, Rwanda, Serbia, South Africa, Thailand, and Tunisia.

The Department continued implementing the requirement that a country could not receive an assessment level beyond a Minimal Advancement if it continued or established a detrimental law, policy, or practice that delayed its advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor. Fourteen countries received an automatic assessment of Minimal Advancement based on this, many due to engaging in a detrimental practice. For example, Mauritania's criminal law enforcement authorities failed to initiate a sufficient number of investigations and prosecutions to combat slavery related to children. The governments of Armenia, Azerbaijan, and the Democratic Republic of the Congo conducted no worksite inspections, while the governments of Azerbaijan and Mongolia did not permit their Labor Inspectorates to conduct unannounced inspections.

In addition, countries could not receive an assessment level beyond No Advancement if they had a policy or demonstrated a practice of being complicit in the use of forced child labor in more than isolated incidents. Three countries—Burma, Eritrea, and South Sudan—received this assessment due to the government's direct or proactive involvement in forced child labor. Burma's national military recruited, sometimes through force, and used children as combatants in armed conflict. The military also forced children to work as porters and cooks in conflict areas. In addition, the Burmese military perpetuated ethnic cleansing and acts of violence against the Rohingya people in Rakhine State, which resulted in children's displacement to refugee camps in Bangladesh, where they are vulnerable to labor exploitation and commercial sexual exploitation.

Several countries received notable changes in assessment levels. After years of receiving an assessment of No Advancement for the forced mobilization of children in the cotton harvest, Uzbekistan is receiving a Moderate Advancement for 2017 (see Box 5 on page 23). This year's assessment reflects the important efforts the country has made to significantly reduce the mobilization of children for the cotton harvest; however, the USDOL continues to call for an end to the mobilization of adult forced labor for this same purpose. The Dominican Republic is also receiving an assessment of Moderate Advancement because, in contrast to previous years in which it received an automatic Minimal Advancement, no cases were reported of children without identity documents being denied access to education. The Dominican government made new efforts to address this unlawful practice, which mainly affected children of Haitian descent. In Eswatini (previously known as Swaziland), there was no evidence in 2017 that local chiefs were forcing children to perform agricultural work or other tasks through kuhlehla, a customary practice that requires residents to carry out communal work, including in chiefs' houses or fields. This resulted in Eswatini's upgrade to an assessment of Minimal Advancement from its previous rating of No Advancement due to government complicity in forced child labor.

Meaningful Efforts and Major Gaps

In 2017, governments around the globe made meaningful efforts to further protect children by strengthening laws, enforcing existing statutes and regulations, coordinating with stakeholders, enhancing policy guidance, and carrying out social programming for vulnerable populations. Particularly noteworthy was the strengthening of legal frameworks by countries in every region of the world, including by adopting and expanding laws that identify hazardous occupations or activities prohibited to children. Governments also leveraged technology in new ways to improve the enforcement of child labor laws and monitoring of social services for children. Mobile applications were developed to report child labor violations and online portals were launched to make it easier for officials to share information, coordinate cases, and refer children and their families to social programming. In addition, a number of governments, particularly in Latin America, published child labor data that deepened understanding of the child labor situation in their countries and enabled more targeted actions to address the exploitation of children.

The report also details substantial gaps that remain and the considerable actions that countries need to take to continue to make progress toward eliminating child labor. The 2017 report notes that, in every region of the world, there are countries in which Labor Inspectorates had weak or ineffective enforcement mechanisms. In some countries, the Labor Inspectorate was entirely absent or its authority to conduct inspections was lacking or restricted. In addition, most countries had an insufficient number of labor inspectors compared to the ILO's technical advice, and many inspectorates were inadequately resourced to fully enforce child labor laws, resulting in fewer inspections, limited application of penalties for violations found, and little justice for the victims of child labor.

More than simply pointing out problems, the 2017 Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor recommends concrete actions to promote change. It calls attention to areas in which additional action is needed and suggests 1,772 country-specific actions that governments can implement to accelerate the fight against child labor. Nearly two-thirds of these recommendations relate to the need to strengthen laws or improve the enforcement of such laws, indicating the urgent need for additional progress in holding accountable those who perpetrate abuses. The sections of this report that follow look in greater detail at each area in which governments made efforts, highlighting promising practices and the gaps that remain to be addressed (see Figures 6-7).

Uzbekistan's Efforts to Address Long-Standing Problem of Child Labor in the Cotton Harvest

For several years, Uzbekistan has received an assessment of No Advancement in this report because of its government's complicity at the national, regional, or local levels in using forced child labor in the annual cotton harvest. This year, however, the government received an assessment of Moderate Advancement, which may come as a surprise to some observers. What changed?

Since 2014, Uzbekistan has demonstrated commitment toward eliminating child labor in the cotton harvest and made efforts to do so. USDOL has supported these efforts by funding the Uzbekistan Decent Work Country Program (DWCP), which is implemented by the ILO. As part of this project, the Uzbekistan government and the ILO conducted extensive awareness raising activities on the prohibition of using children to harvest cotton, trained national cotton harvest monitors to identify cases of child labor and forced labor, and conducted research on recruitment and working conditions in the agricultural sector to facilitate the development of an appropriate policy response.

While ILO monitoring in Uzbekistan suggests there has been a meaningful decrease in the number of children picking cotton each year starting in 2015, independent human rights activists in 2015 and 2016 identified cases of forced child labor in which officials mobilized entire classes or schools of children to pick cotton. However, current reports indicate that the incidence of child labor in the sector has been significantly reduced to isolated incidents.

Despite this good news, evidence indicates that for adult workers, the systematic use of forced labor continued in the 2017 cotton harvest. The quota system in the cotton sector continues to provide incentives for the use of forced labor, and further coordination is needed between national, regional, and local government officials to ensure that national prohibitions against forced labor are enforced at all levels of government.

USDOL remains committed to supporting Uzbekistan in addressing the use of forced adult labor through the DWCP, which is funded through the end of 2019.

Legal Framework for Child Labor

A solid legal framework demonstrates a commitment to the government's duty to protect its citizens, lays out rights and responsibilities, prescribes punishments for violators, and provides legal redress for victims. In short, good laws provide specific, much-needed protections and lay the groundwork for redress and accountability. While most countries have ratified all of the relevant international conventions, fully prohibited the commercial sexual exploitation of children, and established hazardous work prohibitions in line with international standards, much still remains to be done before children can enjoy full labor protections under the law, regardless of their country of residence.

In 2017, some countries achieved important milestones on this front. For example, despite ongoing internal conflict, South Sudan enacted a law prohibiting the worst forms of child labor and providing minimum ages for work, light work, and hazardous work. Afghanistan enacted a new Penal Code that explicitly prohibits and sets penalties for bacha bazi, a practice involving the exploitation of boys, often through threats or violence, for social and sexual entertainment. Rwanda amended legislation to allow labor inspectors to monitor and enforce child labor laws in the informal sector, a large part of its overall economy and a sector in which child labor is most prevalent. In addition, Turkey directed provincial governments to provide housing, health, and education services for seasonal agricultural workers and their families. Equally encouraging was the number of countries that developed or expanded their hazardous work prohibitions for children, including Argentina, Belize, Côte d'Ivoire, Mali, Mauritania, Mongolia, Niger, Serbia, and Timor-Leste. At the end of 2017, over 80 percent of the countries assessed in this report had hazardous work lists that included the sectors of work in which there is evidence of child labor in dangerous and unhealthy conditions.

Despite this progress, for many governments, developing a legal framework to address child labor in compliance with ILO Conventions 138 and 182 remains a significant challenge, and national laws continue to be deficient in key areas. For example, one-third of countries included in this report do not have a minimum age for work that is in line with international standards, and 34 percent do not adequately prohibit the use of children for illicit activities, including producing and trafficking of drugs. In addition, 55 percent of the countries do not provide adequate legal protection against the military recruitment of children into non-state armed groups, which leaves children vulnerable to recruitment by non-state armed groups such as ISIS, especially in Indonesia, the Philippines, and other countries in Southeast Asia.<sup>(25; 26; 27; 28; 29)</sup>

As a result, this report includes 448 country-specific suggested actions that governments can take to remedy gaps in their existing legal statutes.

Enforcement of Laws on Child Labor

For countries that have solid laws on the books, effective monitoring and enforcement of these laws is the next hurdle. Labor Inspectorates and criminal law enforcement agencies need the resources, capacity, and authority to be able to do their jobs.

In several notable instances in 2017, countries improved their ability to enforce their laws. Tunisia, for example, increased the budget of its Labor Inspectorate by 37 percent, while Colombia more than doubled its Labor Inspectorate budget. Guatemala's Labor Inspectorate was granted the authority to impose sanctions for labor violations and issued a new protocol for agricultural inspections, which includes specific instructions on child labor. In addition, Thailand's Department of Labor Protection and Welfare developed a handbook for labor inspectors who conduct home-based inspections in which domestic workers are typically found, and conducted training workshops for labor inspectors to enforce the Home Workers Protection Act.

Some countries also carried out successful law enforcement operations to identify child laborers. In India, the Anti-Human Trafficking Cell of the Rajasthan Police launched Operation Milap and rescued more than 500 child laborers. Authorities in Benin removed 77 children from child labor during inspections conducted in open-air markets and placed them in protective care or reunited them with their families. In Belize, Ministry of Education truancy officers referred children found in child labor, in particular on private farms, to social services after receiving alerts from teachers on student absences.

In practice, in 2017, many governments still failed to fully implement their child labor laws. Forty-nine of the 132 governments included in this report made no meaningful efforts to enforce laws related to child labor, including 28 governments that made no known law enforcement efforts at all during the reporting period. Workplace inspection systems remained generally weak in the majority of countries, largely because of capacity and resource constraints facing Labor Inspectorates, such as inadequate budget, personnel, vehicles, fuel, and training. Fewer than one-quarter of the countries assessed in this report had adequately staffed Labor Inspectorates and many officials indicated they lacked the most basic tools to conduct inspections. In Burundi, for example, the Labor Inspectorate did not have a single vehicle, and Indonesian inspectors lacked office facilities and fuel for transportation needed to carry out inspections.<sup>(30)</sup> Fewer than half of all governments authorize their inspectorates to assess penalties for violations, preventing them from holding violators accountable. Even in countries in which workplace inspection systems were in place and were functioning well, such as Costa Rica, Jamaica, Panama, Paraguay, and Peru, inspections of workplaces in the informal economy, in which most child labor tends to be found, were rare.

This report identified 669 country-specific suggested actions that would help governments improve their enforcement of child labor laws. (See Figure 8 to learn more about global enforcement efforts in 2017.)

A Collaborative Approach to Combating Child Trafficking on Ghana's Lake Volta

Lake Volta in Ghana is the largest man-made lake in Africa. With its great abundance of fish and the electricity generated from Akosombo Dam, it is a national treasure. The lake harbors a dark secret, however, because children are brought by traffickers from other areas of Ghana and sometimes from neighboring countries to work in the fishing sector. The hazards for children who fish in the lake are well documented. Children in these fishing communities work long hours and are exposed to dangerous conditions, including the constant threat of drowning because fishing nets get tangled in tree trunks left behind when the valley was flooded to create the lake. In addition, both boys and girls may be subject to physical abuse and commercial sexual exploitation.

To combat these exploitative labor practices, multiple U.S. agencies, including the U.S. Department of Labor, are working with the Government of Ghana to improve livelihoods for children and families and build the capacity of government officials and local communities to combat the exploitation of children in this area. Because of these efforts, the Government of Ghana has provided additional training to law enforcement personnel, established standard operating procedures for identifying and rescuing trafficked children, and raised awareness of relevant laws related to child trafficking. The government has also worked with Interpol to conduct police raids along the lake and collaborated with other international organizations, such as the International Justice Mission, to conduct research, prosecute perpetrators, and build the capacity of law enforcement officers to identify trafficking victims.

Civil society is also stepping up to provide services to victims and explore creative ways to ensure communities are aware of the hazards in the fishing sector that children face. For example, in 2018, the local NGO, Challenging Heights, collaborated with an artist and writer to publish a graphic novel about child labor in the Lake Volta Region, and an independent filmmaker released a documentary about a man affiliated with Challenging Heights who rescues child laborers from the lake. This multi-faceted approach to combating child labor is drawing greater attention to a pressing problem and reducing the number of children involved in such dangerous work.

Coordination of Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating bodies and other mechanisms are critical for monitoring the implementation of international commitments and national legal and regulatory mandates. When functioning properly, entities such as steering committees, task forces, and working groups ensure that those who have responsibility for implementing national provisions for the prohibition and elimination of child labor cooperate with each other and coordinate their activities. Without coordination, the efforts of governments and other stakeholders can be duplicative and an inefficient use of resources.

In 2017, some governments made progress in improving coordination of their child labor efforts. Panama's Ministry of Labor launched a child labor monitoring information system to strengthen interagency coordination on child labor cases and established agreements with municipal councils to design and implement child labor elimination strategies. The Serbian government elevated the National Coordinator to Combat Trafficking to a full-time position, created a standalone office under the Ministry of the Interior, allocated five employees, and budgeted for the first 2 years of implementation of the Strategy for Preventing and Suppressing Human Trafficking and its accompanying Action Plan. Timor-Leste established a monitoring committee to assess the progress of the Inter-Agency Trafficking Working Group tasked with implementing the National Action Plan on Combating Human Trafficking. In addition, during the reporting period, the Government of Ghana, through extensive coordination with U.S. government agencies, Interpol, NGOs, and civil society, positively affected the problem of forced child labor in fishing on Lake Volta. Box 6 on page 27 provides additional details about these efforts.

Although some governments made notable progress, major gaps in interagency coordination to address child labor were evident. In 2017, 63 percent of governments made no meaningful efforts to improve their inter-ministerial coordination on child labor. Many existing mechanisms in countries around the world, such as national child labor steering committees, failed to meet or conduct any activities during the reporting period. Neither Burundi's Commission for Consultation and Monitoring on the Prevention and Suppression of Trafficking in Persons nor its National Multi-Sector Committee for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor have convened since 2014. Fiji's Inter-Agency Human Trafficking Task Force has not been active since 2012. Benin's National Executive Committee to Combat Child Labor and the National Commission on Children's Rights did not meet in 2017, and their overlapping mandates are a source of confusion. While some coordinating mechanisms convened, others lacked the resources to carry out their mandates. In Indonesia, some Provincial and District Human Trafficking Task Forces lacked sufficient funding to operate effectively. In Macedonia, the National Trafficking in Persons Commission reportedly was underfunded. In some countries, including Azerbaijan, Kiribati, and Tuvalu, coordinating bodies have yet to be established.

Government Policies on Child Labor

Policies on child labor—statements, directives, or agreements—communicate a government's position, which should guide decision-making and structure government efforts toward achieving desired outcomes to address child labor. In many cases, countries are more successful in reducing child labor than other countries because they make better or more appropriate policy choices. Policies related to the elimination of child labor may help identify areas of greatest need and priorities for engagement. They may help achieve greater policy coherence between ministries, set targets and timelines, or mobilize financial and human resources. Policies may secure the commitment of multiple stakeholders and provide accountability. Such policies commonly take the form of national action plans, national strategies, codes of conduct, executive orders, or memorandums of understanding (MOU).

In 2017, a number of countries instituted new national policies to address child labor. Argentina, Mozambique, and Turkey adopted national child labor action plans. Other countries focused on specific types of child labor or addressed labor exploitation in specific sectors. The Colombian government approved a roadmap for the prevention and elimination of child labor in mining, and the Government of Mongolia adopted a National Action Plan on Combating Trafficking in Persons. Chile released a National Action Plan on Business and Human Rights, a policy that promotes respect of human rights in supply chains. In addition, the governments of Peru and the United States signed an MOU to combat labor exploitation in illegal gold mining, including forced labor and hazardous child labor, through cooperation on the prevention, investigation, prosecution, and conviction of such crimes. Other governments evaluated the effectiveness of their child labor policies. In 2017, the Government of Kosovo published a report detailing the results of implementing its National Strategy and Action Plan for the Prevention and Elimination of Child Labor, citing improvement of the child labor knowledge base and strengthening of institutions that are partnering in the fight against child labor. Ethiopia and Zambia, among other countries, also adopted economic and social policies that may have an impact on child labor, including anti-poverty and education policies.

Policies mean little if they are not implemented, and despite these advancements, many national action plans or other policies throughout the world were not funded or monitored, or were allowed to lapse. The lack of implementation of policies has weakened governments' efforts to meet their goals of eliminating child labor. Bosnia and Herzegovina and Brazil did not provide adequate resources to ensure the implementation of their education policies, and Botswana, Eswatini, and Nicaragua did not take steps to implement their national child labor policies during the year. In addition, Bolivia, Burundi, and Moldova allowed their national child labor policies to expire. In 2017, 47 percent of governments covered by this report took no meaningful steps to enact new—or implement existing—child labor policies, prompting the inclusion of 172 country-specific suggested actions.

Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Social programs serve a variety of important functions in addressing child labor. They can prevent child labor by educating and mobilizing the public and concerned groups, including children and their families. They may identify cases of child labor, provide direct assistance to remove children from child labor situations, and facilitate their rehabilitation and reintegration into society, including by providing temporary shelter and other basic needs. Some social programs focus on ensuring access to free basic education, vocational training, or apprenticeship opportunities; provide cash transfers to vulnerable families so they can keep their children in school; or improve school infrastructure and teacher training to better meet the needs of children. (See Box 7 to learn more about ensuring education for vulnerable children.) Other social programs identify children at special risk, including girls, younger children, children with disabilities, or minority populations, and provide services for them.

In 2017, 99 countries—or 75 percent of countries covered in this report—funded or participated in programs that included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. India launched the Platform for Effective Enforcement for No Child Labor (PENCIL) to enforce child labor laws and implement a district level project that identifies children working in hazardous work, withdraws them from dangerous situations, and provides them with education and vocational training. In Argentina, the Ministry of Labor and the Argentinian Brick Workers Union launched a National Campaign Against Child Labor in Brickmaking that aims to develop policies that improve labor inspections in this sector and better support brick workers so their children do not need to work. The governments of Macedonia and Moldova inaugurated new national hotlines to receive tips and complaints from the public regarding child labor and trafficking, while Colombia initiated “We Protect,” a web-based tool to collect, monitor, and address complaints regarding the commercial sexual exploitation of children.

Specific to improving education access for those in or at risk of child labor, Brazil, Ethiopia, and Morocco, among others, continued to operate large-scale cash transfer programs to qualifying families to increase school enrollment and reduce dropout rates. As of May 2017, Pakistan's Elimination of Child Labor and Bonded Labor Project has provided cash assistance to families of 88,000 child laborers so that instead of working in brick kilns, they could go to school. The Government of Ecuador launched Youth Impulse, a program designed to increase job training and provide higher education opportunities for at-risk youth, support youth entrepreneurship, and connect employers with at-risk youth.

Despite the launch or continuation of social programs to address child labor around the world, such programs are, at times, under-resourced or their scope is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem. In Burma, the Department of Social Welfare lacks the staff and resources necessary to provide adequate services to child labor victims, and in Cambodia, social services providers are under-funded and have insufficient technical capacity to provide services to children involved in or at risk of child labor. In addition, some countries lack social programs that target high-risk sectors where child labor is particularly pervasive. In Bangladesh, for example, research found no evidence of social programs to assist children working in tanneries or the informal garment sector, and Belize lacks social programs to combat child labor in agriculture and fisheries. Four countries had no social programs to address child labor: Grenada, Saint Lucia, Tonga, and Vanuatu.

Birth Registration: A First Step in Making Education Accessible and Preventing Child Labor

Birth registration is a key tool in combating child labor around the world, and its importance is enshrined in the Convention on the Rights of the Child and other international treaties. Birth registration provides legal proof of a child's identity, including his or her name, nationality, parentage, and age. A strong and well-documented legal identity is key to protecting children from becoming victims of child labor and sexual exploitation.

UNICEF estimates that the births of nearly 230 million children under the age of 5 have never been registered. Without an established legal identity with a birth certificate, they are often excluded from accessing basic services, such as health care, social security, and education. This puts a child's development, safety, and future in jeopardy. Many countries require children to present identity documents to access primary school or to take the exams needed to graduate and pursue secondary or higher education. Without access to education, unregistered children have less incentive to enroll or remain in school, and once out of the school system, children are at an increased risk of becoming victims of child labor. In addition, improved birth registration records and datasets are crucial for governments to develop policies and programs aimed at protecting children from exploitation.

Many of the country profiles included in this year's Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor highlight the struggle that unregistered children face when trying to access education, and how this increases their vulnerability to labor exploitation. The findings listed in these country profiles highlight the low birth registration numbers among children from refugee families, migrant and minority populations, and those living in rural areas, among others. The report also contains suggested actions targeted toward 25 governments to increase birth registration rates and make education accessible for all children, including those without identity documents.

A Roadmap for Accelerated Action to Eradicate Child Labor

With the 2017 G20 Labor and Employment Minister's Hamburg Declaration and Buenos Aires Declaration on Child Labor, Forced Labor, and Youth Employment, world leaders challenged global partners to renew their “commitment to action and [its] effective implementation” to end child labor.

Building on a quarter century of experience, the United States remains a steadfast partner in helping the world meet this challenge. We know firsthand that change can happen, but it will take at least as much sustained attention and concerted effort to make the next 25 years as transformational for the world's working children as have the last 25 years, and we call on all governments to step up efforts in this global fight.

Whether because of personal hardship, social unrest, or natural disasters or upheaval, the complexity of child labor requires an equally multifaceted response. The 2017 Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor paves the way for stakeholders to bring tested policy interventions to scale and introduce innovations to accelerate global actions that can transform lives, economies, and even societies.

The recommendations in this report respond to changing global realities and underscore the vast amount of work the world has in front of it. Governments must enact stronger legislation, strengthen enforcement, improve coordination, implement better policies, and broaden social protections for children and families. Rapid technological innovations provide opportunities for new tools that can accelerate these efforts.

While this report focuses primarily on government actions, everyone has a role to play. Private citizens can seek knowledge about how their goods are made so that they can make more informed purchases. Businesses can demand and take steps to ensure social compliance at every step along the supply chain. Civil society can continue to shine a light on the abusive practices of child labor.

We invite you to join us and do your part.

Regional Analysis of Government Efforts and Country Assessments

The global picture of child labor is as varied as the people and the cultures themselves. In an effort to provide context to this diversity, the following section gives a snapshot by region of the 2017 Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor. (See Figure 9 for a regional breakdown of country assessments.) All five regions had at least one country that received an assessment of Significant Advancement, with Latin America and the Caribbean having the highest number of countries in this category, followed by Sub-Saharan Africa, Asia and the Pacific, Europe and Eurasia, and the Middle East and North Africa. All regions also had countries that received an assessment of Minimal Advancement, with Sub-Saharan Africa having the highest number of countries in this category, followed by Asia and the Pacific, Europe and Eurasia, Latin America and the Caribbean, and the Middle East and North Africa.

2017 Regional Outlook

Meaningful Efforts

- Strengthened legal frameworks prohibiting hazardous work for children and the commercial sexual exploitation of children.
- Leveraged technology to improve enforcement of child labor laws.
- Launched new policies aimed at eliminating child labor.

In Asia and the Pacific, 62 million children ages 5 to 17, or 7.4 percent of all children in the region, are engaged in child labor.<sup>(31)</sup> Figure 10 shows an overview of the regional outlook. Children in this region engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture and as domestic workers in private households. In addition, the governments of Burma and the Philippines committed acts of violence against children during the reporting period. Following the Burmese military’s acts of ethnic cleansing and violence against the Rohingya people, an estimated 400,000 children were displaced to refugee camps in Bangladesh, where they were vulnerable to additional abuses, including child labor. In the Philippines, police and armed persons associated with the police killed a number of children suspected of being drug dealers, while other children were placed in detention centers with poor conditions.

6% Significant Advancement
41% Moderate Advancement
31% Minimal Advancement
22% No Advancement

Challenges and Existing Gaps

- Insufficient number of labor inspectors and inadequate resources prevent enforcement of child labor laws.
- Social programs do not exist for children engaged in certain types of child labor, particularly for children engaged in hazardous work and commercial sexual exploitation.
- Some governments perpetrated acts of violence against child laborers or made children more vulnerable to child labor.

In 2017, countries throughout the region strengthened protections for children, including by addressing gaps in existing laws related to hazardous work and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. For the first time, Timor-Leste and Pakistan’s Sindh Province established hazardous work prohibitions for children, and India and Mongolia expanded the list of hazardous work activities for children. Afghanistan adopted a Penal Code that explicitly prohibits bacha bazi, a practice involving exploitation of boys for social and sexual entertainment. In addition, the Philippines passed the Free Internet Access in Public Places Act, which aims to prevent the online sexual exploitation of children. In Burma, the USDOL-funded Myanmar Program on the Elimination of Child Labor (My-PEC) supported the country’s efforts to bring laws and practices into alignment with the principles of ILO C. 182, including by amending existing national laws to meet international minimum age requirements and provide additional legal protections to children. (See project description in Box 8.)

My-PEC: Helping a Nation Take Its First Steps to Combat Child Labor

After five decades of military rule, Burma lacked laws, knowledge, and tools to combat the worst forms of child labor. In the absence of data indicating the scope and scale of child labor, and the lack of understanding of the impact of the issue on Burmese society and its economy, Burma faced major challenges. In 2013, to support the Government of Burma's efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor, USDOL funded a $6.25 million project called the Myanmar Program on the Elimination of Child Labor (My-PEC), implemented by the ILO.

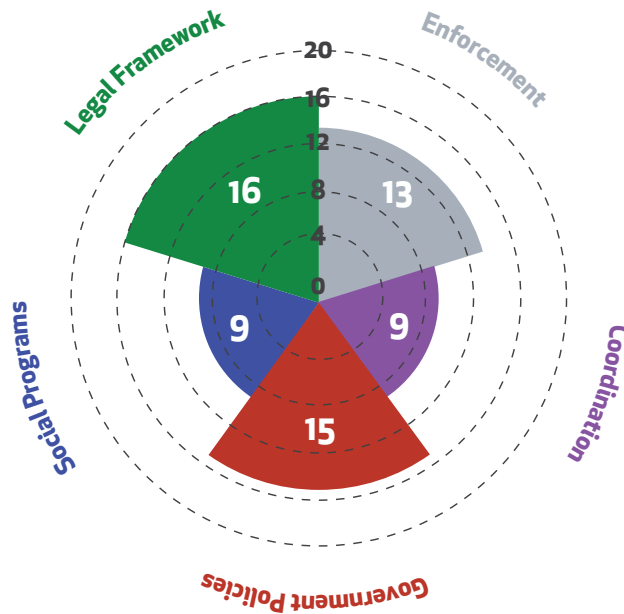

Through the My-PEC partnership, the Government of Burma has started to formulate a strategy to combat the worst forms of child labor. Furthermore, it now has child labor data, which were collected this past year as part of the National Labor Force Survey, although the government has not yet publicly released the data from this survey. New, reliable data, combined with additional studies recently released on child labor in Burma, are helping to inform My-PEC programming. The focus is also on the long term, and in addition to providing approximately 3,600 children across a variety of ethnic groups with direct education services, My-PEC is supporting Burma's efforts to amend existing national laws to meet international minimum age requirements and provide additional legal protections to children.

My-PEC is just the start; considerable work remains to be done country-wide, particularly as children continue to be used as combatants and the government perpetuates violence and discrimination against ethnic minorities.

Number of Countries in Asia & the Pacific that Undertook Meaningful Efforts to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor in Relevant Areas

In 2017, some countries in the region also leveraged technology to enforce child labor laws. India launched an online portal that allows NGOs and law enforcement officials to share information and coordinate child labor cases at the national, state, and local levels. Likewise, Thailand adopted the Cyber Tipline Policy, enabling it to partner with the U.S. National Center for Missing and Exploited Children to combat the online sexual exploitation of children.

Despite this progress, the region faces significant challenges in eliminating child labor. Fewer than a quarter of countries covered in this report had an inadequate number of labor inspectors. Afghanistan, for example, had only 8 labor inspectors, compared with the ILO’s technical advice of 200 inspectors. Bangladesh ideally would have 1,835 inspectors, but employed only 317, while Pakistan’s inspectorate had only 356 inspectors of the ILO’s technical advice of 1,597 inspectors.

Most countries in Asia and the Pacific dedicated insufficient financial resources to their Labor Inspectorates, which negatively affected the enforcement of child labor laws. For instance, Tuvalu’s Labor Inspectorate received no funding in 2017. Officials in Nepal’s Department of Labor noted their budget was insufficient and had decreased, compared with 2016 levels, resulting in a lack of resources to collect and publish data on child labor law violations. Bhutan’s Ministry of Labor and Human Resources also reported that limited resources placed constraints on the number of inspections conducted and inspectors employed. Many labor inspectors across the region lacked the training needed to do their jobs. Inspectors in the Maldives received no training on the identification and remediation of child labor. Pakistan’s provincial labor inspectors indicated that insufficient training hampered their ability to inspect workplaces. In addition, insufficient training limited the capacity of local authorities in Cambodia to enforce regulations against hazardous work for children in agriculture, brickmaking, fishing, tobacco, and cassava production.

Countries across the region also lacked social programs to adequately assist child laborers, particularly those working in hazardous situations and commercial sexual exploitation. In the Maldives, social programs did not specifically address the commercial sexual exploitation of children, forced labor in domestic work, or the use of children in drug trafficking or the production of pornography. Existing programs in Pakistan did not provide adequate protection and rehabilitation services for bonded child laborers and victims of human trafficking. Afghanistan also had no programs aimed at eliminating child labor in agriculture or the production of bricks, and it greatly needs government-run shelters for victims of human trafficking. The Government of Kazakhstan lacked programs to assist children engaged in the production of cotton, which is on the country’s hazardous work list.

Europe and Eurasia

2017 Regional Outlook

6 million children ages 5-17 are engaged in child labor

KEY  = 1,000,000 children

Meaningful Efforts

- Adopted laws and regulations to strengthen child labor protections.
- Trained law enforcement personnel to combat child labor, including child trafficking.
- Established new policies that address child labor issues.

In Europe and Eurasia, approximately 6 million children ages 5 to 17, or 4.1 percent of all children in the region, are engaged in child labor.<sup>(31)</sup> Figure 12 provides an overview of the regional outlook. Children in this region engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and forced begging, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture and street work.

In 2017, several countries passed new laws and policies to strengthen child labor protections. Moldova passed a new law that grants financial compensation to child victims of forced labor, and Serbia adopted an amended hazardous work list. A new Ukrainian law strengthened social services and access to education for children living in regions beyond central government control. In addition, Albania passed a new child rights strategy, and Turkey instituted a new national action plan to address child labor.

18 countries

Challenges and Existing Gaps

- Labor Inspectorates in some countries are not fully functioning.
- Mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor are not established or do not function.
- Minorities and other disadvantaged children face barriers to access education.

Although having solid laws and policies is essential, enforcement remains critical to addressing child labor. Several governments provided enforcement personnel with training on child labor. For instance, labor inspectors in Azerbaijan, Montenegro, and Turkey received training on enforcing laws against child labor. Criminal investigators, prosecutors, and judges in Bosnia and Herzegovina, Serbia, and Turkey also received training on child labor and child trafficking.

Despite these successes across the region, basic labor law enforcement structures were absent in some countries. Georgia continued to lack a Labor Inspectorate to monitor, inspect, and enforce child labor laws, following the repeal of its 2006 Labor Code. Armenia lacked a body clearly mandated to monitor, inspect, and enforce child labor laws, a gap caused by a reform of the country's inspection program. In addition, neither Armenia nor Georgia allow labor inspectors to conduct unannounced inspections, and Azerbaijan took steps to extend a moratorium on all labor

Number of Countries in Europe & Eurasia that Undertook Meaningful Efforts to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor in Relevant Areas

inspections through 2021, which potentially will leave violations of child labor laws undetected in workplaces. Ukraine’s legislation continued to require the State Labor Service to obtain Cabinet of Ministers’ approval to conduct an inspection of businesses with an annual income of less than $750,000. In Serbia, however, USDOL worked to address gaps in labor law enforcement through its Country Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce Child Labor (CLEAR) project. (See project description in Box 9.)

BOX 9

The CLEAR Path to Improving Law Enforcement

Labor inspectors, social workers, and police officers in Serbia receive training on the identification of child labor, including its worst forms, through the CLEAR Project. (October 2017)

Across Europe and Eurasia, unscrupulous employers take advantage of gaps in labor law enforcement to exploit vulnerable workers, including children. USDOL is providing capacity-building assistance to Serbia, among other countries, through the ILO-implemented Country Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce Child Labor (CLEAR) project.

Since 2010, officials from Serbia’s Labor Inspectorate have reported that training for labor inspectors was inadequate. To address this gap, the CLEAR project is implementing a train-the-trainers program for labor inspectors, social workers, and police officers. Train-the-trainer programs function by initially training a few individuals, who then return to their home agencies and replicate the training, greatly magnifying the number of trained individuals and enhancing training capacity in the country. In 2017, the CLEAR project provided training on child labor identification and prevention to individuals in 29 districts across Serbia, and provided inspectors with access to laptops to help them manage cases. The Labor Inspectorate reported that it plans to use the train-the-trainers program as the foundation for an internal training regimen for all inspectors. Adoption of this model by the Serbian Labor Inspectorate allows the project’s work to continue well past its end date.

24 countries

Meaningful Efforts

- Leveraged unconventional partnerships to coordinate efforts to identify and address child labor.
- Introduced new technology to improve child labor law enforcement and monitor social services for children.
- Conducted and published research on child labor.

In Latin America and the Caribbean, 10.5 million children ages 5 to 17, or 7 percent of all children in the region, are engaged in child labor.<sup>(31)</sup> Figure 14 provides an overview of the regional outlook. Children in this region engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture, mining, and domestic work. In addition, many migrant children, and children of indigenous and African descent, remain particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. For a picture of how USDOL is helping to address child labor in Colombia’s mining communities, see the project description in Box 10 on page 45.

During the year, governments throughout the region leveraged partnerships to coordinate efforts to identify and address child labor. In both Panama and Peru, national ministries forged new relationships with municipal governments to prevent and respond to child labor, such as providing training and outreach on child labor and human trafficking following Peru’s devastating floods in 2017. The governments of Colombia and

Challenges and Existing Gaps

- Gaps exist within the authority or operations of enforcement agencies to monitor the informal sector.
- Prosecution levels related to the commercial sexual exploitation of children are low.
- Natural disasters, violent crime, and migration prevent children from accessing education.

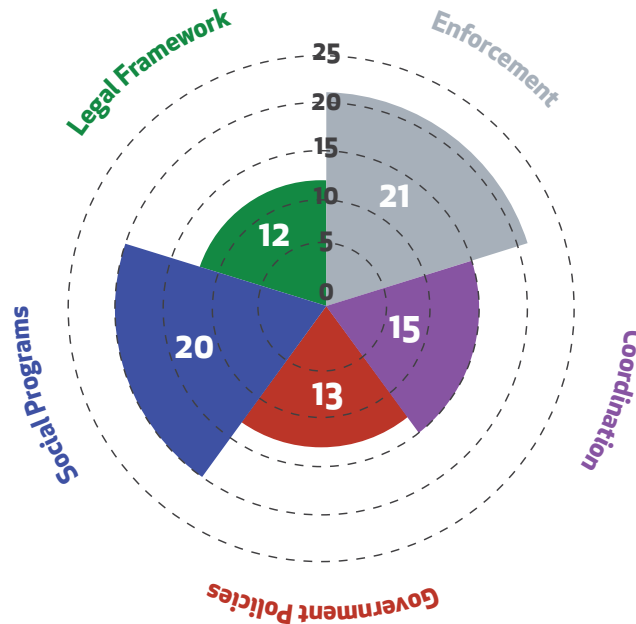

Guatemala jointly developed a virtual training course and established an agenda to work together to end child labor. Governments in the region also introduced new technologies to modernize efforts to monitor social services for children and strengthen labor law enforcement. Honduras released a mobile application for reporting child labor violations, and Paraguay piloted a data system to link local and national government bodies to improve protection of adolescent workers and referral of families to social programs. The region continued to collect and publish child labor research; Brazil, Costa Rica, and Guatemala published national child labor data, while Guyana and St. Lucia published rapid assessments on child labor.

The region faces many challenges, including high rates of inequality and informal work, and inadequate funding for law enforcement and social programming. Brazil’s Labor Inspectorate experienced significant resource issues that limited inspections to major cities due to a lack of funds for vehicles, gasoline, air travel, and daily lodging and meals for labor inspectors. The same held true in Haiti,

Number of Countries in Latin America & the Caribbean that Undertook Meaningful Efforts to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor in Relevant Areas

where the lack of sufficient transportation, fuel, and appropriately equipped ministry facilities hampered the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs' efforts to enforce child labor laws. The capacity of the Dominican Republic's National Police and Attorney General's Special Prosecutor to identify, investigate, and prosecute criminal cases related to the worst forms of child labor was limited by a lack of human and financial resources. In addition, many countries in the region have gaps within the authority or operations of law enforcement agencies, preventing them from addressing child labor in the informal sector in which child labor is most likely to occur. In Jamaica, child labor is pervasive in the informal sector, but existing law authorizes labor inspectors to conduct inspections in only certain industries or sectors, resulting in inspectors conducting inspections primarily in the formal sector.

Although social programs exist throughout Latin America and the Caribbean to protect children, many countries in the region lack programming or funding to reach children in key sectors and among vulnerable populations, including migrant children, children of indigenous or African descent, and children in rural areas. In Ecuador, the lack of schools in some areas specifically affects indigenous and refugee children, who must travel long distances to attend school; almost half of all indigenous children in rural areas and up to 40 percent of those in urban areas do not attend secondary school, which can make them more vulnerable to child labor. Saint Vincent and the Grenadines lacked social programs for children engaging in commercial sexual exploitation and begging, while many Brazilian states lacked resources and shelters to adequately assist child victims of human trafficking.

Secondary school attendance and completion rates remain low throughout the region and natural disasters, violence, and migration pose barriers to access education. In 2017, Hurricane Maria damaged or destroyed many schools in the Caribbean, resulting in long interruptions to children's education. In Guatemala, El Salvador, and Honduras widespread violence and the recruitment of children into gangs continued to hinder access to education. Children fleeing the crisis in Venezuela also experienced difficulties accessing education. Efforts are underway in this region to address these issues.

Somos Tesoro in Colombia: The Transformation of Child Labor in Mining Communities

Lizeth Mendoza remembers that before the Somos Tesoro project first came to her village of Puerto Jobo, she often saw children working after school under the hot sun in streams with their bateas, searching for gold. Today, those bateas—the shallow wooden pans used to capture small gold particles from the streams—lie unused in the corners of their homes. The children now spend more time riding bicycles and playing soccer.

Much has changed for Lizeth and the children of Puerto Jobo. Through the Somos Tesoro project, Lizeth participated in training workshops led by the international nonprofit Pact, during which she learned about financial savings strategies, growing vegetables, and raising farm animals. She also learned about the negative effect of mercury on her health and received safety equipment to protect her while she worked in the artisanal gold mines. She even gained new skills; together with 19 other families, Lizeth participates in the pilot fish-farming project, which has raised 23,000 fish to date. Sharing the good news, Lizeth said, “Every day a group of us goes to the [fish] pool to feed them; we are happy to go. We have learned to work better as a team, to be more united. I am happy!”

From 2013–2018, USDOL provided $9.5 million in funding to PACT, along with Alianza por la Minería Responsable, Fondo Acción, and Fundación Mi Sangre to implement the Somos Tesoro project, which to date has directly benefitted 4,300 households and 13,000 children and adolescents. The Somos Tesoro project in Colombia takes a holistic approach that has proven effective in reducing child labor. The project raises awareness of child rights and the consequences of working at an early age. In addition, the project supports programs to increase food security and financial savings and educate families on safe gold mining practices. The project is also helping individuals build income to supplement artisanal mining wages and increasing support for education. This holistic approach has contributed to reducing child labor. When asked whether this trend will continue, Puerto Jobo’s community leader, Jose Solano, says it best: “In Puerto Jobo, we don’t want to see our children working anymore.” Those bateas will remain in the corners of their homes, unused by the children of Puerto Jobo.

2017 Regional Outlook

3.3 million children ages 5-17 are engaged in child labor

12 countries

Meaningful Efforts

- Increased training for government officials and stakeholders on the worst forms of child labor, particularly child trafficking.
- Increased efforts to raise awareness about child labor and child trafficking.
- Improved legal frameworks on child labor.

In the Middle East and North Africa, 3.3 million children are engaged in child labor, 3.4 percent of all children in the region.<sup>(31)</sup> Figure 16 provides an overview of the regional outlook. Children in the region engage in the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation and armed conflict. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture and street work. In Iraq and Yemen, various armed groups recruited and used children in combat operations, and armed groups recruited child soldiers in Lebanon for deployment in Syria. Conflicts in the region also led to major population displacements, which increased the vulnerability to child labor of children among refugee populations and internally displaced persons.

Challenges and Existing Gaps

- Recruitment of children by armed groups for combat continues.
- Insufficient programs exist to address the extent of child labor, particularly in sectors where child labor is most prevalent.
- Barriers to education exist for children from vulnerable groups, including girls.

Across the region, countries made meaningful efforts to address child labor through initiatives to strengthen their legal frameworks, increase training for government officials, and raise public awareness. Morocco passed two decrees that prohibit certain activities for child domestic workers, and Tunisia passed a law to improve educational requirements for children who have dropped out of school. Police officers, prosecutors, judges, and civil society and media professionals in Algeria, Bahrain, Egypt, Lebanon, Oman, and Tunisia also received training on human trafficking, including victim identification and protection. Algeria and Jordan aired television and radio programs on child labor, Lebanon released a practitioner's guide on child labor in agriculture, Morocco conducted an informational workshop on

Number of Countries in the Middle East & North Africa that Undertook Meaningful Efforts to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor in Relevant Areas

domestic work, Oman launched its first public awareness campaign on human trafficking, and Tunisia developed a training manual on its anti-trafficking law.

Despite these commendable efforts, social programs were insufficient to address the most prevalent child labor sectors. For instance, Iraq lacked programs to demobilize and reintegrate child soldiers or to support children engaged in commercial sexual exploitation, while Jordan lacked programs to assist children working in agriculture, construction, or street vending. Available services in Yemen are inadequate to address the needs of demobilized child soldiers or children removed from fishing or commercial sexual exploitation, and in Egypt, many children engaged in commercial sexual exploitation or quarrying limestone do not receive sufficient support.

Significant barriers to education, such as lack of schools and school-related costs, drove many children into workplaces during the year. In Jordan, Lebanon, and Morocco, the cost of transportation, uniforms, and school supplies kept children from attending school, while Iraq lacked a sufficient number of educational facilities. In the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, attacks on schools, violence, military operations, delays at checkpoints, and school closures also led to a drop in children’s enrollment rates. Girls, in particular, faced difficulties accessing education due to families’ concerns about their security and well-being. In Egypt, approximately 600,000 girls were out of school in 2017 because of the long distances to school, harassment and violence at and on the way to school, lack of hygiene facilities, and cultural barriers. In 2017, approximately 100,000 students, including a disproportionate number of girls, dropped out of schools in Tunisia, often as a result of physical violence. USDOL seeks to help young girls overcome these challenges. From 2013–2017, USDOL’s Promise Pathways project provided $5 million in funding to Creative Associates International to establish programs that empowered girls to pursue their educational and career goals. (See project description in Box 11 on page 48.)

Promise Pathways: Reducing Child Labor through Viable Paths in Education and Decent Work

Hayat's Story Hayat was in the sixth grade when she dropped out of school to help take care of her mother, sick father, and four brothers, one of whom was suffering from cancer. But with little education or training, she found that she had few options for a better future.

Now 18 years old, she is a chef at a top-ranked restaurant in Marrakech, where she also completed an internship. This transformation in Hayat's life—from vulnerable and out-of-school to skilled and employed—is due to the Promise Pathways project, funded by USDOL and implemented by Creative Associates International.

"When Promise Pathways reached out to me, I benefited from many things: studying baking and pastries, medical care for me and my family, and getting an ID card and a business card"

The project provided Hayat with vocational training and the opportunity for a safe and fulfilling career. It also gave her the psychosocial support needed to chart a new course for her future. According to her fellow chefs and the restaurant manager, Hayat is a star employee. She is confident and optimistic about the road ahead.

"Because of this project, my life has changed and I am at a happy place now."

—Hayat, Promise Pathways participant

Kaoutar's Story The school bus doesn't travel to 16-year-old Kaoutar's village in the Al Haouz province of Morocco's High Atlas Mountains. But even if it did, her family did not have the money to send her to middle school. Instead, she stayed home, helping her mother tend to the fields, feed the cows, and fetch wood. This was what her father wanted.

"My dad says that school is not for girls, and girls should work at home," Kaoutar said.

But that was before she was connected to the Promise Pathways project, funded by the USDOL and implemented by Creative Associates International. The team from Promise Pathways met with Kaoutar's parents and explained to them the importance of educating their daughter to improve her future.

The project staff encouraged Kaoutar's parents to enroll her in the Aghbalou boarding school in a nearby town, and helped with a scholarship from the project. Although Kaoutar received tutoring, boarding school proved a challenging adjustment and she soon dropped out—but not for long.

"The team of case managers made a special intervention to support me through counseling. This had a very positive impact on me, and I am back to school now and learning!"

Her performance and attendance have significantly improved, which brings her and her mother pride.

"We are proud of the good student I have become, and we appreciate school and the great results it helps girls achieve. I feel now that I am in charge of my future."

Sub-Saharan Africa

2017 Regional Outlook

70 million children ages 5-17 are engaged in child labor

KEY  = 1,000,000 children

Meaningful Efforts

- Adopted and expanded laws that identify hazardous occupations or activities prohibited for children.
- Established new mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor.
- Launched new and expanded existing social programs that aim to increase resources for youth training and development.

In Sub-Saharan Africa, 70 million children, or 22 percent of all children in the region, are engaged in child labor.

Seven countries—Angola, Cote d’Ivoire, Mali, Mauritania, Mozambique, Niger, and Rwanda—strengthened labor protections for children by adopting or amending existing laws or regulations that identify hazardous occupations or activities prohibited for children. Other governments increased their coordination of child labor efforts by establishing new committees or task forces. In 2017, The Gambia’s Department of Social Welfare launched a National Coordination Committee on Child Labor to conduct child labor investigations and streamline the

46 countries

Challenges and Existing Gaps

- Minimum age laws do not apply to all children.
- The number of labor inspectors is insufficient for the size of the countries’ workforces.
- Children, including trafficking victims, are punished for their involvement in the worst forms of child labor.

process for prosecuting child labor perpetrators. Benin’s newly formed Inter-Ministerial Task Force to Combat Trafficking in Persons organized a 2-day workshop to finalize a national anti-trafficking policy, action plan, and data collection guidelines. In addition, Nigeria’s Edo State and 10 of Zimbabwe’s 12 provinces established task forces to address child trafficking.

During the reporting period, several governments increased resources for youth training and development. Cameroon financed the Institute of Childhood Rehabilitation Project, which aims to restore a center in Betamba that provides vocational training to youth. Mauritania worked with the ILO to launch a decent work project for migrant youth in the fishing sector, and Uganda partnered with a local bank to fund a program to reduce youth unemployment through enterprise development, job creation, and business skills training. These initiatives, as well as the USDOL-funded Engaged, Educated and Empowered Ethiopian Youth (E4Y) project in Ethiopia, implemented by World Vision in partnership with the International Rescue Committee and the Center for Creative Leadership (see project description in Box 12), provide youth with training and skills that help them secure decent work opportunities.

In many countries in the region, minimum age laws do not apply to all children. This does not conform to international standards, which require that all children be protected under minimum age work laws. In Botswana, Cabo Verde, Central African Republic, Comoros, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Gabon, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Kenya, Malawi, Mozambique, Niger, Nigeria, São Tomé and Príncipe, and Uganda, minimum age protections do not apply to children outside of formal work relationships. In addition, 85 percent of Sub-Saharan African countries lack a sufficient number of labor inspectors to adequately enforce labor laws. Ghana, for example, had 105 labor inspectors. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Ghana would employ roughly 833 inspectors. Kenya employed only 84 labor inspectors compared with the ILO's technical advice of 1,321 inspectors. Nigeria employed only 888 inspectors compared to the ILO's technical advice of 4,005 inspectors, while Uganda employed 47 inspectors compared with the ILO's technical advice of 500 inspectors and the Republic of the Congo employed 12 inspectors compared with the ILO's technical advice of 137 inspectors.

Many children, including victims of human trafficking, were arrested, detained, and criminally prosecuted for their involvement in the worst forms of child labor during the year. Criminal law enforcement authorities in Nigeria detained children for their or their parent's alleged association with Boko Haram, and many children remained in detention facilities for prolonged periods. The armed forces of the Democratic Republic of the Congo arrested 302 children, many for their alleged association with armed groups, and detained them for periods of up to 1 year in cells with adults, during which time they were interrogated and beaten. Somali officials continued to detain children for alleged associations with non-state armed groups, and more than 30 children were prosecuted and given sentences ranging from 8 years to life imprisonment for association with al-Shabaab.

Number of Countries in Sub-Saharan Africa that Undertook Meaningful Efforts to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor in Relevant Areas

E4Y Project: Engaged, Educated, Empowered Ethiopian Youth

Raised by a single mother, Ferenju Godie had to make a choice no child should have to make: help his mother feed his five siblings or go hungry. He chose to help. At age 12, he cooked and sold pastries on the streets of Chilga in western Ethiopia. He also worked in other people's fields as a day laborer, earning a little money to help feed his family and buy school supplies.

Ferenju worked for more than 10 hours a day, including at night. When he was able to make it to school, he found himself exhausted and perpetually worried about making ends meet. Fortunately, Ferenju learned about USDOL's E4Y project and its efforts to help young people like him move out of the worst forms of child labor and back into school. He seized the opportunity. The project provided him with books, school supplies, and a uniform, which allowed him to quit working and focus on his studies. The project also supported Ferenju's mother with livelihood services and business development training so that she could support all of her children. Liberated from work, Ferenju is now focused on his future. He dreams of becoming a doctor and lifting his family out of poverty.

The U.S. Experience

“The Department vigorously enforces our nation’s laws that protect working Americans. Fully enforcing the laws deters bad actors from willfully and repeatedly ignoring their responsibilities under the law. This makes American workplaces safer.”

—Secretary of Labor Alexander Acosta

The United States remains strongly committed to the elimination of the worst forms of child labor, and showed this commitment when it ratified ILO Convention 182 on the Worst Forms of Child Labor in 1999. The U.S. Department of Labor (USDOL) is the sole federal agency that monitors child labor and enforces child labor laws. For the past 80 years, the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) has governed the permissible employment of child workers. The FLSA’s child labor provisions are designed to protect the educational opportunities of youth and prohibit their employment in jobs that are detrimental to their health and safety. The FLSA and its implementing regulations generally restrict the hours and times of day that youth under age 16 can work and lists hazardous occupations too dangerous for young workers to perform. USDOL’s Wage and Hour Division (WHD) gives the highest priority to the enforcement of FLSA’s child labor provisions.

Protecting the health and safety of young workers, while helping them enjoy positive work experiences, remains a high priority for several other agencies within USDOL. The Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) enforces the Occupational Safety and Health Act and related regulations, which ensure workplace safety for all employees, regardless of age. The Office of Disability Employment Policy (ODEP) works to improve transition outcomes for youth and young adults with disabilities toward successful employment and adulthood, and the Department’s YouthRules! initiative seeks to promote positive, safe work experiences for young workers. The Employment and Training Administration (ETA) also sponsors many programs to provide training opportunities and job placement assistance for America’s youth. In addition, the Bureau of Labor Statistics, which serves as a statistical resource to USDOL, gathers statistics on various subjects, including those related to child labor.

The Federal Minimum Ages for Work

The FLSA and its implementing regulations—

- Set a minimum age of 14 for most employment in non-hazardous, non-agricultural industries, limits the times of day and the number of hours that 14- and 15-year-olds may work, and limits the tasks that they may perform.
- Establish a minimum age of 18 for employment in occupations governed by the Department’s 17 non-agricultural Hazardous Occupations Orders (HOs).
- Provide different standards for agricultural employment. For example, the FLSA does not restrict the type of work that 16- and 17-year-olds are permitted to perform in agricultural employment. The FLSA also permits 12- and 13-year-olds, with parental approval, to work outside of school hours in nonhazardous agricultural employment.
- Provide exceptions from some or all of these child labor rules for youth who are employed by their parents or persons standing in place of their parents in both agricultural and nonagricultural work. The statute also includes exceptions from the child labor rules for specific types of work, such as newspaper delivery and performing in theatrical productions.

There were 1,747,000 youth ages 16 to 17 employed in the United States in 2016, and 2,237,000 employed in 2017.<sup>(33)</sup> Despite the restrictions and limitations placed on their work, in 2016, the most recent year for which data are available, there were 17 fatal occupational injuries among youth ages 16 to 17, and 13 fatal occupational injuries among youth below age 16 in the United States.<sup>(34)</sup>

“We urge employers to avail themselves of the resources we provide to show them how to comply with federal pay and child labor laws. Employment opportunities for minors must never come at the expense of their safety.”

—Wage and Hour Philadelphia District Director James Cain

WHD looks for employer compliance with the FLSA's child labor provisions in every investigation it conducts. In 2017, WHD found that Stoltzfus Structures, a Pennsylvania manufacturing company, violated FLSA child labor provisions when it employed a 16-year-old to operate a table saw with a circular blade, which resulted in a serious injury, and six other 16-year-olds to operate a pneumatic-powered staple gun and a battery-operated drill. The company also employed three 15-year-olds to perform manufacturing duties that are prohibited for 14- and 15-year-olds. Because of these child labor violations, the company was ordered to pay a penalty of $30,800.<sup>(35)</sup>

In 2018, WHD also determined that McDonalds' franchisee, S&P Enterprises Inc., based in New York, violated FLSA requirements that limit the number of hours and times of day that employees under age 16 engaged in nonagricultural work may legally work while school is in session. The employer allowed minors ages 14 and 15 to work after 7:00 p.m. during the school year, more than 3 hours on a school day, more than 8 hours on a non-school day, or more than 18 hours during a school week, exceeding the FLSA's limits. S&P Enterprises Inc. paid $8,829 in penalties to resolve the child labor violations.<sup>(36)</sup>

“Child labor laws protect the educational opportunities of minors, and ensure that their employment does not come at the expense of their health or well-being. . . . Child labor violations can occur when front-line supervisors do not comply with the law’s requirements, and fail to monitor minor employees’ hours.”

—Wage and Hour Northern New Jersey District Director John Warner

WHD’s Outreach and Education Efforts to Prevent Child Labor in Agriculture and Other Sectors

WHD conducts extensive outreach and education on child labor to workers’ and employers’ organizations in the agriculture sector. At the national level, WHD provides training and information to organizations such as Farm Worker Justice and National Partnership of Farmworker and Rural Organizations (MAFO). At the state and local levels, WHD works with a variety of stakeholders, including employers’ organizations, unions, state governments, and NGOs, to enforce federal child labor laws. In response to reports of children working in tobacco fields, WHD works with the industry to improve compliance with labor laws and conditions for workers. This includes working with the Farm Labor Practices Group (FLPG), a tobacco industry stakeholder organization comprising manufacturers, growers, and worker representatives. The FLPG has recognized the importance of maintaining compliance with child labor laws in the industry and has taken steps to improve compliance levels industry-wide. In addition, large tobacco manufacturers are now self-monitoring or they contract with third parties to monitor labor law compliance among their suppliers.

WHD also maintains the YouthRules! website at <https://www.youthrules.gov/>, a child labor information portal that seeks to engage teenage workers through a user-friendly interface, rich multimedia and social media content, and a Young Worker Toolkit of teen-friendly resources.<sup>(37)</sup> The site offers links to compliance assistance materials for employers, parents, and educators. It also links to helpful worker resources, including information on filing complaints, federal and state child labor laws, federal and state labor offices, and other USDOL and government sites with information for children and young workers. WHD maintains a toll-free helpline (1-866-4US-WAGE or 1-866-487-9243) that provides information about child labor laws.

Career and Technical Education for Youth

USDOL’s Employment and Training Administration’s (ETA) Office of Apprenticeship (OA) oversees the Registered Apprenticeship System in the United States. Apprenticeship is a proven earn-while-you-learn strategy that helps meet industry needs and equips workers with skills to obtain vacant, high-paying jobs. Consistent with the President’s June 15, 2017 Executive Order, Expanding Apprenticeships in America, USDOL is developing a framework for industry-recognized apprenticeships that is more flexible and responsive to market needs and more attractive to American job creators.

The Workforce Innovation and Opportunity Act (WIOA) also provides generous funds to promote youth employment, including its youth formula program, YouthBuild, Job Corps, and Reentry Employment Opportunities (REO). These programs help youth who face barriers to employment, including out-of-school youth and those involved with the justice system, by providing them with services that prepare them for success, such as work-readiness skills and opportunities to gain industry-driven credentials. For example, the WIOA’s youth formula program allocates funds to serve eligible youth ages 14 to 24 who face barriers to education, training, and employment. Eddie Colquitt, a youth from Michigan, applied for and received assistance through this program to complete his General Education Diploma (GED). After obtaining his GED, he was able to work in the clothing industry as a Social Media Manager.<sup>(38)</sup>

"[The WIOA Youth Program] really gave me a lot of great opportunities that I would not have had without it. It helped me to work in the clothing industry and gain lots of great experience."

—Eddie Colquitt, Michigan WIOA program participant

YouthBuild and Job Corps also help low-income, unemployed, young Americans continue their education, gain the skills they need for employment, and become leaders in their communities. YouthBuild helped Alexis Bach, a youth from the heart of the Appalachian Mountains in Kentucky, to pursue her dream of becoming a registered nurse. After dropping out of high school, YouthBuild helped her get a job, obtain her GED, and later enroll in college while serving her community as a YouthBuild AmeriCorps member.<sup>(39)</sup> Arielle Gonzalez from Minnesota did not have money for college, so she enrolled in Job Corps after it offered her a 9-month training program. Afterwards, Arielle applied for a position at the U.S. Forest Service-Ottawa National Forest and was hired. She currently serves the public in the Forest headquarters as an office automation clerk.<sup>(40)</sup>

---

"I'm so thankful for Job Corps and I feel like I need to give back; that's how much it changed my life. I tell everybody about Job Corps. . . . Even my parents didn't see my success coming. They've never been so proud."

How to Read a Country Profile

- Country Overview. Each country profile begins with an overview for 2017 in a single paragraph, beginning with a statement identifying the assessment level assigned to the country for 2017. Following the statement of assessment, the paragraph offers a summary of key findings in the country profile. The narrative includes any meaningful efforts taken by a government, defined as efforts in key areas where the government advanced its commitments to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The narrative also notes the most common or egregious forms of child labor found in the country and highlights areas in which key gaps in government efforts remain.

- Section I: Prevalence and Sectoral Distribution of Child Labor The first section of each country profile attempts to provide, to the extent that information is available, a comprehensive picture of the worst forms of child labor in the country.

- Table 1, Statistics on Children's Work and Education, contains at least four variables: percentage of working children, school attendance rate, percentage of children combining work and school, and primary completion rate. The majority of the country profiles have data for at least one of these variables. A smaller set of profiles contain data on children's work by sector. The age and methodologies of the original surveys that provide the underlying data vary, and in some cases, the surveys may not reflect the true magnitude of the child labor problem in a country. For some countries, data are unavailable from the sources used in this report.

- Table 2, Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity, groups types of children's work by sector, using categories established by the ILO and Understanding Children's Work for national child labor surveys (Agriculture, Industry, and Services), as well as a category intended to capture work understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3 (a)–(c) of ILO C. 182, referred to by the report as "Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor." Sectors and specific activities performed by children are sorted into these categories according to internationally accepted industry and occupational codes.

- The first footnote identifies sectors or activities determined to be hazardous by national law or regulation as understood under Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182, and the second footnote provides the definition of "Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor."

- The table is followed by a narrative highlighting additional sector-specific information and social, economic, or political issues that affect the prevalence of child labor, such as barriers to accessing education, or major socioeconomic shocks to the country that may inhibit the government's ability to address child labor, such as a natural disaster or armed conflict.

Colombia

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

- In 2017, Colombia made a significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government approved the National Policy to Prevent and Eliminate Child Labor and Protect the Young Worker and a roadmap to prevent and eliminate child labor in mining. The government also updated its list of hazardous occupations for children, piloted the Model for Identification of Child Labor Risks, and devoted additional resources to its Labor Inspectorate. Under the peace accord signed with the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia, the government reintegrated over 130 recovered child soldiers in 2017. In addition, the government raised awareness of commercial sexual exploitation of children among indigenous communities and issued guidance to labor inspectors, including by providing strategies and protocols related to child labor prevention and detection. However, children in Colombia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and illicit activities, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Additionally, the government does not employ a sufficient number of labor inspectors.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Colombia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and illicit activities, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1; 2) The government publishes annual statistics on children's work from its National Household Survey. (3) However, activities and ages are not sufficiently specified in this data to determine child labor rates. (3; 4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Colombia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	4.2 (356,867)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	94.4
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	4.5
Primary Completion Rate (%)		101.4

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of coffee,† sugarcane,† and unrefined brown sugar (panela)† (7; 8; 9)
	Animal husbandry,† hunting,† and fishing,† activities unknown (10; 11; 9)
Industry	Mining coal,† emeralds,† gold,† tungsten,† coltan,† and clay† (12; 13; 14; 15; 9)
	Producing bricks† (15)
	Construction,† activities unknown (16)
	Cutting and transporting lumber;† and creating artisanal woodwork such as handicrafts and decorative items (17; 11)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

- Commercial sexual exploitation of children occurs more often in private homes rented online than in commercial establishments. (9) In Bucaramanga, child victims of commercial sexual exploitation are allegedly recruited in schools by other students. (34) In mining areas, trafficking of children for forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation is widespread. (35) In Cartagena, children are forced by illegal armed groups and criminal organizations to commit homicides. (36)

The government reports that the recruitment and use of children by illegal armed groups has declined by 60 percent since the government and the FARC signed a peace accord in 2016. However, the National Liberation Army, Popular Liberation Army, and non-ideological criminal organizations such as the Gulf Clan continued to recruit children in 2017. (9)

Section II: Legal Framework for Child Labor The second section indicates whether a country has ratified key international instruments related to child labor and assesses whether a country's legal framework meets international standards. This section begins with a statement about the extent to which the government has ratified key international conventions concerning child labor.

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor, lists the relevant UN conventions concerning child labor. A checkmark indicates the country's ratification, acceptance, accession, or succession to the instrument, considering that these actions have the same practical legal effect regarding the substantive obligations of the instruments as ratification. If other relevant international instruments, beyond those listed in the table, were ratified during the reporting period, this may be recognized in a short narrative following the table.

A statement above Table 4, Laws and Regulations on Child Labor, indicates whether the government's laws and regulations related to child labor meet ILO Conventions 138 and 182 or whether gaps exist in the legal framework to adequately protect children from child labor.

Table 4 lists each of the relevant legal standards and notes which laws meet and do not meet international standards. Table 4 footnotes identify if a government does not use conscription for military service, if a government does not have a standing military, and whether an age is calculated based on available information.

The table is followed by a narrative describing any relevant laws the government enacted, or advanced to a significant step in the legislative process during the reporting period. If the government failed to take action on an existing draft bill that would fill a gap in the legal framework related to child labor, this also may be noted. The narrative also discusses why existing laws do not meet international standards.

Section III: Enforcement of Laws on Child Labor The third section describes the roles of government agencies in enforcing laws related to child labor and reports on efforts made during the reporting period. It begins with a statement about whether the government has established institutional mechanisms to enforce laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5), notes whether gaps exist within the authority or operations of ministries responsible for law enforcement, or if enforcement data were missing.

Table 5, Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement, lists the agencies charged with enforcing such laws and identifies each agency's role. A footnote identifies whether an agency responsible for child labor enforcement was created during the reporting period. A subsequent narrative describes gaps in agency responsibilities or new information during the reporting period.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Colombia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government's laws and regulations are in line with relevant international standards (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 35 of the Code on Childhood and Adolescence (41)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 117 of the Code on Childhood and Adolescence (41)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 3, Resolution 1796 (42)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 17 of the Constitution; Articles 141 and 188A of the Penal Code; Article 5 of Resolution 3597 (43; 44; 45)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 17 of the Constitution; Articles 188A–188C of the Penal Code; Article 5 of Resolution 3597 (43; 44; 45)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 213–219B of the Penal Code (45)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 162, 188D, and 384 of the Penal Code; Article 2 of Resolution 3597 (43; 45)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment
State Compulsory	Yes	18	Article 13 of Law 418; Article 2 of Law 548 (46; 47)
State Voluntary	Yes	18	Article 13 of Law 418; Article 2 of Law 548 (46; 47)
Non-state	Yes	18	Article 162 of Law 599; Article 20 of Law 1098; Article 14 of Law 418 (41; 45; 46)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	18	Decision C-376/10 of the Colombian Constitutional Court (48)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 1 of Decree 4807 (49)

In 2018, the Ministry of Labor (MOL) issued a Resolution updating its list of hazardous occupations prohibited for children, including by capping domestic work by children in the child's own home at 15 hours a week. (42) Colombian law also provides that children ages 15 to 17 may work if they have official authorization. The Resolution states that authorization for these children to work may be revoked if minimum guarantees protecting health, social security, education, and acceptable work conditions are not met. (42)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor's (MOL) Inspection, Monitoring, Control, and Territorial Management Department	Receive complaints of labor law violations and conduct labor inspections, including inspections to verify labor conditions for adolescent workers and compliance with other child labor provisions. Oversee the Internal Working Group on Child Labor Eradication. (50) Operate the Integrated Registration and Information System for Child Labor (SIRITI), a child labor monitoring system that identifies children engaged in or at risk of child labor. (1; 51) In 2017, the government provided training on SIRITI, reaching 10 departments, 122 municipalities, and 342 trainees. (52)
National Police	Investigate cases of commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking. (51)
Attorney General's Office	Investigate and prosecute cases of child recruitment for armed conflict, commercial sexual exploitation, forced labor, and human trafficking. (1; 41) Oversee the Articulation Group for Combating Trafficking in Persons, which includes four prosecutors that focus on investigating and prosecuting cross-border human trafficking and other related crimes. (53)
National Training Service (SENA)	Collect fines imposed by the MOL for labor law violations. (54)

● Table 6 and Table 7 provide data on labor law and criminal law enforcement efforts, respectively, in 2016 and 2017.

● Table 6, Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor, provides information on labor law enforcement data, including information about the Labor Inspectorate's financial and human resources; authority to conduct inspections and assess penalties; and actions and mechanisms to enforce labor laws, including those related to child labor.

● Table 7, Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor, provides information on criminal law enforcement data, including information about actions and mechanisms to enforce laws related to the worst forms of child labor.

● Footnotes under each table identify whether the government made enforcement information publicly available and if the data included in the tables fall outside of the calendar year. A narrative follows each of these tables with more specific information on government mechanisms and efforts, and includes findings in which ILAB has concluded that government efforts fall short.

● Section IV: Coordination of Government Efforts on Child Labor The fourth section provides information on institutions charged with coordinating efforts related to child labor, including its worst forms. It begins with a statement indicating whether the government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, and if any gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor.

● Table 8, Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor, lists the country's key coordinating bodies, their composition, if known, and their respective mandates, as well as their efforts during the reporting period. A footnote states whether a mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period. A subsequent narrative may include findings on gaps in their efforts.

● Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Colombia took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MOL that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including human resource allocation and labor inspector training.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the activities of the Inter-sectorial Commission for the Prevention of the Recruitment and Use of Children by Illegal Armed Groups and the Work Group to Assess Acceptable Activities for Adolescent Work in Coffee, Cotton, Sugar, and Rice.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
Interagency Committee for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (CIETI)	Coordinate efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor. Chaired by the MOL, includes 13 government agencies and representatives from trade unions, business associations, and civil society organizations. (7) Oversee 32 department-level CIETIs throughout the country, each comprising municipal-level committees. (61) In 2017, the government took actions to reform the CIETI's structure by updating the entities and sectors that should be represented in the committees, detailing their roles and responsibilities, and defining the guidelines for operation at national and local levels. (62)
Colombian Institute for Family Well-Being (ICBF)	Operate 40 mobile units to coordinate government actions to protect children's rights, including child labor. Support demobilized child soldiers by strengthening family networks and increasing access to health services, food, education, and shelter. (17) Serve as Administrator of the Fund Against Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents. (63) Process child labor complaints, operate hotlines to report child labor cases, and provide social services to children engaged in or at risk of child labor. (1; 64; 65) Between January and August 2017, provided services to 209 children registered as victims of commercial sexual exploitation. (66)
ICBF's National System of Family Well-Being	Promote interagency coordination to protect children's rights, including rights related to child labor. (7) Design, implement, monitor, and evaluate policies that affect children from early childhood to adolescence. Comprises the offices of the President and Vice President, 15 government ministries, and other government agencies. In 2017, reviewed the first draft of the Childhood and Adolescence Policy and provided capacity-building activities to 531 government officials. (62; 9)

Section V: Government Policies on Child Labor

The fifth section describes a country's policies and plans to combat child labor and development policies that explicitly incorporate the issue of child labor. It begins with a statement indicating whether the government has established policies related to child labor, and if policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor.

Table 9, Key Policies Related to Child Labor, lists the country's key policies, providing a description of each policy's objectives and any developments in implementation that occurred during the reporting period. The footnote identifies policies that were approved during the reporting period and notes small-scale policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor.

The narrative following the table notes includes findings related to whether existing policies sufficiently address child labor issues in the country.

Section VI: Social Programs to Address Child Labor

The sixth section describes social programs launched or implemented during the reporting period that focus on child labor and programs that address poverty, education, and other related matters that could have a beneficial effect on child labor. It begins with a statement as to whether the government funded or participated in social programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, and whether gaps exist in these social programs.

Table 10, Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor, lists the country's key social programs and a description, including its activities and accomplishments, to the extent known, during the reporting period. Where possible, programs are hyperlinked to project websites for additional information. Footnotes identify social programs that are funded by the government or were launched during the reporting period and whether the government had small-scale social programs with the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor.

The narrative following the tables may also include an analysis of the extent to which social programs were sufficient to address the scope of the problem or covered the key sectors in which children are known to work in the country.

Section VII: Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor

The last section of each country profile (Table 11) is a set of suggested actions for the country to consider taking in order to advance the elimination of child labor. These suggested actions correspond directly to findings made in each of the report's sections regarding gaps in the country's laws and regulations, enforcement, coordination, policies, and social programs. They serve as a roadmap for efforts that individual countries can follow to more fully address child labor. Next to each suggested action is the years in which it has appeared in the report, followed by every year the action was included without being remedied.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor‡

Policy	Description
National Policy to Prevent and Eliminate Child Labor and Protect the Young Worker (2017–2027) †	Aims to focus agricultural policy on child labor eradication, develop child labor prevention strategies, improve the quality and coverage of social mobility and child protection services for vulnerable children, protect adolescent workers from hazardous work, create strategies to address child labor in domestic work, strengthen institutions to improve attention on children at risk for child labor, and establish evaluation and monitoring mechanisms to assess progress of public policies. (73)
Roadmap for the Restoration of Rights, Assistance, and Reparation for Children and Adolescent Victims of the Armed Conflict	Establishes the protocols for assisting child victims of the armed conflict. Approved in 2016 and implemented through inter-institutional mechanisms and technical assistance in various departments in 2017. (9; 80)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (7; 61; 81; 82; 83)

- In 2017, the ICBF presented a draft of the National Policy for Children and Adolescents to relevant government entities working on child protection issues and established nine working groups to gather information to develop the Public Policy for the Prevention and Eradication of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents. (62; 55) At the IV Global Conference on the Sustained Eradication of Child Labor held in Buenos Aires, Argentina, the government pledged to develop local-level strategies to address the needs of children vulnerable to child labor within the framework of the National Policy to Prevent and Eliminate Child Labor and Protect the Young Worker. (84)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, which cover the main sectors where child labor has been identified in the country (Table 10).

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor‡

Program	Description
Child Labor in Mining Prevention Program ( Prevenir es Mejor ) †	Secretariat of Mining and Office of Infancy, Adolescence, and Youth program in Antioquia that provided 438 children with life skills training, legal and psychological support, and recreational activities to prevent and eradicate child labor in the mining sector. (85)
Projects Addressing Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children †	Eyes Everywhere ( Ojos en Todas Partes ), a public awareness campaign, aims to prevent the commercial sexual exploitation of children in the tourism sector. Led by the Ministry of Commerce, Industry, and Tourism, and implemented in coordination with the ICBF and the National Tourism Fund. (1; 86) Sexual Violence – The Importance of the First 72 Hours campaign to train psychosocial teams and other service providers on how to conduct investigations into the commercial sexual exploitation of children and provide assistance to victims. In 2017, the government launched “We Protect,” a web-based tool to collect, monitor, and address complaints of commercial sexual exploitation of children. (87) The government, private sector, and civil society also organized an event to promote the treatment of “child pornography” as “sexual exploitation of children.” (88; 87; 89) In 2017, the project I Am the Wall! ( La Muralla Soy Yo! ) created an award to recognize efforts in combatting the commercial sexual exploitation of children in tourism. (90; 91)

- To address child labor in the mining sector, the Ministry of Mines and ICBF signed a cooperative agreement and the government developed a Roadmap for the Prevention and Elimination of Child Labor in Mining. (71; 72) Under this agreement, the government assisted 106 families, including 210 children at risk of child labor. (9) In addition, under the Regional Initiative Latin America and the Caribbean Free of Child Labor, the MOL Municipality of Cali and Government of Valle del Cauca Department

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Colombia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure that all labor inspectors have sufficient resources to perform inspections.	2009 – 2017
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2009 – 2017
	Publish information on labor law enforcement efforts, including the total number of labor inspectors and penalties imposed that were collected for child labor violations.	2009 – 2017
	Ensure that all adolescents who work in allowed sectors have received official authorization.	2015 – 2017
	Publish information on the number of violations found related to the worst forms of child labor and initial training for new labor inspectors and criminal investigators.	2014 – 2017
Coordination	Provide sufficient resources to criminal law enforcement officials to enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor.	2014 – 2017
	Ensure that information is exchanged among coordinating bodies at the national and regional levels.	2012 – 2017
Social Programs	Ensure that children are protected from armed conflict while at school.	2013 – 2017
	Expand efforts to improve access to education for all children, particularly for indigenous and Afro-Colombian children, including by improving transportation infrastructure, and building more schools in rural areas.	2013 – 2017

Definitions Related to Child Labor

Definitions related to child labor are guided by ILO C. 138 on Minimum Age and ILO C. 182 on Worst Forms of Child Labor. ILO's Resolution Concerning Statistics on Child Labor, developed during the 18th Conference of Labor Statisticians, provides the international framework for measuring children's work. Please see Appendix 4 for additional definitions.

Working Children

Working children are those engaged in any economic activity for at least 1 hour during the reference period. Economic activity includes market production and certain types of non-market production, principally the production of goods and services for their families' use. The work children perform may be in the formal or informal economy, inside or outside family settings, whether paid or unpaid. This includes children working in domestic service outside the child's own household for an employer, paid or unpaid.<sup>(42; 43)</sup>

Child Labor

Children in child labor are a subset of working children. Child labor includes work below the minimum age, as established in national legislation excluding permissible light work, the worst forms of child labor, and hazardous unpaid household services. Child labor is a narrower concept than children in work because child labor excludes children who work only a few hours a week in permitted light work and those who are above the minimum age who engage in work not classified as a worst form of child labor.<sup>(42; 44)</sup>

Forced Child Labor

Forced labor, under international standards, is defined as all work or service for which the worker does not offer himself voluntarily and which is exacted from any person under the menace of any penalty for its non-performance.<sup>(45)</sup> Forced labor includes work provided or obtained by force, fraud, or coercion, including (a) by threat of serious harm to, or physical restraint against, any person; (b) by means of any scheme, plan, or pattern intended to cause the person to believe that, if the person did not perform such labor or services, that person or another person would suffer serious harm or physical restraint; or (c) by means of the abuse or threatened abuse of law or the legal process.<sup>(46)</sup> Forced labor occurs during unfree recruitment, work or life under duress, or the inability to leave the employer.<sup>(47)</sup>

Forced child labor is a categorical worst form of child labor under ILO C. 182.<sup>(5)</sup> Children older than the minimum age for work are in forced child labor if work is involuntary and the children or their parents are under the menace of threat or penalty. For children younger than the minimum age, voluntariness does not need to be established because children cannot legally consent to work. All children who are made to work as a result of parental forced labor are engaged in forced child labor.<sup>(47)</sup>

Worst Forms of Child Labor

Worst forms of child labor refers to activities described and as understood in ILO C. 182: Worst Forms of Child Labor, 1999.<sup>(5)</sup> Under Article 3 of the Convention, the worst forms of child labor comprise the following activities:

- (a) All forms of slavery or practices similar to slavery, such as the sale and trafficking of children, debt bondage and serfdom, and forced or compulsory labor, including forced or compulsory recruitment of children for use in armed conflict;
- (b) The use, procuring, or offering of a child for prostitution, for the production of pornography, or for pornographic purposes;
- (c) The use, procuring, or offering of a child for illicit activities, in particular for the production and trafficking of drugs as defined in the relevant international treaties; and
- (d) Work which, by its nature or the circumstances in which it is carried out, is likely to harm the health, safety, or morals of children.

Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor

For this report, categorical worst forms of child labor refers to child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182. This category does not include the worst forms of child labor identified under Article 3(d) "hazardous work." See also "ILO C. 182: Worst Forms of Child Labor, 1999."<sup>(5)</sup>

Hazardous Work

Hazardous work refers to the worst form of child labor identified in ILO C. 182 Article 3(d), "work which, by its nature or the circumstances in which it is carried out, is likely to harm the health, safety, or morals of children." ILO C. 182 Article 4 directs countries to consult with employers and workers to identify the types of hazardous work that should be prohibited by law or regulation. Hazardous work lists may describe specific activities, occupations, or industries.<sup>(43)</sup>

ILO Conventions Related to Child Labor

The International Labor Organization (ILO) brings together governments, employers, and worker representatives of member states to establish international labor standards, develop policies, and implement programs to advance decent work.<sup>(48)</sup> International labor standards are legal instruments drawn up by these ILO constituents that set out basic principles and rights at work. They take the form of either Conventions or Recommendations. Conventions are international treaties that are legally binding on ratifying member states. Ratifying countries commit themselves to applying the Convention in national law and practice and reporting on its application at regular intervals. The following paragraphs describe key ILO Conventions related to child labor and the minimum ages set by countries related to these Conventions.

ILO Convention 138: Minimum Age for Admission to Employment, 1973

ILO C. 138 serves as the principal ILO standard on child labor. Under Article 2(3) of ILO C. 138, the minimum age of admission into employment or work in any occupation “shall not be less than the age of completion of compulsory schooling, and, in any case, shall not be less than fifteen.” Countries whose economy and educational facilities are insufficiently developed may initially specify a minimum legal working age of 14 when ratifying the Convention. In addition, Article 7(1) says that national laws or regulations may permit the employment or work of children ages 13 to 15 years on light work. Countries that specify a minimum legal working age of 14 may permit light work for children ages 12 to 14.<sup>(49)</sup>

ILO Convention 182: Worst Forms of Child Labor, 1999

ILO C. 182 defines the worst forms of child labor and requires countries to criminally prohibit them for children under age 18. It also commits ratifying nations to take immediate action to secure the prohibition and elimination of the worst forms of child labor. Among other actions, ILO C. 182 requires ratifying nations to remove children from the worst forms of child labor and provide them with rehabilitation, social reintegration, and access to free basic education and vocational training; consult with employer and worker organizations to create appropriate mechanisms to monitor implementation of the Convention; take into account the special vulnerability of girls; and provide assistance and cooperate with efforts of other members to implement the Convention.<sup>(5)</sup>

ILO Convention 29: Forced Labor, 1930

ILO C. 29 is the primary Convention on forced labor. It includes some exceptions for compulsory military service, work as part of normal civic obligations, work as a consequence of convictions, working during emergencies, and minor community services.<sup>(45)</sup>

ILO Convention 105: Abolition of Forced Labor Convention, 1957

ILO C. 105 further clarifies ILO C. 29 as it relates to forced or compulsory labor as a means of political coercion or education, or as a punishment for holding or expressing political views or views ideologically opposed to the established political, social, or economic system; as a method of mobilizing and using labor for economic development; as a means of labor discipline; as a punishment for having participated in strikes; and as a means of racial, social, national, or religious discrimination.<sup>(50)</sup>

Protocol of 2014 to the Forced Labor Convention, 1930

The Forced Labor Protocol requires ratifying countries to take effective measures to prevent and eliminate forced and compulsory labor, to sanction perpetrators, and to provide protections and appropriate remedies, such as compensation. It also requires ratifying countries to develop a national policy and plan of action to address forced or compulsory labor in consultation with employers’ and workers’ organizations.<sup>(51)</sup>

About the Iqbal Masih Award

The United States Congress established the Iqbal Masih Award for the Elimination of Child Labor in 2008 to recognize exceptional efforts by an individual, company, organization, or national government to end the worst forms of child labor.

The award reflects the spirit of Iqbal Masih, a Pakistani child sold into bonded labor as a carpet weaver at age 4. He escaped his servitude at age 10 and became an outspoken advocate of children's rights, drawing international attention to his fight against child labor. Masih was killed in Pakistan at age 13 in 1995.

Further information about the Iqbal Masih Award and USDOL's efforts to combat child labor, is available on the USDOL website at www.dol.gov/ilab.

2017 Iqbal Masih Award Recipient: Daphne de Guzman Culanag

In 2017, the Secretary of Labor selected Ms. Daphne de Guzman Culanag to receive the Iqbal Masih Award in recognition of her tireless efforts to protect children from exploitation, raise awareness, and inspire others in the fight against child labor in the Philippines. Known affectionately as Ate Daphne (Big Sister Daphne) in the Philippine communities where she works, Ms. Culanag has earned this term of respect over more than three decades of activism and leadership in the fight against child labor.

Ms. Culanag's efforts helped change the lives of more than 50,000 children engaged in or at risk of child labor. Her leadership of projects to end child labor in the Philippine sugarcane sector and footwear industry inspired others to continue efforts to eliminate child labor by promoting education opportunities and helping households overcome the need to rely on child labor to meet basic needs.

Ms. Culanag has led the charge to mobilize communities, families, and the Philippine government to commit to transforming the lives of children vulnerable to child labor. Like Iqbal Masih, who escaped after 5 years chained to a carpet loom to travel the world and speak out against child labor, Ms. Culanag has carried her voice to the highest levels of government around the world. She has been an advocate for exploited children and demanded accountability from government officials when their actions were not sufficient to address these abuses. She has worked to improve the legislative framework to protect children against labor exploitation in the Philippines. Her activism has planted seeds of inspiration and local youth and staff she has mentored have gone on to lead efforts in the fight to end exploitative child labor in their own communities and around the globe.

Ms. Culanag is the ninth recipient of this non-monetary award.

In 2017, Afghanistan made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The President signed a new Penal Code, which explicitly prohibits and sets penalties for bacha bazi—a practice involving exploiting boys, often through threats or violence, for social and sexual entertainment. The High Commission for Combating Crimes of Abduction and Human Trafficking carried out 210 awareness-raising campaigns. In addition, the government also rescued nearly 40 children from a madrassa where they were receiving military training from the Taliban. However, children in Afghanistan are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in armed conflict and forced labor in the production of bricks. Bacha bazi exists in all provinces of the country, and boys who are victims of this practice are often treated as criminals rather than as victims. Afghanistan’s Labor Inspectorate is not authorized to impose penalties for child labor violations, and the government lacks sufficient programs to eliminate the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Afghanistan engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in armed conflict and the forced production of bricks. (1; 2; 3; 4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Afghanistan. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	7.5 (673,949)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	41.8
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	4.6
Primary Completion Rate (%)		Unavailable

Primary completion rate was unavailable from UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (5)
 Source for all other data: Understanding Children’s Work Project’s analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 4, 2010-2011. (6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

	Forced labor in the production of bricks and carpets, and in begging, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1; 2; 17; 33; 50; 31; 44)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children are subject to commercial sexual exploitation throughout the country. A remaining concern is the practice of bacha bazi, or boy play, in which men—including police commanders, tribal leaders, warlords, and mafia heads—force boys to provide social and sexual entertainment. (46; 51; 52) In many cases, these boys are dressed in female clothing, used as dancers at parties and ceremonies, and sexually exploited. (46) According to the Afghanistan Independent Human Rights Commission, the practice exists in all provinces of the country. (53) Research has found specific cases in the provinces of Baghlan, Balkh, Faryab, Helmand, Konduz, Takhar, and Uruzgan. (49; 52; 46) A national inquiry conducted in 2014 found that most boys were between the ages of 13 and 16, and that 60 percent of them had been subjected to physical violence, confinement, and threats of death. (46) Some government officials, including members of the Afghan National Police, the Afghan Local Police, and the Afghan Border Police, exploit boys for bacha bazi as well as for work as tea servers or cooks in police camps. (54; 46; 48; 49; 51; 53; 44; 55) A few such cases took place and were documented in 2017. (4; 56; 57) Some local police commanders abduct boys and use them for bacha bazi. (48; 49)

Afghan children are trafficked both domestically and internationally. Afghan boys are used for forced labor in agriculture and construction abroad, and girls tend to be used for commercial sexual exploitation and domestic work in destination countries, primarily Iran and Pakistan. (44) Children were trafficked to settle their family’s debt, including in the production of bricks and illicit drugs. (2; 8; 44) Some Afghan girls are subjected to forced marriage in exchange for money for their families. (56) Reports indicate that girls from Iran, Pakistan, and China are trafficked to Afghanistan for commercial sexual exploitation. (56) Some child laborers are subjected to sexual violence. (20; 35) According to an international organization, there is an emerging trend of forced recruitment of trafficked children into non-state armed groups. (32)

Widespread violence and lack of economic opportunities lead some Afghan children to leave Afghanistan. (58; 59; 60; 61; 62) Some children specifically go to Iran to engage in child labor. (63) According to the UN, some Afghan refugee children in Iran engage in child labor and do not attend school. (32) There are reports that the Iranian Government and the Islamic Revolutionary Guards Corps (IRGC) coerce male Afghan migrants, including young boys, to fight in Syria in IRGC-organized and -commanded militias by threatening them with arrest and deportation to Afghanistan. (44; 56) The Taliban recruited and forced children to attend madrassas in Afghanistan and Pakistan, where they received religious and military training. (56; 57) Some families received cash payments in exchange for sending their children to the Taliban-run schools. (56) Boys, especially those traveling unaccompanied, are particularly vulnerable to trafficking. Some Afghan boys are subjected to sex trafficking in Greece after paying high fees to be smuggled into the country. (44; 64)

Non-state groups, such as the Taliban and the Islamic State in Khorasan Province, recruited children for use in armed conflict, including as combatants and suicide bombers. (40; 4; 32; 3) The UN verified the continued use of children by the government in 2017, including 11 cases of recruitment by the Afghan National Police, 9 by the Afghan Local Police, 1 by Afghan National Border Police, and 1 by the National Directorate of Security. (4; 32; 3) Low birth registration and falsified identity documents contribute to the problem because it makes the determination of a recruit’s age difficult. (65; 66) Observers reported that some officials accepted bribes to produce false identity documents that indicated the recipient boys were more than 18 years old. (44)

In 2016, UNICEF asserted that approximately 3.5 million school-age children are out of school in the country, 75 percent of whom are girls. (32) Barriers to education for children include displacement of populations due to conflict, the use of schools as military bases, attacks on schools, distance from school, school-related fees, lack of security, and lack of documentation. (21) Girls face additional barriers to education including lack of hygiene facilities, shortage of female teachers, and not being allowed by parents to go to school. (8; 67; 68) Schools do not provide sufficient services to children with disabilities. (32) Some nomad, or kuchi, children do not attend school because they travel to tend to livestock. (32) There were more than 445,000 new internally displaced persons during the reporting period. (69) Child labor is particularly prevalent among urban internally displaced persons. (21) In 2017, approximately 467,000 refugee and undocumented Afghans returned to Afghanistan from Iran and 155,000 from Pakistan. (56) The lack of necessary documents for children among displaced and returnee populations is an additional barrier to education. (18) For example, about half of returnee children from Pakistan do not attend school and are also particularly vulnerable to child labor, including debt bondage in brick factories. (50; 70; 71; 72; 32) Some individuals who facilitate repatriation take returnees to brick factories and keep them in debt bondage to repay their transportation costs. (51) Based on NGO reports, some 200,000 child laborers returned with their families from Pakistan and Iran and continued to engage in child labor in Afghanistan. (56)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Afghanistan has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution, and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Afghanistan’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including debt bondage.

In 2017, the President approved a new Penal Code, published in the Official Gazette in May. The Penal Code entered into force in February 2018 and explicitly prohibits and sets penalties for the use of male or transgender children for bacha bazi. (32; 75) However, the new Penal Code does not create criminal penalties for the use of female children engaged in prostitution and therefore it does not meet the international standard on sexual exploitation of children.

In 2016, the government drafted a Comprehensive Child Act that remained under review in 2017. (32; 82)

Afghan law does not sufficiently criminalize forced labor and debt bondage.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor, Social Affairs, Martyrs, and Disabled (MoLSAMD) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Child Protection Action Network (CPAN)	Operates as a coalition of government agencies, NGOs, and community and religious leaders. Receive complaints of child labor, investigate such cases, and refer them to NGO and government shelters that provide social services. (54; 83) Not all provinces have a CPAN. (17; 84) The CPANs' capacity is not uniform or based on need, and the type of intervention depends on members of a particular CPAN and resources available. (31) In 2017, there were 133 CPANs in the country with 4,500 volunteers. (32)
Ministry of Labor, Social Affairs, Martyrs and Disabled (MoLSAMD)	Respond to complaints of child labor, child trafficking, and child sexual exploitation; refer cases to the Attorney General's Office and NGO shelters; and operate a shelter for trafficking victims in Kabul. (66)
Ministry of the Interior	Enforce laws related to child trafficking, the use of children in illicit activities, and child sexual exploitation. (83)
National Directorate of Security	Identify human trafficking victims and refer these cases to the Ministry of the Interior. (85)
Attorney General's Office	Investigate and prosecute human trafficking, abduction, and sexual exploitation cases. (66)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Afghanistan took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of MoLSAMD that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including penalty assessment authorization.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

* The government does not publish this information.

Labor inspectors do not have legal authority to inspect worksites for compliance with child labor laws or impose penalties for non-compliance. (83; 86) However, CPAN, of which MoLSAMD is a component, can respond to complaints of child labor, investigate cases, and issue warnings or refer criminal cases to the Attorney General's Office. A person wishing to file a complaint must specify the legal grounds for labor violations in writing. (87)

In 2017, MoLSAMD had 26 inspector positions, only 12 of which were filled. Of these, 8 were labor inspectors and 4 occupational safety and health inspectors. (32) The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Afghanistan's workforce, which includes more than 7.9 million workers. (88) According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Afghanistan would employ roughly 200 labor inspectors. (83; 89; 90) Government officials, NGOs, and UNICEF acknowledge that the number of labor inspectors is insufficient. (83)

Business owners are not required to allow unannounced inspections. (83) Based on available information, MoLSAMD only inspects businesses that are registered with the Ministry. (32)

During the reporting period, MoLSAMD removed 40 children from an illegal salt mine and enrolled them in school. (32)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Afghanistan took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2017, the Ministry of the Interior employed two officers in each anti-human trafficking unit throughout Afghanistan's 34 provinces, but the units lacked training and resources. (56) Government officials continue to state that they lack equipment and transportation to carry out investigations. (54) During the reporting period, the government detected 10 cases of commercial sexual exploitation of children, which were at different levels of the legal process, but the details are not available. (32)

Individuals who subject boys to bacha bazi were not prosecuted and some government officials contributed to this problem. (52; 44) The Afghanistan Independent Human Rights Commission's 2014 report assessed that most men who engage in bacha bazi paid bribes to, or had relationships with, law enforcement, prosecutors, or judges and that fact practically exempted them from prosecution. (44)

Victims of human trafficking were routinely prosecuted and convicted of crimes. (44) Male victims of child trafficking, especially those engaged in commercial sexual exploitation or armed conflict, were sometimes referred to juvenile detention and rehabilitation facilities, instead of appropriate victim support services. (91; 44; 92) Male child sex trafficking victims, including boys subjected to bacha bazi, were in some cases referred to juvenile rehabilitation centers on criminal charges. (44) The UN noted that some children associated with armed groups were kept in detention centers instead of juvenile rehabilitation centers. (57) The UN reported that some of these children were subjected to torture and ill treatment. (92; 93)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
High Commission for Combating Crimes of Abduction and Human Trafficking	Address human trafficking in general, including child trafficking. Led by the Ministry of Justice; comprises nine ministries and five other entities. (32) In 2017, met regularly and identified 476 victims of human trafficking, although it is unknown how many of them may be children. Also carried out 210 awareness raising campaigns on human trafficking. (56)
Inter-Ministerial Steering Committee on Children and Armed Conflict	Coordinate efforts to eliminate the recruitment and use of child soldiers. Led by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and monitored by the UN and NGOs. (32) Research was unable to determine whether the Inter-Ministerial Steering Committee on Children and Armed Conflict was active during the reporting period.

Although there are these two sectoral mechanisms to coordinate government efforts to combat trafficking in persons and child soldiering, the government has not established an overarching coordination mechanism to address all child labor present in the country, including forced labor, debt bondage, and commercial sexual exploitation of children.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Labor Policy	Includes objectives to eliminate the worst forms of child labor, such as those involving hazardous activities; pass legislation prohibiting child labor; and effectively enforce child labor laws. (94) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.
Action Plan for the Prevention of Underage Recruitment	Aims to prevent the recruitment of minors into the Afghan National Security Forces, including the Afghan National Army, the Afghan National Police, the National Directory of Security, and pro-government militia groups. Seeks to ensure the release of children under age 18 from the armed forces and facilitate their reintegration into families and communities. (95) In 2017, the policy remained in effect, but no further information was available. (56)
Policy on Child Labor in Carpet Weaving	Provides social services to children and incentives for weaving families that avoid child labor. Includes an implementation plan. (96) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.

Policy	Description
National Strategy for Children at Risk	Creates a framework to provide social services to at-risk children and their families, and guides donors in contributing toward a comprehensive child protection system. Focuses specifically on working children, trafficked children, child soldiers, and other children affected by conflict. (97) Since the adoption of the policy, the establishment of CPANs has been an important achievement in its implementation. (32) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.
Policy for Protection of Children in Armed Conflict†	Reiterates the commitment to prevent children from recruitment and sexual exploitation in the armed forces, and provide services to children rescued from engagement in armed conflict. Assigns the Ministry of Defense and the Afghan National Police with monitoring that children’s rights are safeguarded and coordinating with CPANs and the Afghanistan Independent Human Rights Commission. (84)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate coverage of all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
USDOL-Funded Projects to address child labor	USDOL funds projects that aim to build capacity of government law enforcement officials and address child labor in the carpet industry. Includes Project to Prevent Child Labor in Home-Based Carpet Production in Afghanistan, a $2 million project implemented by GoodWeave; and Country Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce Child Labor, a capacity-building project implemented by the ILO in at least 11 countries to build local and national capacity of the government to address child labor. (98; 99) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
Age Verification of New Afghan National Security Forces Recruits†	Joint government and UNICEF program that operates child protection units in the Afghan National Security Forces recruitment centers. Aims to ensure that new recruits meet the minimum age requirement of age 18 by carefully screening applicants. (100) The process includes an ID check and a requirement that at least 2 community elders vouch that a recruit is age 18 or older and is eligible to serve. (101) In 2017, a child protection unit was opened in Kandahar to monitor and prevent child recruitment, bringing the number of child protection units to 22. (56)

During the reporting period, the government rescued nearly 40 children from a madrassa near the Pakistan border where they were receiving military training by the Taliban. (102)

There is no evidence of programs designed specifically to prevent and eliminate child labor in agriculture or forced child labor in the production of bricks. Moreover, there were no government-run shelters for victims of human trafficking, although there were two NGO-operated shelters in Kabul for victims of labor and sex trafficking, including one specifically for boys. (56) Some boys who are victims of human trafficking were arrested and some sent to juvenile rehabilitation centers due to the lack of shelters. (51; 55)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Afghanistan (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that forced labor and debt bondage are criminally prohibited.	2015 – 2017
	Create criminal penalties for the use of any child engaged in prostitution.	2017
Enforcement	Establish a CPAN in all of Afghanistan’s 34 provinces and ensure they can provide all the needed services.	2016 – 2017
	Track and publish information on labor inspections, including the Labor Inspectorate funding, number and type of child labor inspections, number of violations found, and penalties imposed and collected.	2015 – 2017

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Authorize the Labor Inspectorate to assess penalties for violations of Afghan law.	2015 – 2017
	Ensure that labor inspectors and criminal investigators receive training on child labor.	2011 – 2017
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO technical advice.	2011 – 2017
	Simplify the child labor complaint mechanism to allow oral complaints, and waive the requirement that the individual filing a complaint must specify the legal grounds for the violation.	2015 – 2017
	Ensure that the Labor Inspectorate has legal authority to enforce child labor laws, including by legally requiring businesses to comply with unannounced inspections.	2014 – 2017
	Publish data on criminal investigation, including the number of violations, prosecutions, and convictions for all crimes involving the worst forms of child labor.	2011 – 2017
	Ensure that investigators are available and receive resources, including equipment and transportation, to enforce criminal child labor laws.	2012 – 2017
	Ensure that child victims of human trafficking and other worst forms of child labor are correctly identified as victims and are not detained, and ensure that victims are referred to appropriate social services, and that children held in juvenile detention or rehabilitation facilities are not subject to mistreatment or torture.	2014 – 2017
Coordination	Ensure all coordinating bodies are able to carry out their intended mandates.	2017
	Establish coordinating mechanisms to combat child labor, including its worst forms, present in the country.	2013 – 2017
Government Policies	Implement the National Labor Policy, Policy on Child Labor in Carpet Weaving, and the National Strategy for Children at Risk.	2016 – 2017
Social Programs	Institute a birth registration campaign.	2015 – 2017
	Institute programs to increase access to education and to improve security in schools, especially for girls.	2014 – 2017
	Institute programs to address child labor in agriculture and bonded child labor in brick kilns.	2009 – 2017
	Provide financial support to open shelters for victims of human trafficking and to ensure that sufficient shelter services are available for male child trafficking victims.	2010 – 2017

In 2017, Albania made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government passed the Regulation on Protection of Children at Work, which provides a list of hazardous occupations for children under age 18. The Office of the National Coordinator for the Fight Against Trafficking in Human Beings conducted an awareness-raising campaign. In addition, the government passed the Albanian National Agenda for Children's Rights, which aims to support development and social inclusion of children, and 101 children were assisted in shelters. However, children in Albania engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in mining and forced begging. Although the government made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period, the law does not explicitly prohibit using, procuring, or offering children for illicit activities. In addition, the Labor Inspectorate needs to be strengthened to conduct adequate inspections in all sectors in which child labor is known to occur.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Albania engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in mining and forced begging. (1; 2; 3; 4; 5; 6; 7; 8; 9) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Albania.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	4.6 (23,665)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	92.5
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	5.2
Primary Completion Rate (%)		105.6

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2015, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (10)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from National Child Labor Survey, 2010. (11)

Albania lacks recent, comprehensive data on children engaging in the worst forms of child labor, including in agriculture and construction. Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, activities unknown (2; 3; 4; 5; 8)
Industry	Mining, † including chromium (4; 5; 12; 13; 14; 15; 16; 7; 17; 8)
	Construction, activities unknown (1; 2; 4; 5)
	Working in the textile, garment, and footwear sectors (2; 4; 5; 18; 8; 19; 20)
	Processing fish (4; 5; 21)
Services	Begging (2; 3; 4; 5; 22; 8; 19)
	Street work, including vending, washing vehicles, busking, and shining shoes (3; 23; 8; 9; 19)
	Collecting recyclable materials on the street and in landfills (3; 5; 8; 19)
	Working in wholesale and retail trade (1; 2; 4; 5)
	Working in hotels and restaurants (1; 2; 4; 5; 8)
	Working in call centers (4; 5; 8)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor†‡	Use in illicit activities, including burglary, drug trafficking, drug couriering, and harvesting and processing cannabis (2; 5; 3; 23; 24; 25; 26; 8; 9; 19)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3; 5; 26; 8)
	Forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2; 3; 5; 6; 23; 26; 8; 9)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children are trafficked internally in Albania and abroad to neighboring and EU countries for commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor, including forced begging. (23; 27; 28; 9) Internal child trafficking and forced begging have increased in recent years, particularly during the tourist season. (23; 26; 27; 28) Street children, especially those from Egyptian and Roma communities, are incredibly vulnerable to becoming victims of human trafficking. (2; 3; 29; 30)

In addition, children in Albania informally collect chromium around the mines where debris from mine tunnels is found, and sometimes carry heavy rocks for miles. (16; 7; 17; 8; 19; 20) The work is not coerced, and parents are aware that their children collect chromium. (8)

Although Albania allows children without a birth certificate to enroll in public schools, some children from Roma and Egyptian families and refugees may face obstacles in obtaining birth certificates, which may affect their access to social services and school inclusion. (5; 31; 27; 32; 21; 33) Children out of school are more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. Some Roma and Egyptian children also experienced financial hurdles to accessing education, such as transportation and textbook costs. (5; 8; 33) Discrimination in schools or being physically separated in classrooms are also challenges faced by Roma and Egyptian students. (5; 33)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Albania has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Albania’s legal framework to adequately protect children from child labor, including using children in illicit activities.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 98 of the Code of Labor; Article 24 of the Law for the Protection of the Rights of the Child (34; 35)

Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 22 of the Law on Pre-University Education System (41)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 57 of the Constitution of the Republic of Albania; Article 5 of the Law on Pre-University Education System (41; 42)

* No conscription (40)

In 2017, the Government of Albania passed the Regulation on Protection of Children at Work. The law provides a list of hazardous occupations for children under age 18. (38) In addition, the government adopted the Criminal Justice for Children Code, which prescribes a child-friendly approach to the justice system, such as providing psychologists for trials that involve a minor. (9; 43) The Law on the Protection of the Rights of the Child, also passed during the reporting period, creates an integrated system to prevent the abuse and exploitation of children in employment and codifies rights for children. (35) The government is also drafting bylaws to this law for the identification and referral process for street children. (8)

The law in Albania does not explicitly prohibit using, procuring, or offering children under age 18 for illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs. (30) Article 129 of the Criminal Code prohibits only inducing or encouraging children under age 14 to participate in criminality. (39)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Finance, Economy, and Labor that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Finance, Economy, and Labor	Enforce laws related to child labor and hazardous work, and monitor the quality of social services provided through the State Inspectorate for Labor. (8)
Ministry of Health and Social Care	Develop policies and laws related to child protection, previously managed by the State Agency for the Protection of Children's Rights. (8) Receive, document, and respond to child labor complaints through the State Social Services (SSS) Agency. (8)
Ministry of Interior	Enforce all laws, including laws related to the worst forms of child labor through protection officers. (4; 8) Coordinate the work of the Regional Police Directorate through the General Directorate of State Police. Establish the government's policy on combating human trafficking through the State Committee Against Trafficking in Persons, chaired by the Interior Minister. (44)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Organization/Agency	Role
Office of the Prosecutor General	Investigate and prosecute child trafficking cases through the Serious Crimes Prosecution Office. (2; 45)
Child Protection Units (CPUs)	Identify at-risk children, take case referrals from enforcement agencies, and conduct initial evaluations of each case at the municipal level. Manage cases of at-risk children and refer them to appropriate social services. (2; 46; 47) Receive referrals from state police responsible for identifying and referring high-risk children. Every municipality or administrative unit with at least 3,000 children is required to have at least 1 CPU. (8) There were 221 CPUs in 2017. (8)

Child Protection Units (CPUs) are generally staffed by one individual, and a majority of CPU staff are not able to focus on child protection issues full-time. (48) The State Social Services Agency was moved from the Ministry of Social Welfare and Youth, causing delays in funding and lack of senior-level guidance on social issues. (9)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Albania took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Finance, Economy, and Labor that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including inspection planning and human resource allocation for all relevant sectors in which child labor is known to occur.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

The government has an annual plan to conduct inspections to identify potential dangers to employees. During the summer tourist season, the inspections focus on child labor in tourist areas. (5) However, the plan for 2017 did not include other sectors in which child labor is known to occur, specifically the agricultural, wholesale and retail trade, hotel restaurants, mining, and informal sectors. (8) Also, the complaint mechanism received only one complaint during the reporting period, indicating that it has not been promoted strongly by the Labor Inspectorate. (48)

In addition, the Director of the Labor Inspectorate was dismissed at the end of 2017 and was not replaced, which will affect the ability to pursue an adequate inspection strategy for 2018. (8) The government noted in 2017 that the budget did not cover all resources needed for labor inspectors, such as vehicles and office space. (8; 9)

If a child is exploited for labor, the identifying agency or individual refers the child to the CPU to create a child care plan. The CPU then refers the child to social services offered by the government or NGOs. (8) In 2017, CPUs identified and managed 586 cases of street children involved in begging. (8)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Albania took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including human resource allocation.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Training for Investigators
Initial Training for New Employees	Yes (5)	Yes (8)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A	Yes (8)

Number of Prosecutions Initiated	17 (5)	19 (8)
Number of Convictions	8 (5)	1 (8)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (5)	Yes (8)

In 2017, police officers from the Illicit Trafficking Police, State Police, and Border Police, were trained on child protection and trafficking in persons, including in the context of migrant flows through the Western Balkans. (8) In addition, the Office of the National Coordinator for the Fight Against Trafficking in Human Beings (ONAC) and the State Agency for the Rights and Protection of Children trained 240 local government professionals, including police, CPUs, and educators, on child protection and child trafficking. (30) An additional 160 teachers were trained on the prevention of trafficking organized by ONAC and the Ministry of Education. (8) Other training was organized by regional anti-trafficking committees. (8; 9)

NGOs noted that, due to police turnover, frequent training for police officers is needed to improve identification of child trafficking victims and street children, including child beggars trafficked from neighboring countries. (9; 48)

If a child is trafficked for labor exploitation, the agency identifying the child refers the child to the police and state social services and then to an anti-trafficking shelter. (8) Standard operating procedures (SOPs) exist to identify and refer victims of trafficking, including children. Although the SOPs are being reviewed to align with the new legal framework and institutional changes, border police did not consistently identify trafficking victims. (48; 9; 30) In addition, gaps exist in the screening of minors, including migrants traveling to and from neighboring countries. (48; 33)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including coordination between agencies.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
State Agency for the Protection of Children's Rights	Oversee implementation of the government's child rights protection policies, including monitoring the National Action Plan for the Identification and Protection of Children in Street Situations. (4; 5) Manage cases of at-risk children and refer them to appropriate social services. (2; 46; 47) Sanction those who fail to protect children from violence and exploitation. (46)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
Office of the National Coordinator for the Fight Against Trafficking in Human Beings (ONAC)	Coordinate all anti-trafficking efforts in Albania. Oversee 12 regional anti-human trafficking committees that carry out local action plans in cooperation with civil society partners. (5) Lead data collection and report writing for the National Database for Human Trafficking Victims/Potential Victims. (5) Runs the Close Case Task Force with the Serious Crimes Prosecution Office and Albanian State Police. (9)
National Referral Mechanism	Coordinate the identification, protection, referral, and rehabilitation of trafficking victims between government and civil society organizations. (27) Chaired by the Ministry of the Interior's ONAC. (27; 49)

During the reporting period, the ONAC conducted one national awareness-raising campaign. (48) The Closed Case Task Force resumed meetings at the beginning of the year and reviewed two cases, which were used to conduct training for police and prosecutors. However, meetings tapered off by the end of the year due to government reorganization. (48)

Coordination between the State Inspectorate for Labor, State Social Services, and the Albanian State Police has traditionally been sporadic. (48) In 2017, the National Anti-Trafficking Coordinator position was vacated and replaced by the Director General for Asylum and Trafficking, which may have affected the government's ability to respond to issues related to human trafficking. (9)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
The Albanian National Agenda for Children's Rights (2017–2020)†	Aims to protect and promote children's rights by supporting physical and psychosocial development, and social inclusion of children. (50) Objectives include improving children's access to services and enhancing legal and institutional mechanisms for child protection. (50; 8) Rests on promoting, respecting, and protecting children's rights through governance; eliminating all forms of violence against children; and creating child-friendly systems and services in education, justice, health, and social protection. (8; 9)
Strategy for Combating Trafficking in Persons Action Plan (2014–2017)	Outlined a plan to improve law enforcement and prosecutions, build the capacity of programs that provide services to trafficking victims, improve interagency coordination, and train professionals working with street children. (28; 51; 52) ONAC and IOM met three times in 2017 to begin updating it for the next cycle. (9)
The Action Plan for the Social-Economic Reintegration of Women and Girl Victims (2016–2020)	Increases resources available to victims and attempts to reintegrate girl trafficking victims by providing education and social services to combat future forced labor and trafficking. (53) Part of the Strategy for Combating Trafficking in Persons Action Plan. (5) Active in 2017. (48)
Instruction No. 10 on Cooperation and Intervention Procedures for Assisting Vulnerable Children for Institutions and Structures in Charge of Child Protection	Describes child protection responsibilities of the state police, Ministry of Education, regional Directorates of Social Services, regional Departments of Education, schools, municipal governments, and CPUs. (46) Requires all agencies to refer known and suspected cases of child abuse and exploitation to CPUs. Outlines principles for case management and evaluation. (46) Active in 2017. (48)
Action Plan for the Identification and Protection of Children in Street Situations (2015–2017)	Defines the roles and responsibilities of various ministries and stakeholders in identifying and providing assistance to children living and working on the street. (4; 51) Active in 2017. (48)
White Paper on the Future of the Integrated Child Protection System in Albania	Clarifies roles and responsibilities of government agencies involved in child protection, makes government policy recommendations on child protection accountability, addresses mechanisms, and creates a child-friendly justice system. (4; 54)
National Action Plan for Roma and Egyptian Community Reintegration (2016–2020)	Aims to provide Roma and Egyptian children full access to education, reduce discrimination, enhance social inclusion, and promote intercultural dialog between different actors in the community. (28; 55) Active in 2017. (48)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

In 2017, the government and Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE) continued to draft an action plan for the Identification and Protection of Children Subject to Economic Exploitation, Including Children in Street Situations (2018–2020). (8; 9; 48) Once implemented, it will seek to build capacity for child protection and law enforcement institutions, as well as promote access to education for children vulnerable to trafficking. (56)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including with the adequacy of programs to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor‡

Program	Description
Program of Cooperation for Sustainable Development (2017–2021)	UN program that aims to increase access to education for vulnerable children and protections for child victims of human trafficking. (57; 58) Program continued in 2017. (8)
Human Trafficking Hotline and Shelters	ONAC program supported by USAID, UNODC, World Vision, and the Vodafone Albania Foundation. Through the Human Trafficking Helpline, Report, and Save Mobile App, provides services to victims of crime, improves prevention of human trafficking, and serves as a public awareness tool. (27; 9) The National Shelter Coalition† comprises one state-run and three NGO-run shelters. The National Reception Center for Victims of Trafficking, under the supervision of the Directorate General of State Social Services, provides shelter and access to social services for human trafficking victims. (59; 9) The Tjeter Vizion NGO shelter provides services for minors. (9) In total, 101 minors were assisted in the shelters in 2017, including 3 Afghan minors at the Tjeter Vizion NGO shelter. (8; 9)
National Emergency Transition Center†	Government-run center that aims to provide vulnerable families with housing, health care, psychosocial and educational services, legal assistance, and employment placement aid. Accommodates 39 families. Continued to operate in 2017. (8; 30)
Child Allowance Program ( Ndihma Ekonomike )†	$46 million government-funded cash transfer program that provides an allowance for families receiving economic aid through the Law on Social Assistance and Services. Continued to operate in 2017. (8)
Identification and Protection of Children in Street Situations Action Plan (2015–2017)	UNICEF-funded program that protected children from abuse, exploitation, and neglect through an inter-agency plan for the protection of children living and working on the street. (60) Drafted by the Ministries of Social Welfare and Youth, Interior, and Education and Sports. Implemented by municipalities and monitored by the State Agency for the Protection of Children’s Rights. (5; 60) Continued in 2017 and created local action plans in Durres, Elbasan, Fier, Korce, Shkoder, and Vlore. (8; 30)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (61; 9)

During the reporting period, police sometimes referred street children or unaccompanied minors to human trafficking shelters while contacting their parents. This occasionally overburdened the shelters. (8) Some state- or NGO-run services were available for children who were forced to beg; research found no evidence that programs were carried out to assist children working in mining. (26; 49; 8)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Albania (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that using, procuring, and offering children under age 18 for illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs, is criminally prohibited.	2015 – 2017
Enforcement	Provide CPUs with sufficient staffing and funding to carry out their work.	2013 – 2017
	Ensure that the Labor Inspectorate has a permanent director and that the Labor Inspectorate plan is adequate, targeting sectors in which child labor is known to occur.	2010 – 2017
	Strengthen and promote the labor complaint mechanism so that the general public can report cases of child labor.	2017
	Provide the Labor Inspectorate with the necessary equipment and training so that inspections can be conducted.	2017

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure that labor and police investigators receive frequent training on children engaged in the worst forms of child labor.	2013 – 2017
	Ensure that the border police officers properly screen minor children, including migrants, and properly implement Standard Operating Procedures to identify victims of child trafficking.	2016 – 2017
Coordination	Ensure that all parties participate in ongoing meetings of the Closed Case Task Force, including ONAC, the Office of the General Prosecutor, and the State Police.	2016 – 2017
	Increase coordination between the State Inspectorate for Labor, State Social Services, and the Albanian State Police.	2016 – 2017
	Ensure that the position of Anti-Trafficking Coordinator is filled and responds to issues related to the commercial sexual exploitation of children.	2017
Social Programs	Conduct research to further identify children’s activities in agriculture and construction to inform policies and programs.	2013 – 2017
	Increase resources, access to civil registration, and social services available to children, including Roma and Egyptian children engaged in or at risk of engaging in child labor.	2011 – 2017
	Ensure that barriers to education, such as the prohibitive cost of school supplies and discrimination against Roma and Egyptian children, are removed.	2013 – 2017
	Increase the amount of shelters for children who are referred by police officers.	2017
	Institute programs to assist children who are used in mining chromium.	2014 – 2017

Algeria

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2017, Algeria made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government conducted a dedicated period of inspections focused solely on child labor, prosecuted 79 child labor cases, and achieved 58 convictions. It provided advanced training for government personnel on investigating and prosecuting trafficking in persons and protecting victims. Furthermore, the National Commission for the Prevention of and Fight Against Child Labor organized awareness days on the harms of child labor, putting together television and radio programs on the topic, encouraging imams to raise the subject in sermons, and offering assistance to needy families. However, children in Algeria engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and forced begging, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in street work. The government has not sufficiently prohibited the use of children in illicit activities or determined by national law or regulation the types of work that are hazardous for children to perform.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Algeria engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and forced begging, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in street work. (1; 2; 3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Algeria.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	6.7 (413,729)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	92.3
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	7.2
Primary Completion Rate (%)		105.4

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (4)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 4 (MICS 4), 2012–2013. (5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including harvesting olives (1; 6; 7; 8; 9)
Industry	Construction, activities unknown (2; 6; 7; 9; 10)
Services	Street work, including vending, collecting plastics, and begging (2; 6; 7; 11; 12; 13; 14; 3; 15)
	Domestic work (1; 2; 10)
	Working in small workshops and businesses, including mechanics' shops (6; 8; 10)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2; 7; 14)
	Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking (9)
	Forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (11; 12; 14; 10)
	Forced domestic work, including drawing water from wells, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (14)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Evidence suggests that children, primarily unaccompanied sub-Saharan migrants, are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation and forced domestic work. (2; 16; 17; 18) Some migrants, particularly those from Niger, keep young children, often not their own but rather “rented” from smuggling networks, at their side while begging in the street. (9; 18; 10) The government reported that child labor was most prevalent in the provinces of Algiers, Batna, Constantine, and Oran, often part-time and informal in nature. (19; 10) Research could not find a current and comprehensive study on the activities and scope of the child labor situation in Algeria. (2; 20)

The Algerian public education system is free and open to all children, regardless of ethnicity and nationality. Non-Algerian children must provide documentation of grade level or sit for testing to determine their level. (10; 21) Many children with disabilities do not have the opportunity to access mainstream education because of social stigma, the relatively low number of teachers with specialized training, the lack of a transportation system for children with disabilities, and the limited accessibility of school buildings. (21) Barriers to education, including those placed on migrant children and children with disabilities, result in absence from school and increase vulnerability to child labor. Furthermore, many unregistered children remain out of school and vulnerable to child labor because birth certificates are required to attend school. (19)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Algeria has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Algeria’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of a prohibition against using children in illicit activities.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 15 of the Labor Code; Article 7 of Executive Decree No. 96-98 on the List and Content of Special Books and Registers Mandatory for Employers (22; 23)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 15 of the Labor Code; Article 7 of Executive Decree No. 96-98 on the List and Content of Special Books and Registers Mandatory for Employers (22)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 303 bis 4 of the Penal Code (24)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 303 bis 4 and 319 of the Penal Code (24)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 319, 333 bis 1, 343, and 344 of the Penal Code (24)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No		Article 195 bis of the Penal Code (24)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment
State Compulsory	Yes	19	Article 3 of Law No. 14-06 on National Service (25)

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
State Voluntary	Yes	17	Article 14 of Presidential Decree No. 08-134 on the National People's Army (26)
Non-state	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 12 of Law No. 08-04 on National Education (27)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 13 of Law No. 08-04 on National Education (27)

The government drafted a bill to revise the Labor Code; however, it is currently subject to consultations with business and civil society partners before it is submitted to Parliament. (28; 29; 30; 10) The Labor Code prohibits anyone under age 19 from working at night and anyone under age 18 from performing work that is harmful to their health, safety, or morals. Algeria has not determined by national law or regulation the types of work that are hazardous for children; however, in January 2018, the government created a commission tasked with proposing a list of hazardous professions. (2; 3; 22; 31; 32) Algerian law does not provide increased penalties for or categorize as a separate crime the involvement of children in either the production or trafficking of drugs. (24)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Security that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Security (MTESS)	Enforce labor laws, including laws related to child labor, through its General Labor Inspectorate, distribute written notices and issue tickets in response to violations, and refer violations to the Ministry of Justice. (6; 21) Supervise the application of laws and regulations related to labor relations, working conditions, and worker safety. (9) Share child labor reports with the Ministry of National Solidarity to ensure follow-up with social services. (9; 11)
Ministry of the Interior and Local Assemblies	Enforce criminal laws related to child trafficking through the Directorate General for National Security, which comprises 8 active brigades of 77 specialized police officers, focused on illegal immigration and human trafficking, and 50 brigades of 300 police officers, specialized in the protection of children. (9; 14; 33; 19)
Ministry of National Defense	Enforce criminal laws pertaining to the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking, in rural and border regions through the National Gendarmerie. (14) Work with the Directorate General for National Security and NGO Algerian Network for the Defense of Children's Rights to administer hotlines for the reporting of child abuse. (11; 33; 34; 35)
Ministry of Justice	Prosecute child exploitation cases, including those related to non-compliance with labor laws, through its Office of Criminal Affairs and Amnesty Procedures as the lead law enforcement actor for trafficking issues. (34)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Algeria took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Security that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the lack of authorization for the Labor Inspectorate to assess penalties.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$21,000,000 (9)	$17,600,000 (10)
Number of Labor Inspectors	563 (33; 9)	645 (10)
Inspectorate Authorized to Assess Penalties	No (3)	No (10)
Training for Labor Inspectors
Initial Training for New Employees	Yes (19)	Yes (10)
Training on New Laws Related to Child Labor	N/A (9)	N/A (10)

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted	11,575 (36)	11,419 (10)
Number Conducted at Worksites	11,575 (3; 9)	11,419 (10)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	12 (36)	141 (10)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties were Imposed	Unknown (9)	Unknown (10)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that were Collected	Unknown (9)	Unknown (10)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (33)	Yes (10)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (33)	Yes (10)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (9)	Yes (10)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (33)	Yes (10)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (33; 11)	Yes (10)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (33)	Yes (10)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Algeria's workforce, which includes more than 11.8 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Algeria should employ roughly 788 inspectors, notably in all geographic areas of the country, both urban and rural. (8; 37; 38) The government conducted a dedicated period of inspections focused solely on child labor violations over 25 days in 2017 and uncovered nine instances of children working below the minimum age of employment. During the reporting period, inspectors issued 60 notices and 81 citations for violations related to child labor, which were then referred to the Ministry of Justice for prosecution and the assessment of penalties. (10)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Algeria took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies, including the lack of published information on the number of criminal investigations and violations found related to child labor.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Training for Investigators
Initial Training for New Employees	Yes (19)	Yes (10)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (9)	N/A (10)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (33)	Yes (10)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (9)	Unknown (10)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (9)	Unknown (10)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	117 (19)	79 (10)
Number of Convictions	89 (19)	58 (10)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (9)	Yes (10)

In April, the National Gendarmerie dismantled a criminal network that was allegedly recruiting underage girls in Mali to work as domestic servants in Algeria. The Ministry of Justice prosecuted 79 cases involving illegal employment of children, economic exploitation of a minor, begging with a child, and employment of a child at night, with 73 percent of the cases ending in conviction. (10) The General Directorate of National Security held 17 trainings on the subject of child victims, benefiting 600 police officers. (10)

The government has an ad hoc practice in place for law enforcement personnel to refer potential victims of human trafficking to the prosecutor, who then notifies social services, as needed. (9; 14; 33; 10)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Algeria

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
National Commission for the Prevention of and Fight Against Child Labor	Prevent and eliminate child labor by coordinating between government ministries and all other agencies that oversee labor activities. (6; 35) Led by the MTESS, with members from the National Labor Union and NGOs, as well as nine other governmental agencies. (35; 39) In 2017, the commission established a new national program focused on child labor awareness-raising activities. (10)
National Committee for the Prevention of and Fight Against Trafficking in Persons	Monitor implementation of the National Action Plan for the Prevention of and Fight Against Trafficking in Persons, established by Decree 16-249. Comprises representatives from the President's Office; the Prime Minister's Office; 12 ministries, including the MTESS; and other government entities. (9; 17; 40) In 2017, the committee started drafting a comprehensive anti-trafficking in persons bill to strengthen existing laws. (10)
National Authority for the Protection and Promotion of Children (ONPPE)	Protect and promote children's rights and provide advocacy for children in danger of economic exploitation. Act as a liaison between the Ministry of Justice and members of the public alleging violations of children's rights. (2; 9; 33) In 2017, established a website and planned to establish a toll-free hotline through which the public can report on child labor violations. (10)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including no evidence of a policy regarding other worst forms of child labor beyond the government's policy related to trafficking in persons.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan for the Prevention of and Fight Against Trafficking in Persons	Aims to prevent and reduce human trafficking by raising awareness of the issue, strengthening legislation, prosecuting trafficking crimes, improving the provision of protective services to victims, and increasing collaboration with national and international NGOs. (9; 14) During the reporting period, drafting of a directive from the Prime Minister establishing a formal process for officials to follow in identifying and caring for potential trafficking victims was started. (10)

Although the Government of Algeria has adopted the National Action Plan for the Prevention of and Fight Against Trafficking in Persons, research found no evidence of a policy regarding other worst forms of child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor†‡

Program	Description
Child Labor Awareness Campaign*†	The National Commission for the Prevention of and Fight Against Child Labor organized awareness days on the harms of child labor, putting together television and radio programs on the topic, encouraging imams to raise the subject in sermons, and offering assistance to needy families. (10)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Algeria.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (10; 41)

Although Algeria has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, including the commercial sexual exploitation of children, forced begging, and street work.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Algeria (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that laws prohibit the use of children in all illicit activities, including using, procuring, and offering children for the production and trafficking of drugs.	2013 – 2017
	Determine the types of hazardous work prohibited for children under age 18, in consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2009 – 2017
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2017
Enforcement	Publish information on the enforcement of child labor laws, including the number of penalties imposed and collected and the number of criminal investigations and violations.	2009 – 2017
	Increase the number of labor inspectors in accordance with the ILO's technical advice and ensure that child labor laws are enforced in all geographic areas.	2009 – 2017
	Ensure that the Labor Inspectorate is authorized to assess penalties.	2017
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that includes all relevant worst forms of child labor, such as forced begging and commercial sexual exploitation.	2015 – 2017
Social Programs	Research and publish information on children involved in child labor, or at risk of being involved; specify these activities and publish information to inform policies.	2014 – 2017
	Take measures to register children at birth and remove barriers to accessing education, particularly for migrant children and children with disabilities, namely transportation and accessibility to schools.	2015 – 2017
	Expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem.	2016 – 2017

In 2017, Angola made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government updated its list of hazardous activities and occupations prohibited for children and published the results of the 2015–2016 Survey on Multiple Health Indicators, which includes information on child labor. The government also announced the creation of an alert system to combat crimes against children, including human trafficking. However, children in Angola engage in forced labor in agriculture. Children also perform dangerous tasks in construction. The gap between the compulsory education age and minimum age for work leaves children ages 12 and 13 vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. There are not enough labor inspectors to provide sufficient coverage of the workforce, and social programs do not target all sectors in which children work.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Angola engage in forced labor in agriculture. (1; 2) Children also perform dangerous tasks in construction. (3) The 2015–2016 Survey on Multiple Health Indicators found that 23 percent of children ages 5 to 17 engage in child labor. The percentage of children engaged in child labor is higher in rural areas compared to urban areas; Cuanza Sul and Cuando Cubango provinces have the highest percentage of child laborers. (4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Angola.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	25.7 (694,458)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	65.4
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	22.1
Primary Completion Rate (%)		46.1

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including plowing, planting and picking tomatoes, harvesting vegetables, and the production of rice (3; 7; 8; 2; 9)
	Fishing, activities unknown (9)
	Cattle herding (7)
	Production of charcoal (9)
Industry	Artisanal diamond mining (7; 9)
	Mining coal (3)
	Construction, including making and transporting bricks (3; 10; 9)
	Slaughtering cattle, goats, and pigs† (9)
Services	Street work, including vending, car washing, shoe shining, and transporting heavy loads† (3; 8; 2; 9)
	Domestic work (9)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1)
	Forced labor, including in agriculture, construction, artisanal diamond mining, and domestic work, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2; 11; 1)
	Use in illicit activities, including the transport of illicit goods across the border of Angola and Namibia (1)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Undocumented Congolese migrant children enter Angola for work in diamond-mining districts, and some experience conditions of forced labor or commercial sexual exploitation in mining camps. (7; 1) Girls as young as age 12 are trafficked from Kasai Occidental in the Democratic Republic of the Congo to Angola for forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation. Angolan boys are taken to Namibia and forced to herd cattle. (1)

The government permits children to attend school without birth registration, but only up to the fourth grade. (12) Families face difficulty paying informal school fees, and many schools do not have enough classroom space for all children. (13; 12)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Angola has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Angola’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of commercial sexual exploitation of children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor‡

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Article 254 of the Labor Law (14)

State Voluntary	Yes	18	Article 11 of the Military Service Law (18)
Non-state	No
Compulsory Education Age	No	12‡	Articles 8 and 17 of the Basic Law of the Education System (19)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 7 of the Basic Law of the Education System (19)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (19; 20)

In 2017, the government updated the list of hazardous activities and occupations prohibited for children. (9) The legislation identifies 57 activities that are prohibited for children; however, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children do not include diamond mining, a sector in which there is evidence of work conducted underground. (15)

Laws related to commercial sexual exploitation are not sufficient because using, procuring, and offering a child for the production of pornography and pornographic performances are not criminally prohibited. (16) The 2016 draft Penal Code, which contains prohibitions on the commercial sexual exploitation of children, remains before parliament for approval. (21; 9)

Ending compulsory education at age 12 leaves children ages 12 and 13 vulnerable to child labor because they are not required to attend school, but also are not legally permitted to work. (19; 20) In addition, this age conflicts with the National Development Plan (2013–2017), which sets the compulsory education age at 14. (22)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Public Administration, Labor, and Social Security (MAPTSS) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Public Administration, Labor, and Social Security (MAPTSS)	Enforce laws against child labor. Fine employers or send cases to the Ministry of Interior for further investigation and to the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights for prosecution. (23) Employ labor inspectors nationwide to carry out inspections and joint operations with social services providers. (24)
National Children's Institute (INAC)	Receive complaints about cases of child exploitation, including child labor. Conduct inspections and respond to reports of child labor. (23)
Ministry of Interior's National Police	Enforce criminal laws and conduct operations and investigations related to the worst forms of child labor. (7)
Ministry of Justice and Human Rights	Investigate and prosecute the worst forms of child labor cases. (23)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Angola took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the framework of the MAPTSS that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including human resources allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Angola's workforce, which includes approximately 12.5 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Angola would employ about 312 labor inspectors. (27; 28; 29; 9)

Inspectors from the MAPTSS work with the National Children's Institute (INAC) and the Ministry of Social Action, Family, and the Promotion of Women (MASFAM) to ensure that child labor victims receive the appropriate social services. (9)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Angola took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including publicly available information.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Training for Investigators
Initial Training for New Employees	Unknown	Yes (9)

Number of Prosecutions Initiated	4 (30)	Unknown
Number of Convictions	Unknown (25)	Unknown
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (25)	Yes (9)

In 2017, National Police initiated investigations into two cases of child trafficking for labor exploitation. The cases included six children who were being trafficked to Namibia for forced labor. (31) The government created a system to combat crimes against children, including child trafficking. The system alerts social media networks and local authorities to reports of disappearances of minors. (31)

The Ministry of Interior refers victims of the worst forms of child labor to the INAC and the MASFAM to receive social services. (32; 9)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the capacity to coordinate efforts to address child labor, including the efficacy of coordination efforts on child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
Commission to Combat Trafficking in Persons	Coordinate enforcement efforts on human trafficking, including child trafficking for labor and commercial sexual exploitation. Led by the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights. (33) Research was unable to determine coordination activities taken during the year.
National Council for Social Action	Promote and defend children's rights through social consultation and monitoring of public policies. Led by the Ministry of Social Action, Family, and the Promotion of Women. (26; 34) Research was unable to determine coordination activities taken during the year.
Ministry of Social Action, Family, and the Promotion of Women (MASFAM)	Ensure coordination among various government agencies related to social welfare and victim protection. (7; 31) A network of institutions and shelters protect children from abusive, exploitative, and dangerous situations. (35) Research was unable to determine coordination activities taken during the year.
INAC	Coordinate child protective services. Work with the MASFAM to provide shelter and help reintegrate children found in child labor situations with their families. (23; 31) Research was unable to determine coordination activities taken during the year.

Research shows there is no specific coordinating mechanisms dedicated solely to addressing issues related to the worst forms of child labor, outside the scope of human trafficking.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor‡

Policy	Description
Plan of Action and Intervention Against the Sexual and Commercial Exploitation of Children	Aims to protect and defend the rights of child victims of sexual and economic exploitation, including rehabilitation. (36)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (22)

Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Plan of Action and Intervention Against the Sexual and Commercial Exploitation of Children during the reporting period. (26) Although the government has adopted the Plan of Action and Intervention Against the Sexual and Commercial Exploitation of Children, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor‡

Program	Description
Social Protection Programs†	National network of child support centers implemented by the government, in coordination with NGOs, that offer meals, shelter, basic education, and family reunification services to crime victims, including child trafficking victims. The MASFAM and the Organization of Angolan Women operate 52 children's shelters. (1; 31)
Microcredit Project†	MAPTSS program that provides cash assistance to parents so that their children do not need to work. (7)
Birth Registration and Justice for Children†	Government-run program that makes birth registration free for all Angolan citizens. Aimed to expand birth registration coverage of all children from 56 percent to 80 percent by the end of 2017. (37)
UNICEF Country Program (2015–2019)	UNICEF program, in coordination with the government, designed to plan and implement education and child protection-focused interventions. (38) Collaborates with the government to run a child helpline in Luanda Province. (13)
National Institutes of Job and Professional Training†	Government-funded program of 555 centers that provides professional training for youth so that they have the skills to enter the formal labor market. (7; 39)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Program	Description
Mobile Schools and Free Meals for Children†	Ministry of Education program that provides education in mobile schools to migrant children who work with their parents in cattle herding. Specifically targets children at the highest risk of involvement in child labor in southern Angola. (7) Supports some mobile schools with kitchens, which facilitate the free school meals program. (7; 23; 40) In 2017, the government gradually reintroduced the school meals program after it was halted in 2016. (41; 26)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (42)

Although Angola has implemented programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem. Furthermore, research did not identify programs that seek to reach children engaged in certain worst forms of child labor, such as commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Angola (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law prohibits hazardous occupations or activities for children in all relevant sectors in Angola, including diamond mining.	2011 – 2017
	Ensure that the legal framework protects children from exploitation in child pornography and pornographic performances.	2014 – 2017
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2017
	Increase the compulsory education age to 14 to be consistent with the National Development Plan and the minimum age for work.	2009 – 2017
Enforcement	Publish information regarding the Labor Inspectorate’s funding and the number of labor inspections conducted at worksites, as well as the number of criminal violations found, prosecutions initiated, and convictions achieved.	2011 – 2017
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO’s technical advice.	2009 – 2017
Coordination	Establish coordinating mechanisms to combat all forms of child labor.	2016 – 2017
	Ensure coordination mechanisms related to child labor are active during the year.	2017
Government Policies	Ensure that the Plan of Action and Intervention Against the Sexual and Commercial Exploitation of Children is effectively implemented.	2014 – 2017
	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor, such as forced labor.	2017
Social Programs	Develop and expand existing social programs to ensure that all children have access to education and are not restricted by informal fees, lack of birth certificates, and lack of classroom space. Ensure the continuation of the free school meals program.	2013 – 2017
	Institute programs that target children engaged in commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor, and expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem.	2010 – 2017

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

In 2017, Argentina made a significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government hosted the IV Global Conference on the Sustained Eradication of Child Labor, published the results of its National Child Labor Survey, and released its third National Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of Adolescent Labor. The government also distributed a new child labor inspection protocol, created a national registry of child labor complaints, and launched a national campaign against child labor in brickmaking. However, children in Argentina engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in illicit activities such as the transportation and sale of drugs. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. The government does not appear to publish federal and provincial labor and criminal law enforcement data on child labor, and social programs that address child labor in agriculture do not appear to address the full scope of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Argentina engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and illicit activities such as the transportation and sale of drugs. (1; 2; 3; 4; 5) Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. In November 2016, the government, in collaboration with the ILO, began conducting the National Survey on Children and Youth Activities (EANNA) to assess child labor in urban areas. In 2017, the government extended that survey into rural areas. (4; 6; 7) The government's 2017 Child Labor Survey Report, released in 2018, concluded that there are 291,335 working children between the ages of 5 and 15. Raw data used in the government's 2017 Child Labor Survey report were not available for analysis in time for inclusion in this report. Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Argentina.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	4.2 (258,286)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	98.5
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	4.8
Primary Completion Rate (%)		101.5

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2014, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (8)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Módulo de Actividades de Niños, Niñas y Adolescentes, 2012. (9)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Harvesting blueberries,† carrots,† cotton,† garlic,† grapes,† olives,† onions,† potatoes,† strawberries,† and tomatoes† (3; 10; 11; 12; 13; 14; 15; 16; 17; 18) (19; 20; 21; 22; 23)
	Harvesting yerba mate (stimulant plant)† and tobacco† (1; 2; 24; 23) (25; 26; 27; 28; 29)
Industry	Production of garments (30; 31)
	Production of bricks† and wooden crates (4; 32; 33; 34; 35; 36; 23; 37)
	Construction,† activities unknown (35; 23)
Services	Street begging and performing,† windshield-washing, handing out flyers or promotional materials, and guarding parked cars (38; 39; 40; 23)
	Refuse collection, recycling, and garbage scavenging† (18; 38; 41; 42; 43; 35; 23)
	Caregiving, including caring for other children, or elderly, or infirmed people (23)
	Working and cooking in food service (23)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Domestic work, including cleaning, laundry, and ironing (38; 44; 35; 23)
	Yard work, including cutting lawns and pruning trees (23)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, including use in the production of pornography (4; 38; 5; 23; 45)
	Forced labor in the production of garments (46; 23; 45)
	Use in illicit activities, including distribution of drugs (23; 47; 48)
	Forced labor in domestic work (23)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Misiones—the producer of 90 percent of Argentina’s and 60 percent of the world’s yerba mate—is one of the provinces most affected by child labor. (49) Children as young as five years old help their parents harvest yerba mate, sometimes carrying heavy loads. (49) In Salta and Jujuy, children between 5 and 17 years old harvest tobacco. (50)

Although the extent of the problem is unknown, reports indicate that girls from Argentina’s Northern provinces are victims of human trafficking for commercial sexual exploitation. (51; 52) Bolivian children and children of Bolivian immigrants in Argentina engage in child labor in agriculture, production of bricks, and domestic service, and in forced child labor in the production of garments. (16; 44; 53; 37) Reports also indicate that Paraguayan children are victims of trafficking for the purpose of commercial sexual exploitation in Argentina. (54; 51)

In 2017, adults used girls as young as 13 years old to distribute drugs in nightclubs. (47) In the Northern and Western provinces, indigenous children were used to move drugs across the border. (55; 56; 57)

In Argentina, education is compulsory until age 18. However, reports indicate that many children, including 16 and 17 year olds, drop out of school. (58) Those children are not eligible for many youth employment programs, including most apprenticeships, as the minimum age to qualify for those programs is 18. (59; 60; 61) Thus, they are likely to engage in jobs in the informal sector and, without formal training, may remain in informal work as adults.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Argentina has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government’s laws and regulations are in line with relevant international standards (Table 4).

‡ Age calculated based on available information (76)

In 2017, the Argentinean Congress passed a law on the Protection of Victims of Crimes, which enhances and clarifies guidelines for victims' assistance, including human trafficking victims. (80) The government also drafted a labor reform bill introducing workplace-based education and training opportunities for high school, technical school, and university students. (23)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Security (MTESS) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Security (MTESS)	Enforce child labor laws, in part through its Coordinating Body for the Prevention of Child Labor and the Regulation of Adolescent Work (COODITIA). Oversee the National Commission for the Eradication of Child Labor (CONAETI). (38; 81; 82) Collaborate with the National Registry of Agricultural Workers and Employers (RENATRE) in enforcing child labor laws in the agricultural sector. (4; 39; 83) Maintain a national hotline through which labor violations can be reported. (40)

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Justice and Human Rights	Maintain a tribunal for adjudicating disputes involving domestic work and hotlines for reporting cases of child labor and forced labor. (84)
Office for the Rescue and Care of Trafficking Victims	Provide emergency legal and other assistance to victims of labor and sex trafficking, including child victims. Under the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights. (85) Maintain Regional Offices that coordinate the provision of legal and social services to trafficking victims in the Provinces of Chaco, Chubut, La Pampa, La Rioja, Mendoza, Rio Negro, and Santa Fe. (51; 86; 87; 88) Maintain a hotline through which alleged crimes of trafficking in persons can be reported. (85)
Public Prosecutor's Anti-Trafficking Division (PROTEX)	Prosecute crimes of trafficking in persons for labor and commercial sexual exploitation, instruct federal personnel in the investigation of human trafficking, and design criminal policy related to human trafficking. (89; 90; 91) Manages Line 145, the anonymous national hotline that allows the public to report suspected trafficking cases. (92)
National Directorate of Criminal Intelligence, Human Trafficking Unit	Improve the ability of the Ministry of Security and federal police forces to collect information and investigate trafficking in persons. (92)
National Immigration Directorate	Direct the National Immigration Police, oversee the rights of migrants, and assist in investigating cases of transnational human trafficking. (93)
Federal Police	Conduct human trafficking investigations through its Trafficking in Persons Division. (31)
Federal Administration of Public Revenue (AFIP)	Ensure employer compliance with national laws, assist in workplace and labor-related inspections, and initiate prosecutions of labor violations through the Penal Section of its Social Security Directorate. (31; 94; 95)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Argentina took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MTESS that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including human resource allocation.

* The government does not publish this information.

In 2017, the MTESS released a new inspection protocol for child and adolescent labor and began updating the list of hazardous occupations prohibited for children. (101; 23) The government also created a national registry of child labor complaints that allows for monitoring of child labor cases and referral of these cases to social services at national, provincial, and municipal levels. (101) In coordination with the Argentine National Institute of Census and Statistics, ILO, and UNICEF, the MTESS also completed the

EANNA to better understand child labor, including in rural areas. (23; 35) In November, in connection with hosting the IV Global Conference on the Sustained Eradication of Child Labor, the MTESS published preliminary findings from the EANNA. (23; 35) The MTESS also conducted a raid on tobacco farms in Jujuy and found 800 unregistered workers, including child laborers; the number of child laborers found is unknown. (102)

Within the reporting period, the MTESS provided federal and provincial inspectors with child labor training, including training on improving child labor inspections and interagency coordination to address child labor. (23) However, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Argentina’s workforce, which includes approximately 17.7 million workers. According to the ILO’s technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Argentina should employ roughly 1,200 labor inspectors. (103) The government does not report on the number of provincial inspectors, so the totals reflect only the number of federal inspectors. Additionally, labor inspections in rural areas have decreased, and coordination between the MTESS and provincial inspectors have become less adequate. (92)

Federal labor inspectors are obligated to file a citation with the provincial labor authority of the relevant jurisdiction documenting any labor violation—including child labor—found during a site inspection, triggering an administrative process that may result in fines imposed. (23) Labor inspectors are also required to file a criminal complaint in the provincial courts of the relevant jurisdiction for any child labor violation detected. (23) The government reports that, in 2017, in every child labor case detected, children were referred to the relevant Provincial Commission for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor (COPRETI)—local interagency authorities responsible for coordinating social services for children rescued from child labor. Within the reporting period, the MTESS rescued 38 children resulting from 32 child labor violations. (23) In 2016, the MTESS reported 21 cases of child labor involving 458 victims. The MTESS reports the number of penalties imposed based on the number of cases, rather than on the number of victims, so in 2016 the number of penalties imposed appeared to be much lower than the number of violations. (99) In 2017, as was the case in 2016, the government imposed penalties on all child labor violations.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Argentina took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including human resource allocation.

‡ Data are from January 1, 2017, to August 31, 2017.

In 2017, the government assisted 207 child victims of sex and labor trafficking. (23; 92) Between January and August, the PROTEX prosecuted three cases and secured two convictions for commercial sexual exploitation of children as a result of human trafficking. (23) However, the total number of federal and provincial prosecutions involving the worst forms of child labor is unknown. Research could not determine whether agencies responsible for enforcing criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor had sufficient resources to carry out their mandates. (23)

The government conducted 64 human trafficking detection and prevention seminars, training 8,136 individuals including members of the security forces, Ministries of Labor and Social Development staff, teachers and students, members of the judiciary, hospital staff, and municipal and provincial officers. (92) Additionally, the government began implementing a new database system to track

human trafficking cases, and trained prosecutors and investigators in identifying and addressing cases of human trafficking. (23) La Quiaca, a border town in the northeast Jujuy Province, inaugurated a monitoring center that provides tools for detection and prosecution of human trafficking crimes. (92) However, UNHCR identified the need for the government to build the capacity of its judiciary and police to investigate cases of trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation, including those involving children, and recommended that the government increase funding for shelters and assist girl victims of trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. (104)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including coordination among agencies to provide services to child victims of commercial sexual exploitation.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
National Commission for the Eradication of Child Labor (CONAETI)	Coordinate national efforts to monitor and eliminate child labor and implement the National Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor. (38; 105; 106; 107; 108) Led by the MTESS and re-established in 2016 to comprise 16 government agencies, representatives from UNICEF, the ILO, industry associations, and labor unions. (38; 98; 109; 110; 99) In 2017, implemented the Awareness Campaign on Child Labor in Mar del Plata. (111)
Provincial Commissions for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor (COPRETI)	Coordinate efforts to prevent and eliminate child labor at the provincial level, including through Local Roundtables on Child Labor at the municipal level. (38; 110; 112; 113) Comprises representatives from government agencies, NGOs, labor unions, and religious institutions; there are 23 COPRETI. (110; 112) In 2017, organized awareness-raising activities for children and their parents, met with representatives of the Pilar municipality to discuss child labor eradication in the region, led a workshop on access to rights for children and adolescents at risk for child labor in garbage scavenging and recycling, and trained inspectors to detect child labor and human trafficking. (114; 115; 116; 117; 118) Also met in Parana to discuss building consensus and operative agreements between the COPRETI and the MTESS and review the Strategic National Plan for Prevention and Eradication of Adolescent Work. (119)
National Secretariat for Childhood, Adolescence, and Family (SENNAF)	Establish public policies through its Childhood and Adolescence Protectorate to secure the rights of children and adolescents, coordinate child protection efforts with other government ministries and NGOs, and assist trafficking victims. Overseen by the Ministry of Social Development. (120) In 2017, assisted 37 children rescued from transnational human trafficking and for the first time compiled national statistics on trafficking victim assistance by province. (23; 92; 99)
Coordinating Body for the Prevention of Child Labor and the Regulation of Adolescent Work (COODITIA)	Implement audits to detect child labor and irregular adolescent labor; train inspectors on auditing and monitoring child and adolescent work; promote the creation of special inspection units; and provide technical assistance and advice to inspectors. (101) In 2017, released a new inspection protocol to detect child labor and created the National Registry of Criminal Child Labor Complaints, which allows for monitoring the criminal procedure and intervention of social services at national, provincial, and municipal levels. (101)
Child and Adolescent Labor Monitoring Office (OTIA)	Conduct qualitative and quantitative research on child and adolescent labor to provide policy analysis and inform programming to eradicate child labor and regulate adolescent labor. Created through the Undersecretariat of Technical Programming and Labor Studies of the MTESS. (106; 110; 121) Research could not determine any actions taken by this coordinating body in 2017.
Coordinating Unit for Children and Adolescents in Danger of Commercial Sexual Exploitation	Provide guidance to relevant institutions; run workshops and research programs on commercial sexual exploitation; and assist children, adolescents, and their families. Formed within the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights. (122) Research could not determine any actions taken by this coordinating body in 2017.
Federal Council to Fight Human Trafficking and to Protect and Assist Victims	Coordinate government-wide efforts to combat human trafficking. Comprising representatives from the three branches of government and NGOs. Presided by the Under Secretary for Access to Justice of the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights. (4; 99) Led by the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights and oversees five thematic working groups. (23) In 2017, established five working groups and conducted four high-level meetings in the Provinces of Buenos Aires, Cordoba, La Rioja, and San Juan. (92)
Executive Council to Fight Human Trafficking and to Protect and Assist Victims	Coordinate executive branch efforts to combat human trafficking. Comprising representatives of the Ministries of Justice and Human Rights, Security, and Social Development, and the MTESS. (123) In 2017, it produced two bimonthly newsletters on government-led anti-human trafficking activities. (99)
Network of Businesses Against Child Labor	Develop initiatives to raise awareness of child labor and programs to prevent and eradicate child labor. Formed through a partnership among the MTESS, the CONAETI, and the businesses that comprise it. (105; 124; 125) Research could not determine any actions taken by this coordinating body in 2017.

Argentina

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

In 2017, the MTESS and Ministry of Social Development met with UNESCO to discuss research and strategies for prevention and eradication of child labor. (126) The MTESS and Attorney General of Salta signed an agreement to establish a more efficient referral policy for child labor cases. (23) The provincial government of Neuquén and the Argentine Union of Rural Workers and Stevedores signed a cooperative agreement to strengthen collaboration, coordination, and training on the detection and eradication of unregistered labor, including child labor. (127) In addition, the government signed cooperative agreements with two other countries, Colombia and Bolivia, to prevent and investigate trafficking in persons and assist and protect its victims. (92) The government also participated in seminars and roundtables with the Government of Peru to establish mechanisms for institutional cooperation and with the Government of Australia to share strategies to address trafficking. (92) The government granted access to provincial law enforcement agencies to the Integrated System of Trafficking in Persons Criminal Information, the database that allows federal law enforcement agencies to report on raids, victims rescued, and other data on trafficking cases. (92) Civil society reports, however, that coordination to provide services to child victims of commercial sexual exploitation is ineffective, causing program proposals to remain in the implementation stage, and their objectives and target groups to overlap. (128)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor‡

Policy	Description
Third National Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and the Regulation of Adolescent Work (2018–2022)†	Aims to prevent and eliminate child labor, including its worst forms, and to regulate adolescent work. Promotes the dissemination of information on child labor, strengthens the COPRETI and creates Local Roundtables on Child Labor, promotes families' livelihoods, strengthens the Labor Inspectorate, fosters civil society engagement on child labor issues, provides for a more inclusive educational system, raises awareness of the safety and health implications of child labor, and promotes institutional and legislative strengthening for child labor issues. (129; 130; 23; 131; 132)
Strategic Framework for Cooperation Between Argentina and the UN System for Development (2016–2020)	Establishes development priorities for Argentina as agreed upon by the government and the agencies comprising the UN System for Development in Argentina. Comprises five areas for cooperation, including the expansion of social protection support and the promotion of inclusive and sustainable economic growth, which prioritizes the prevention and elimination of child labor and forced labor, and the protection of adolescent workers. (133) In 2017, the government held an event to launch its National Report on Sustainable Development. (134; 135)
Interagency Agreement for Prevention of Child Labor and Protection of the Adolescent Worker†	Signed between the Ministries of Labor and Education to integrate child labor prevention and protection of adolescent workers in curricula and teacher training courses. (23)
National Plan of Action on Human Rights†	Contains over 200 actions to apply government policies in the following areas: (1) inclusion, non-discrimination, and equality; (2) public safety and non-violence; (3) memory, truth, justice, and reparations; (4) universal access to rights; and (5) civic culture and commitment to protecting human rights. (136) Includes actions focused on prevention and restitution of rights for children and adolescents exposed to violence and exploitation, including commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking, and child labor. (136; 137)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (138)

In November 2017, Argentina hosted the IV Global Conference on the Sustained Eradication of Child Labor, concluding with the adoption of the Buenos Aires Declaration. (139) This Declaration expresses a commitment to the eradication of child labor and forced labor through the adoption of a set of principles and actions, and urges other stakeholders to adopt the same. (140)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of programs in the agricultural sector to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor‡

Program	Description
Universal Child Allowance Program ( Asignación Universal )†	Government program funded in part by the World Bank that provides a cash transfer to unemployed parents and workers in the informal economy, contingent upon parents' fulfillment of health and education requirements for their children. (42; 110; 141) In 2017, expanded coverage from 3.7 million to 3.9 million children. (23)
RENATRE Awareness-Raising Campaigns†	RENATRE campaigns raise awareness of child labor in agriculture and inform families and children of the right to education. (142; 143) In 2017, the RENATRE conducted a campaign to raise awareness of child labor in San Luis. (144)
Ministry of Labor CONAETI Awareness-Raising Campaigns†	CONAETI/Network of Businesses Against Child Labor campaigns that make businesses and the general public aware of child labor in sourcing and supply chains. (4; 124) In 2017, implemented the Awareness Campaign on Child Labor in Mar del Plata. (111)
National Campaign Against Child Labor in Brickmaking*†	Developed by the MTESS and the Argentinean Brickworkers Union (UOLRA) in 2017. (145) Aims to develop policies that improve labor inspections in this sector and better support brickworkers so their children do not have to work. (145; 146)
USDOL-funded Projects to Support Youth Apprenticeship	USDOL-funded, $3 million Project to Promote Workplace-Based Training for Vulnerable Youth in Argentina (2016–2019) and $2.9 million Promoting Apprenticeship as a Path for Youth Employment in Argentina, Costa Rica, and Kenya through Global Apprenticeships Network (GAN) National Networks (2016–2019). Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
Good Harvest Day Care and Future Programs†	COPRETI/Network of Businesses Against Child Labor programs that aim to reduce child labor in the production of crops, in which work is often performed by entire families. Provides child care and recreational activities to children up to 9 years old. (10; 147; 148; 149; 23) Expanded coverage in 2017 by creating 11 new cultural and educational centers for children of rural workers that provided services to more than 1,200 children in San Juan Province. (23)
Program to Strengthen Schools in Agricultural Areas†	RENATRE program that provides infrastructural developments, operating costs, and pedagogical development to rural schools located in agricultural areas where children may be at risk of child labor. (40; 150; 151; 152)
More Care = Less Child Labor ( Mas Cuidado = Menos Trabajo Infantil )*†	Promotes the formulation and execution of local projects that articulate access to care, decent work, and good practices in critical sectors of child labor in the Buenos Aires Province. (153) Involves participation of unions, business leaders, government officials, and civil society. (153) Launched in June 2017.
Campaign to Report Human Trafficking ( La trata no se ve a simple vista )†	Government campaign to raise public awareness of human trafficking and to encourage use of the national human trafficking hotline. (88; 154)
Work is Not for Children†	A child care service funded by the provincial government of Santa Fe since 2010. In 2017, 35 centers provided services to 1,850 children. (23)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (4; 18; 88; 155; 156; 109; 23; 37; 157)

Reports indicate that the Universal Child Allowance Program has had a positive impact on the reduction of child labor since it began in 2009. (158; 159; 160) Programs that address child labor in the agricultural sector do not appear to address the full scope of the problem. Additionally, research found no evidence of programs that specifically target children engaged in street begging and performing, windshield washing, and guarding parked cars.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Argentina (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Publish federal and provincial information on the level of funding allocated to the Labor Inspectorate, the number of labor inspections conducted at worksites, the number of child labor penalties imposed that were collected, the number of criminal violations found, and the number of prosecutions initiated.	2015 – 2017
	Increase the number of labor inspectors responsible for enforcing laws on child labor to meet the ILO's technical advice, and ensure that inspections are conducted in rural areas.	2015 – 2017

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Publish information on the total number of federal and provincial inspectors responsible for enforcing labor laws nationwide.	2017
	Publish federal and provincial information on the total number of children removed from child labor nationwide, including whether they received appropriate protective services, and clarify the mechanisms by which labor law enforcement and social services agencies reciprocally refer cases.	2014 – 2017
	Publish federal and provincial information regarding the adequacy of the budget and resources available to agencies responsible for enforcing criminal laws on the worst forms of child labor.	2014 – 2017
Coordination	Improve coordination of program implementation to provide services to child victims of commercial sexual exploitation.	2017
	Improve coordination between the MTESS and provincial labor inspectors to adequately carry out inspections in rural areas.	2017
Social Programs	Expand the coverage and scope of programs that target child labor in the agricultural sector.	2012 – 2017
	Develop specific programs that target child labor in sectors where child labor is prevalent, including street begging and performing, windshield washing, and guarding of parked cars.	2009 – 2017
	Extend youth employment and vocational training programs to children ages 16 and 17, while ensuring these programs allow children to complete their compulsory schooling.	2015 – 2017

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2017, Armenia made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Despite new initiatives to address child labor, Armenia is receiving this assessment because it continued to implement a law that delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor. The government has lacked a functioning Labor Inspectorate since the 2014 repeal of Article 34 of the Labor Code, which previously established the government's authority to conduct routine labor inspections. Since that time, the government has lacked a functioning labor inspection mechanism to monitor, inspect, and enforce child labor laws, including a mechanism with the authority to conduct unannounced inspections. Otherwise, the government made efforts by pursuing continued inspection reform, including establishing the Health Inspection Body, which will have limited ability to monitor prohibitions on hazardous child labor when functioning.

However, children in Armenia perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. The government also lacks a mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address all forms of child labor, including its worst forms. In addition, no programs exist to aid children engaged in work activities in agriculture.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Armenia perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (1; 2; 3; 4; 5; 6; 7; 8) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Armenia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	7.0 (24,602)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	95.4
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	8.6
Primary Completion Rate (%)		99.4

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (9)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from National Child Labor Survey, 2015. (10)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including planting and harvesting potatoes (1; 2; 3; 4; 5; 6; 7; 8)
	Raising livestock, including cattle breeding, cattle herding, and shepherding (2; 3; 5; 7; 11)
Industry	Construction, activities unknown (1; 5; 6; 7; 12; 8)
Services	Vehicle maintenance (3; 7)
	Selling food (7)
	Street work, including gathering scrap metal, selling flowers, and begging (1; 2; 3; 5; 12; 13; 14)
	Working in shops (5; 7)
	Dancing in clubs (3; 5)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3; 6; 15; 16; 17; 18) Forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3; 6; 16)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Although Article 38 of the Constitution of Armenia and Article 6 of the Law of the Republic of Armenia on Education guarantee free universal education, children from ethnic minority and low-income families continue to have reduced access to education. (19; 20) Children of families that travel for seasonal labor and work on farms in remote rural areas are also less likely to be enrolled in school and are vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, including forced child labor in agriculture. (8)

In addition, the Law on Public Education requires all schools to be inclusive for children with disabilities by 2025. (19; 21; 22) However, NGOs report that children with disabilities face difficulty accessing mainstream education due to the inaccessibility of school buildings, lack of community-based support services, and general social stigma against individuals with disabilities. (19; 23; 24) As a result of these barriers, more than 70 percent of children with disabilities in the care of the state and almost 20 percent of children with disabilities in the care of their families reportedly do not attend school. (24; 25)

Despite government efforts to decrease institutionalization of children, nearly 3,500 children remain in government boarding schools, orphanages, and special education institutions. (26) These children are more likely to experience physical and psychological violence and were at a higher risk of becoming victims of human trafficking. (6; 19; 26) Children living in these institutions were reportedly also vulnerable to exploitation in child labor, including in labor within the institutions. (27; 28)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Armenia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Armenia’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including definitions of forced labor and light work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Articles 15 and 17 of the Labor Code; Article 57 of the Constitution (29; 20)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 257 of the Labor Code (29)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Law on Approval of the List of Occupations and Work That Are Likely to be Heavy and Hazardous for Persons Under the Age of 18 Years, Pregnant Women, and Women Taking Care of a Child under the Age of 1 Year; Articles 140, 148–149, 153, 155, 209, 249, and 257 of the Labor Code (29; 30)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 57 of the Constitution; Article 3 of the Labor Code; Articles 132 and 132.2 of the Criminal Code (29; 20; 31)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 132 and 132.2 of the Criminal Code (31)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 132.2, 166, and 261–263 of the Criminal Code (31)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 63, 165, 166.1, and 266 of the Criminal Code (31)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment
State Compulsory	Yes	18	Article 11 of the Law on Conscription (32)
State Voluntary	Yes	18	Articles 4 and 10 of the Law on Military Service (33)
Non-state	No	18	Article 29 of the Law on the Rights of the Child; Articles 63, 165, and 224 of the Criminal Code (31; 34)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17	Article 18 of the Law on Education (35)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 38 of the Constitution; Article 6 of the Law on Education (20; 35)

The Labor Code allows for children ages 14 and 15 to work restricted hours with the permission of a parent or guardian, but does not list specific activities that constitute light work. (29; 36) In addition, the Constitution, Criminal Code, and Labor Code prohibit forced labor, but enforcement of this prohibition is hindered by the lack of a definition of “forced labor” in Armenian law. (37)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, the absence of worksite inspections conducted at the national level in Armenia impeded the enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Health Inspection Body*	Enforce a limited range of labor laws and impose sanctions for violations, as one of a variety of inspection mandates related to public health. In particular, enforce occupational safety and health provisions through the Department of Employee Occupational and Health Safety. (8) This body was created in April 2017, staffing was approved in October, and recruitment began in November. (8)
Main Department on Especially Serious Crimes Within the Investigative Committee	Investigate cases of child trafficking and the commercial sexual exploitation of children referred to the Investigative Committee by the police. (23; 38)
Department on Defending the Rights of Minors and Combating Domestic Violence Within the Police	Identify and conduct preliminary investigation of crimes in which children are victims or perpetrators. (23; 38) Enforce laws against the worst forms of child labor under the General Department of Criminal Intelligence. (23; 39) Refer identified crimes to the Investigative Committee for further investigation. (23)
Anti-Trafficking Unit Within the Police	Identify and conduct preliminary investigation of crimes related to child trafficking and the commercial sexual exploitation of children through a staff of seven field officers. Operate within the Department of Combating High-Tech related (Cyber) Crimes, Human Trafficking, Illegal Migration, and Terrorism of the General Department on Combating Organized Crime. (40) Refer identified crimes to the Investigative Committee for further investigation. (23)
Police Hotline	Receive complaints related to human trafficking and migration issues. (6)

* Agency was created during the reporting period. (8)

As part of a broader inspection reform agenda, Armenia’s Labor Inspectorate was abolished in 2013, and responsibility for conducting labor inspections was transferred to the new State Health Inspectorate, created the same year. In 2015, subsequent changes to legislation regulating labor inspections left the State Health Inspectorate unable to conduct labor inspections, beginning in 2015. (37; 41) In 2017, continued inspection reform led to the dissolution of the State Health Inspectorate and the creation of the Health Inspection Body, which is tasked with monitoring occupational safety and health standards for employees, along with monitoring a variety of public health standards. (42) The Health Inspection Body also has the ability to monitor compliance with legislation protecting workers under the age of 18, but cannot proactively inspect for child labor issues. (42) Additional legislation and regulations need to be passed for the Health Inspection Body to begin conducting inspections. (8) As a result, in 2017 the Health Inspection Body was unable to monitor or enforce child labor laws in Armenia. (37; 41)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, the absence of worksite inspections conducted at the national level in Armenia impeded the enforcement of child labor laws (Table 6).

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown	Unknown
Number of Labor Inspectors	60 (37)	9 (8)
Inspectorate Authorized to Assess Penalties	Yes (43)	Yes (8)

Unannounced Inspections Permitted	No (37)	No (8)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	No (37)	No (8)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (42)	Yes (8)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (42)	No (45)

The Health Inspection Body is authorized to hire 23 occupational health and safety oversight inspectors, including 15 civil servants and 8 contractors. (8) This is a significant decrease from the 60 labor inspectors employed by the former State Health Inspectorate, which already had reduced staffing levels from the 146 labor inspectors employed by the former State Labor Inspectorate. (46) The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Armenia's workforce, which includes over 1.5 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 20,000 workers in transition economies, Armenia would employ roughly 75 labor inspectors. (47; 48; 49)

A third of labor inspectors in Armenia are contractors rather than public servants. While civil servants in Armenia must receive training at least once every 3 years, there is no requirement that contractors receive regular training. Officials have expressed concern that the high proportion of contracted inspectors will negatively impact the overall training level and competency of the body of inspectors over time. (46)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Armenia took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including investigation planning.

Armenia

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Training for Investigators
Initial Training for New Employees	Yes (44)	Yes (44)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (44)	N/A
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (41)	Yes (50)
Number of Investigations	2 (44)	Unknown
Number of Violations Found	1 (44)	1 (50)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	1 (44)	1 (22)
Number of Convictions	0 (41)	0 (22)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (43)	Yes (43)

The government reports that almost 300 police officers and investigators are engaged in investigations of crimes involving children. The Main Department on Especially Serious Crimes within the Investigative Committee has 40 investigators, 7 of whom specialize in investigating human trafficking cases. (38; 43; 51) The Investigative Committee requires that its personnel receive training at least once every 2 years. (43) In 2017, 327 investigators from the Investigative Committee participated in criminal justice trainings on trafficking in persons. An additional 21 Investigative Committee investigators received training specific to child trafficking, and 30 investigators participated in a seminar on trafficking and sexual assault of children. (50) An additional 119 police officers who work on juvenile investigations received training on combatting trafficking in persons. (50)

Child victims discovered during the course of criminal investigations are referred to the Fund for Armenian Relief Children’s Center, where they are provided with specialized social services. (43) A source reported that because not all the children who are referred to social service providers by the police are officially registered as victims, official statistics for begging, forced begging, and commercial sexual exploitation may underreport the scope of the problem. (3)

Research found that although the police work with social service providers when conducting the pre-investigation, the Investigative Committee does not typically work with social service providers to ensure the well-being of the children during the investigation period. (3) In addition, a source reported that law enforcement officials do not receive adequate specialized training on interviewing child victims of crime, which in some cases can prevent local investigators from collecting sufficient evidence to build a prosecutable case. (3; 41) The government’s implementation of the provisions on victim and witness protection in the Criminal Procedural Code continued to be inadequate, including with regard to victim-centered prosecution, due to the lack of an appropriate mechanism and insufficient funding for these efforts. (6; 52)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
National Commission on the Protection of Child Rights	Coordinate activities of state bodies responsible for child protection, assist in developing state policy and programs aimed at the protection of children’s rights, and assist in developing solutions to new child welfare problems as they arise. Facilitate cooperation between state and local government and NGOs. (39) Maintain a working group to prevent child begging. (39)
Ministerial Council to Combat Human Trafficking	Implement, coordinate, and monitor government efforts on human trafficking. (16; 39) Chaired by the Deputy Prime Minister. (16)
Inter-Agency Working Group Against Trafficking in Persons	Advise, organize, and implement decisions made by the Ministerial Council to Combat Human Trafficking. (16) Composed of officials from all government entities; non-governmental stakeholders participate in regular meetings. (16; 39)

The National Commission on the Protection of Child Rights coordinates government efforts to prevent child begging, and the Ministerial Council to Combat Human Trafficking coordinates government efforts on child trafficking. (16; 39) However, Armenia lacks a mechanism to coordinate efforts to prevent child labor in other forms of street work, the service sector, and agriculture.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Strategic Program for the Protection of Children’s Rights	Includes an Action Plan for 2017-2021 that calls for the development and introduction of oversight and monitoring mechanisms to prevent the involvement of children in the worst forms of child labor. The action plan includes a component on developing and introducing oversight and monitoring mechanisms for the protection of children involved in the worst forms of child labor. (22)
Concept on Combating Violence Against Children	Defines government priorities for combating violence against children and outlines a list of related activities. Addresses labor exploitation of children, especially in rural communities, and commercial sexual exploitation of children, especially child trafficking. (38)
National Plan of Action Against Trafficking in Persons and Exploitation (2016–2018)	Aims to improve the legal framework and enforcement of legislation related to trafficking in and exploitation of children. Planned activities include developing tools for identification of the worst forms of child labor, as well as a guide for the proper identification and referral of child trafficking victims. (37; 53)

The UNDAF Plan for Armenia, which focuses on poverty reduction, lacks specific provisions on child labor. (24) In addition, research found that the National Plan of Action Against Trafficking in Persons and Exploitation lacks funding for identified activities and is not actively monitored for progress. (50) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Concept on Combating Violence Against Children during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of programs to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor‡

Program	Description
Country Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce Child Labor (CLEAR)	USDOL-funded capacity-building project implemented by the ILO in 11 countries to build local and national capacity of governments to address child labor. Additional information is available on the USDOL website. (54)
Global Research on Child Labor Measurement and Policy Development (MAP)	USDOL-funded research project implemented by the ILO, which supported the publication of a National Child Labor Survey in 2016. Additional information is available on the USDOL website. (55)
Family Benefits Program†	Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs-funded poverty-mitigation program for families with children recorded in the Family Poverty Assessment System. Families receive a monthly payment based on their financial situation, the number of children in the family, and the geographical location of their home. (43)
UNICEF Country Program for 2016–2020	Improve child protection systems, including through expanding programs for children in extreme poverty, improving social integration of children with disabilities, and developing a victim-witness protection system. (56)
Day Care Centers†	Government-supported day care centers that provide alternatives to working children and daytime centers that provide services for children with special needs. (40)
Shelter for Victims of Human Trafficking†	Government shelter co-funded and run by the United Methodist Committee on Relief-Armenia that provides medical, psychological, social, and legal services to victims of human trafficking; access to education for children; and vocational training for adult victims. (17) In 2017, the government allocated $39,000 for the program. (50)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (43; 57)

Although the Government of Armenia has implemented programs to address child labor, research found no evidence that it has carried out programs to assist children engaged in child labor in street work or in agriculture.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Armenia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that Armenian law specifies the types of light work acceptable for children ages 14–15.	2014 – 2017
	Facilitate enforcement of labor law by codifying a definition of forced labor.	2016 – 2017
Enforcement	Establish a functioning Labor Inspectorate by ensuring that the legal framework on inspections clearly empowers the Health Inspection Body to monitor, inspect, and enforce child labor laws. Ensure that the Health Inspection Body's mandate includes the ability to conduct quality inspections, including targeted, complaint-based, and unannounced inspections; and that data on the number and type of inspections, violations, and penalties are made publicly available.	2017
	Make information on the Health Inspection Body's funding publicly available.	2017
	Strengthen labor inspection by increasing the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO technical advice and ensuring that labor inspectors are civil servants rather than contractors.	2017
	Protect children by providing law enforcement officials with specialized training on interviewing child victims of crime, and by ensuring that law enforcement officials coordinate with social service providers during investigations.	2014 – 2017
	Implement and adequately fund a victim-witness protection mechanism for criminal proceedings.	2011 – 2017
Coordination	Establish coordinating mechanisms to combat child labor, including all its worst forms.	2009 – 2017
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into national policies, including the UNDAF Plan for Armenia.	2011 – 2017
	Ensure that the National Plan of Action Against Trafficking in Persons and Exploitation has sufficient oversight and funding to allow for effective implementation.	2017
	Take steps to implement the Concept on Combating Violence Against Children.	2016 – 2017
Social Programs	Ensure that all children, including children from low-income families and those belonging to ethnic minorities, have equal access to education.	2010 – 2017
	Increase efforts to prevent institutionalization of children and to ensure the safety and well-being of children currently residing in government institutions.	2015 – 2017
	Ensure that mainstream education is accessible to children with special education needs and children with disabilities by improving the accessibility of the physical infrastructure, expanding community-based support services, and ensuring that social stigmas against disabilities do not prevent children from accessing schools.	2014 – 2017
	Implement programs to address child labor in street work and in agriculture.	2009 – 2017

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2017, Azerbaijan made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Despite new initiatives to address child labor, Azerbaijan is receiving this assessment because it implemented a regression in law that delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor. In 2017, the government extended a moratorium on all labor inspections through 2021, which will leave potential violations of child labor laws undetected in workplaces.

Otherwise, the government made efforts by opening a new shelter and rehabilitation center for vulnerable children and continuing a cash transfer program for vulnerable families. Children in Azerbaijan engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Children also perform dangerous tasks in street work. Legal protections only apply to workers with written employment contracts, leaving self-employed children and children working outside of formal employment relationships vulnerable to exploitation. In addition, research found limited evidence of government programs to address child labor in agriculture and street work, the sectors in which child labor is most prevalent.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Azerbaijan engage in the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation. (1; 2; 3; 4; 5) Children also perform dangerous tasks in street work. (6; 5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Azerbaijan.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	4.5 (70,034)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	94.3
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	4.9
Primary Completion Rate (%)		111.3

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (7)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Child Labor Survey (SIMPOC), 2005. (8)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including production of cotton, tea, and tobacco† (3; 5; 9; 10)
Industry	Construction, activities unknown (11)
Services	Street work, including begging and vending (6; 5) Washing and repairing cars (11; 5; 9; 12)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (6; 1; 3; 4; 5) Forced begging (6; 4; 5)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Child labor in Azerbaijan occurs in the agriculture sector; however, there is little recent data to indicate how many children are currently engaged in child labor in this or other sectors. (5)

Children in Azerbaijan are trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation both domestically and transnationally. Street children, many of whom become homeless after they are released from government-run orphanages and correctional facilities, are particularly vulnerable to human trafficking. (1) Children living in border towns and economically depressed rural communities are also especially vulnerable to human trafficking. (13)

Although Article 5 of the Education Law guarantees free universal education, children with disabilities face difficulty accessing mainstream education. Barriers to education include inaccessibility of the physical infrastructure of schools, and a general social stigma against individuals with disabilities. (6; 14) As a result of these barriers, only an estimated 10 to 17 percent of children with disabilities are able to attend school. The remaining children are either educated at home or do not receive an education. (6; 14)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Azerbaijan has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Azerbaijan's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	15	Article 42 of the Labor Code (15)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 250 of the Labor Code (15)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 98 and 250–254 of the Labor Code; Decision 58 of the Cabinet of Ministers in 2000; Article 9 of the Law on the Rights of the Child (15; 16; 17)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 35 of the Constitution; Article 144-2 of the Criminal Code (18; 19)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		The Law on Trafficking in Persons; Articles 106, 144-1, 144-3, and 173 of the Criminal Code (19; 20)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 108, 151, 152, 171, 171-1, and 242–244 of the Criminal Code (19)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 28 of the Law on the Rights of the Child; Article 170 of the Criminal Code (19; 17)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment
State Compulsory	Yes	18	Articles 2, 3, and 12 of the Law on Military Obligation and Military Service (21)
State Voluntary	Yes	19	Article 36 of the Law on Military Obligation and Military Service (21)
Non-state	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Articles 5 and 19 of the Education Law (22)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 5 of the Education Law; Article 22 of the Law on the Rights of the Child (17; 22)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Azerbaijan's Labor Code applies only to workers with written employment contracts. (15) As a result, the law's minimum age protections do not apply to children working outside formal employment relationships or children who are self-employed. (23; 10) The government introduced both administrative and criminal penalties in 2014 for employing people without an effective employment agreement. (3) Although this strengthened protections for working children by attempting to ensure that all working children are employed under a contract, self-employed children and children working outside formal employment relationships remain unprotected.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, the absence of worksite inspections conducted at the national level in Azerbaijan impeded the enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Protection of Population (MLSP)	Enforce labor laws related to the worst forms of child labor through the State Labor Inspection Service (SLIS). (24)
Ministry of Internal Affairs (MIA)	Function as the central executive agency responsible for public security and prevention of criminal offenses, including child trafficking and begging. (25) Through the Anti-Trafficking Division (ATD), enforce human trafficking laws, investigate human trafficking violations, and enforce criminal laws related to the use of children in illicit activities. Refer children who are victims of human trafficking to social services for assistance with school enrollment, participation in recreational activities, and obtaining proper documentation. (2)
Commission on Juvenile Issues and Protection of Minors' Rights	Coordinate the enforcement of laws related to the worst forms of child labor. Located in the Cabinet of Ministers. (24)
National Referral Mechanism for Trafficking in Persons (NRM)	Refer victims of human trafficking to the relevant authorities to ensure the protection of their rights. (26) Refer human trafficking cases to the ATD for prosecution. Led by the National Coordinator and the Deputy-Minister of the MIA and counts a large number of government agencies as members, including the MLSP and the State Committee on Family, Women and Children's Affairs (SCFWCA). (4)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, the absence of worksite inspections conducted at the national level in Azerbaijan impeded the enforcement of child labor laws (Table 6).

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (6)	Unknown (5)

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (6)	Yes (5)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	No (6)	No (6)

In 2016, the government suspended all routine and unannounced labor inspections, although the inspectorate may still visit a workplace upon receipt of a formal, written complaint. (6) In 2017, this moratorium was extended through 2021. (5) While inspections may still occur if a complaint is filed, no inspections were conducted in 2017. The government did not provide information on how the one child labor violation detected was identified in the absence of labor inspections. (5)

In 2017, labor inspectors received training from the ILO on enforcement of labor laws, including child labor laws. The Ministry of Labor and Social Protection of Population (MLSPP) additionally conducted six regional workshops aimed at improving awareness of child labor laws among regional labor inspectors and other members of local government. (5) Limited evidence suggests that the institutionalized training program on child labor issues, including hazardous child labor, may be inadequate. (3) Government officials also assess the number of inspectors as insufficient to fully enforce child labor laws in Azerbaijan. (6; 5)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Azerbaijan took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including referring victims to appropriate services.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Training for Investigators
Initial Training for New Employees	Unknown (6)	Yes (5)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A	Yes (5)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (28)	Yes (29)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (6)	190 (5)
Number of Violations Found	240 (8)	165 (5)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (6)	124 (5)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (6)	124 (5)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (6)	Yes (5)

In 2017, the Ministry of Internal Affairs (MIA) conducted 1,500 operations to identify children engaged in street begging and identified 570 child beggars. (5) However, NGOs report that children were not referred to social services and resumed work almost immediately after being identified by law enforcement officials. (6)

In 2016, the government reported that it created a database to collect information on crimes against children, including child trafficking, street work, and begging. (6) In 2017, it released no information on the database or any data it has collected. (5)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has not adequately established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor. Although the State Committee on Family, Women and Children's Affairs coordinates child-related policies, the committee's effectiveness as a coordinating body is limited. (30) The Committee's staff members have reported they lack the legal authority to give instructions to other government organizations about child labor and child welfare matters, which limits the Committee's ability to harmonize policies across the different agencies. (30)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 8). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
State Program on Azerbaijani Youth (2017–2021) †	Guides government policy on youth development, and includes a provision on increasing awareness of trafficking in persons risks among youth. (29)
National Action Plan on Combating Trafficking in Human Beings (NAP) (2014–2018)	Aims to identify and combat the causes of vulnerability to human trafficking in Azerbaijan through improved coordination among the government agencies, NGOs, and intergovernmental organizations. Also seeks to improve the identification and provision of services to victims. (31) Places special emphasis on protecting the rights of child victims and preventing child trafficking. (13; 31)

Although the government of Azerbaijan has adopted the National Action Plan on Combating Trafficking in Human Beings (NAP) and the State Program on Azerbaijani Youth, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor, including forced begging and hazardous child labor in agriculture. In addition, the NAP addresses many prior international recommendations, but lacks clear indicators of the source and amount of funding. As a result, the NAP lacks the funding necessary for full implementation of associated programs. (13)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 9). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including funding.

Table 9. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
USDOL-Funded Projects	USDOL-funded projects supporting the elimination of child labor in Azerbaijan include Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues (GAP), implemented in approximately 40 countries by the ILO; and Global Research on Child Labor Measurement and Policy Development (MAP), implemented by the ILO in 11 countries. (32; 33) For additional information about USDOL's work, please visit our website.
Decent Work Country Program (2016–2020)	Aims to promote decent employment opportunities and improve social protection and labor administration mechanisms. Includes a focus on youth employment. (34) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Decent Work Country Program during the reporting period.
Centers for Vulnerable Children †	Government-funded program comprising 13 centers that provide social services to vulnerable children, including street children. (35) NGOs reported that the centers are effective in providing services and may contribute to a reduction in child labor. (3) In November 2017, the MLSPP opened an additional shelter and rehabilitation center to provide services to vulnerable children. (29)
Resources for Child Trafficking Victims †	The government maintains several shelters for human trafficking victims, including the MLSPP-run Victim Assistance Center, the MIA-run Baku Shelter, and the State Migration Service-run Reception center. (36) In addition, the government maintains the Program of Social Rehabilitation and Social Reintegration of Child Victims of Trafficking to assist with the social reintegration of child trafficking victims. (37; 38) In 2017, the Victim Assistance Center organized multiple awareness-raising events throughout the country to raise awareness about human trafficking among youth. (29)
Targeted Social Assistance Program †	MLSPP-run program that continued to provide cash transfers to low-income families in 2017. (39)
MIA Identification Document Program †	Provides identification documents to undocumented minors who may be street children or victims of human trafficking. (3)

Although the government has implemented programs to address child trafficking, research found little evidence to indicate it has carried out programs to assist children working in agriculture or on the streets.

NGO-run shelters that are tasked by the NAP with providing victim services do not receive consistent funding from the government. Directors of these shelters note that the unpredictable nature of funding prevents long-term planning and capacity building of shelters. (40; 28; 29) Child victims have limited access to facilities that offer specialized care. (29) One shelter that provides such services does not receive consistent government funding, and most of its staff worked on a voluntary basis due to the lack of government funding and an inability to receive foreign assistance caused by the government's restrictions on NGOs over the last three years. (40; 29)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Azerbaijan (Table 10).

Table 10. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that all working children are protected by law, including children working without a written employment agreement or outside of a formal employment relationship and children who are self-employed.	2011 – 2017
	Criminally prohibit the recruitment of children under 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2017
Enforcement	Resume routine, targeted, and unannounced labor inspections to ensure child labor laws are enforced.	2016 – 2017
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to facilitate effective enforcement of child labor laws.	2016 – 2017
	Ensure that labor inspectors receive sufficient training on the enforcement of laws pertaining to child labor.	2014 – 2017
	Publish information on the Labor Inspectorate’s funding.	2015 – 2017
	Publish complete data from the database on crimes against children.	2014 – 2017
Coordination	Establish coordinating mechanisms to combat child labor, including its worst forms.	2016 – 2017
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor, such as forced begging and hazardous work in agriculture.	2016 – 2017
	Ensure the National Action Plan on Combating Trafficking in Human Beings receives the funding necessary for full implementation of associated programs.	2014 – 2017
Social Programs	Ensure that children with disabilities have equal access to education.	2016 – 2017
	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2013 – 2017
	Institute programs to address child labor in agriculture and on the streets.	2009 – 2017
	Ensure that NGO-run shelters for victims of human trafficking are sufficiently and consistently funded to provide services to victims effectively, as dictated by the NAP and NRM.	2015 – 2017

In 2017, Bahrain made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate child labor. The Labor Market Regulatory Authority developed a handbook on the National Referral System for Victims of Trafficking in Persons and opened a shelter for victims. It also conducted training on human trafficking issues for all police officers. Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Bahrain engage in child labor in domestic work and selling items on the street. The government has not conducted research to determine the nature and extent of child labor in the country. The law does not sufficiently prohibit commercial sexual exploitation of children.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Bahrain engage in child labor in domestic work and selling items on the street. (1; 2) Data on key indicators on children's work and education are not available from the sources used in this report (Table 1).

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		99.5

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (3)

Source for all other data: Data were unavailable from Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis, 2018. (4)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Selling products on the street (1) Domestic work (1; 2)

The government has not conducted or participated in research to determine the extent to which children are engaged in child labor, including its worst forms. (5; 6)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Bahrain has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor (cont)

Convention	Ratification
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Bahrain's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of commercial sexual exploitation of children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	15	Article 24 of the Labor Law (7)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 27 of the Labor Law (7)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 1–2 of Ministerial Order No. 23 of 2013 (8)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 1 of the Law on Combating Trafficking in Persons (9)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 1 of the Law on Combating Trafficking in Persons (9)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Article 1 of the Law on Combating Trafficking in Persons; Articles 39 and 44 of the Child Law; Articles 324–325 of the Penal Code (9; 10; 11)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 59 and 68 of the Child Law; Article 30 of the Law on Hallucinogenic Substances and Drugs (10; 12)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment
State Compulsory	N/A*
State Voluntary	Yes	18	Article 24 of the Defense Force Act (13)
Non-state	Yes	18	Article 59 of the Child Law; Article 113 of the Penal Code (10; 11)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Article 1 of the Education Act (14)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 7 of the Education Act (14)

The minimum age protection in the Labor Law does not apply to children in certain sectors, such as domestic work. (7)

The law does not sufficiently prohibit commercial sexual exploitation because offering and using children for prostitution and offering, procuring, and using children for production of pornography and pornographic performances are not criminally prohibited. (10; 11)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Development that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Development	Enforce child labor laws, along with the Labor Market Regulatory Authority. Take the lead in initial mediation to resolve violations of the Labor Law. (6) Refer violations that are not resolved through mediation to the Public Prosecutor's Office. Maintain a hotline to receive criminal complaints of child labor, including its worst forms. (6)
Labor Market Regulatory Authority	Issue work visas to ensure that individuals coming to Bahrain as migrant workers are at least age 18. Enforce the Law on Combating Trafficking in Persons. (6) Maintain a hotline to assist migrant workers. (6)

Organization/Agency	Role
Police Department of the Ministry of Interior	Enforce criminal laws that prohibit the worst forms of child labor. Oversee the 12-person Criminal Investigations Directorate that investigates potential cases of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. (6) Refer any identified child victims of human trafficking or illicit activities to the Center for Child Protection. Maintain a hotline to receive criminal complaints of child trafficking. (6)
Public Prosecutor's Office	Prosecute crimes related to child labor and human trafficking. (6)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Bahrain took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Development that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown	Unknown* (6)
Number of Labor Inspectors	33 (2)	33 (6)

Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (2)	Yes (6)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (2)	Yes (6)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (2; 16)	Yes (6; 16)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (2)	Yes (6)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (2)	Yes (6)

In 2017, the Ministry of Labor and Social Development employed 33 labor inspectors. The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Bahrain's workforce, which includes approximately 831,600 workers. (17) According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Bahrain would employ roughly 55 labor inspectors. (18; 19)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, the government's criminal law enforcement agencies appeared to function adequately in addressing child labor (Table 7).

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Training for Investigators
Initial Training for New Employees	Unknown	Unknown* (6)

* The government does not publish this information.

In 2017, the Labor Market Regulatory Authority, in cooperation with UN agencies, conducted training for all police officers on human trafficking. (6)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
Child Protection Center	Coordinate the efforts of five government ministries to address cases of child abuse, including child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. Led by the Ministry of Labor and Social Development. (2) In 2017, members of the Center met weekly. (6)
National Committee on Combating Trafficking in Persons	Coordinate policies and laws to combat human trafficking and organize educational and outreach campaigns to raise awareness on trafficking in persons. (20) Led by the Labor Market Regulatory Authority and comprising representatives from eight state entities and NGOs. (1) In 2017, the Labor Market Regulatory Authority developed a handbook on the National Referral System for Victims of Trafficking in Persons, which highlights the roles and responsibilities of government agencies and NGOs in combating human trafficking. (21)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that the government has established policies to address child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded programs that may contribute to eliminating or preventing child labor, which cover the main sectors in which child labor has been identified in the country (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Child Protection Center†	Provide services, including educational and psychological services and, in extreme cases, placement in foster care, for children who have been subjected to abuse and negligence, including child laborers. (22; 23) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken under this program during the reporting period.
Expat Protection Center*†	Labor Market Regulatory Authority's shelter that provides services to the victims of human trafficking. (24) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken under this program during the reporting period.

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Bahrain.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Bahrain (Table 10).

Table 10. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law's minimum age provisions do not exclude children in certain sectors, including in domestic work.	2014 – 2017
	Ensure that laws criminally prohibit and have criminal penalties for all aspects of commercial sexual exploitation of children.	2016 – 2017

Table 10. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Publish data on Labor Inspectorate funding and the number of inspections conducted, including at worksites.	2009 – 2017
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO technical advice.	2017
	Publish data on initial training for criminal investigators.	2013 – 2017
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant forms of child labor.	2009 – 2017
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2009 – 2017
	Implement activities under the programs of the Child Protection Center and the Expat Protection Center.	2017

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2017, Bangladesh made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government extended its Child Labor National Plan of Action through 2021. The Department of Inspection for Factories and Establishments also provided comprehensive training to a majority of labor inspectors, and institutionalized the use of a factory inspection checklist that includes child labor components. However, children in Bangladesh engage in the worst forms of child labor, including forced child labor in the production of dried fish and bricks. Children also perform dangerous tasks in the production of garments and leather goods. In addition, the labor law does not prohibit children from working in informal economic sectors, and does not specify the activities and number of hours per week of light work that are permitted for children ages 12 and 13. Moreover, the number of labor inspectors is insufficient for the size of Bangladesh's workforce, and fines are inadequate to deter child labor law violations.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Bangladesh engage in the worst forms of child labor, including forced child labor in the production of dried fish and bricks. (1; 2) Children also perform dangerous tasks in production of garments and leather goods. (3; 4; 5; 6; 7) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Bangladesh.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	4.3 (1,326,411)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	89.4
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	1.9

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

	Forced begging (51; 16)
	Use in illicit activities, including smuggling and selling drugs (13; 16; 53)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (54; 51; 55; 15)
	Forced domestic work (13; 56; 51; 14; 15)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Many children in Bangladesh engage in dangerous work in the informal manufacturing sector. (3; 4; 5; 6) Children working in informal garment production work as many as 16 hours a day and often carry heavy loads, use hazardous machinery, and handle chemicals without protective equipment. (7; 33) Children employed in tanneries similarly lack protective equipment and experience continuous exposure to heavy metals, formaldehyde, and other hazardous chemicals. (4; 5) In addition, some children in Bangladesh work under forced labor conditions in the dried fish sector and in the production of bricks to help pay off family debts to local moneylenders. (1; 2)

Since August 2017, the Burmese military has engaged in continued violence and acts of ethnic cleansing, resulting in more than 700,000 members of the Rohingya ethnic minority fleeing from Burma to Bangladesh. (57; 58) Nearly 400,000 of those displaced are children, some of whom are subjected to trafficking and labor exploitation in Bangladesh. (14; 57; 59; 60) There are reports that Rohingya children are exploited in bonded labor in the fish drying industry, predominantly found in the city of Cox’s Bazar, while some Rohingya boys work on farms, in construction, or on fishing boats. (52; 14; 60; 58) Girls typically work in domestic service, in the homes of Bangladeshi families living up to 150 kilometers from the Rohingya refugee camps. (52; 61; 62; 63; 64; 65; 60; 58; 66) Research found that some young girls who were promised jobs in domestic service were instead forced into commercial sexual exploitation. (60; 58; 66)

According to the National Education Policy, education is free and compulsory in Bangladesh through eighth grade (age 14). However, several factors contribute to children not attending school, such as inadequate access to water and sanitation facilities and the costs associated with education, including books and uniforms. (10; 67) In addition, due to their lack of documentation, Rohingya refugee children are not permitted to attend school in Bangladesh. The government has permitted UNHCR to provide some limited, basic education services to Rohingya. (15; 63)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Bangladesh has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Bangladesh's legal framework to adequately protect children from child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation

* No conscription (77)

In January 2017, the government publicly acknowledged that trafficking in persons is a problem in the country and published the implementing rules for the Prevention and Suppression of Human Trafficking Act. (78)

There continue to be several gaps in child labor laws and regulations. The Bangladesh Labor Act does not cover the informal economic sectors in which child labor is most prevalent, including domestic work, street work, and work on small agricultural farms with fewer than five employees. (68; 79) Also, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children do not cover garment production and fish drying; both are areas of work in which there is evidence that children work in unsafe and unhealthy environments for long periods of time. (69) While the labor law stipulates that children older than 12 may engage in light work that does not endanger their health or interfere with their education, the law does not specify the activities or the number of hours per week that light work is permitted. (68)

In addition, the use of children in pornographic performances and in the production of drugs is not criminally prohibited. (71; 80; 73) There are no published laws setting the minimum age of recruitment at 16 and setting safeguards to ensure that children under 18 who join the state armed forces do so voluntarily. The legal framework also does not prohibit the recruitment of children by non-state armed groups. (81)

Although the 2010 National Education Policy raised the age of compulsory education from fifth grade (age 10) through eighth grade (age 14), the new compulsory education age is not enforceable until the legal framework is amended to reflect the revised policy. (82; 18) The Education Act, which was drafted in 2016, will make education compulsory through eighth grade (age 14) and bring Bangladesh into compliance with international standards. (67) However, research did not find evidence that the Education Act was passed during the reporting period.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Department of Inspection for Factories and Establishments that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Inspection for Factories and Establishments	Enforce labor laws, including those relating to child labor and hazardous child labor. (83)
Bangladesh Police	Enforce Penal Code provisions protecting children from forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation. (84) In the case of the Trafficking in Persons Monitoring Cell, investigate cases of human trafficking and enforce anti-trafficking provisions of the Prevention and Suppression of Human Trafficking Act. (85)
Bangladesh Labor Court	Prosecute labor law violations, including those related to child labor, and impose fines or sanctions against employers. (86)
Child Protection Networks	Respond to violations against children, including child labor. Comprises officials from various agencies with mandates to protect children, prosecute violations, monitor interventions, and develop referral mechanisms at the district and sub-district levels between law enforcement and social welfare services. (16)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Bangladesh took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Department of Inspection for Factories and Establishments (DIFE) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (83)	Yes (15)

† Data are from June 2016 to July 2017.

In 2017, DIFE hired 45 additional labor inspectors. In addition, DIFE directed labor inspectors to utilize a factory inspection checklist and standard operating procedures, which include child labor-specific components. (88) In May 2017, 239 labor inspectors completed a 40-day, comprehensive labor inspection training program. (15)

However, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Bangladesh's workforce, which includes over 83 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Bangladesh would employ roughly 2,090 labor inspectors. (89; 90; 91) Reports indicate that inspections rarely occur at unregistered factories and establishments, where children are more likely to be employed. (17; 67; 92) In addition, the current penalty for a child labor law violation, a $63 fine, is an ineffective deterrent. (92; 16)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Bangladesh took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017

Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown	Unknown (15)
Number of Convictions	Unknown	Unknown (15)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (85)	Yes (15)

During the reporting period, law enforcement officials received training from the Ministry of Home Affairs, in coordination with IOM, UNICEF, UNODC, and USAID. (78) The government reported that in 2017 it initiated 717 investigations related to forced labor or sex trafficking. The government identified 702 victims of human trafficking, of which 115 were children. (78) However, the Trafficking in Persons Monitoring Cell reportedly lacked the necessary funds and staff to sufficiently address cases of child trafficking. (94) In addition, reporting indicates that, 3 years after their launch, the Child Protection Networks, intended to be a referral mechanism between law enforcement and social services, are not operating due to a lack of funds. (95)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
National Child Labor Welfare Council	Coordinate efforts undertaken by the government to guide, coordinate, and monitor the implementation of the National Plan of Action on the Elimination of Child Labor. (96) Chaired by the Ministry of Labor and Employment, comprises officials representing relevant government ministries, international organizations, child advocacy groups, and employer and worker organizations. (97)

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
Counter-Trafficking National Coordination Committee, Ministry of Home Affairs (MHA)	Coordinate the work of government agencies and international and local NGOs on international and domestic human trafficking, including child trafficking, through bimonthly meetings. (85) Oversee district counter-trafficking committees, which manage counter-trafficking committees for sub-districts and smaller administrative units. (85; 98; 99)
Rescue, Recovery, Repatriation, and Integration Task Force, MHA	Coordinate Bangladesh and India efforts to rescue, recover, repatriate, and reintegrate victims of human trafficking, particularly children. Liaise with various ministries, government departments, NGOs, and international organizations that assist trafficked children. (98; 100)

Research was unable to determine whether the coordinating bodies were active during the reporting period.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor‡

Policy	Description
Child Labor National Plan of Action (2012–2021)	Identifies strategies for developing institutional capacity, increasing access to education and health services, raising social awareness, strengthening law enforcement, and creating prevention and reintegration programs. (101) In 2017, the plan was extended through 2021. (15)
Domestic Workers Protection and Welfare Policy	Sets the minimum age for domestic work at 14 years; however, children between ages 12 and 13 can work as domestic workers with parental permission. (102) However, the policy is not legally enforceable. (103)
National Plan of Action to Combat Human Trafficking (2015–2017)	Establishes goals to meet international standards and best practices for anti-human-trafficking initiatives, including prevention of human trafficking; protection and legal justice for victims of human trafficking; development of advocacy networks; and establishment of an effective monitoring, evaluation, and reporting mechanism. (85)
National Education Policy	Specifies the government's education policy, including pre-primary, primary, secondary, vocational and technical, higher, and non-formal education policies. Sets the compulsory age for free education through eighth grade (age 14). (82)
Seventh Five Year Plan (2016–2020)	Includes the elimination of the worst forms of child labor, with a focus on child domestic workers and other vulnerable groups. Sets out actions to be taken by the government, including forming a policy for children working in the formal sector, providing assistance to street children to protect them from exploitation, coordinating the government and other stakeholders for effective rehabilitation, increased working children's access to formal and non-formal learning, and provision of livelihood support to poor households with children. (104) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Seventh Five Year Plan during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (105)

In November 2017, the government made a pledge at the Argentina Global Conference on the Sustained Eradication of Child Labor to eliminate hazardous child labor by 2021, and all forms of child labor by 2025. The government stated its intention to achieve this goal by strengthening the legal framework, implementing targeted social programs, and jointly conducting awareness raising activities with employers, workers, and civil society stakeholders. (106) However, the government has yet to include child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the National Education Policy. (82)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including addressing the scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor‡

Program	Description
Country Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce (CLEAR) Child Labor Project	USDOL-funded, capacity-building project implemented by the ILO in 11 countries to build the capacity of local and national governments to address child labor. In 2017, the ILO, with implementing partner Eco Social Development, launched the child labor monitoring system pilot program in five upazilas in Lalmonirhat and Kurigram districts. (88; 107) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Program	Description
Reaching Out-of-School Children II (2012–2017)	$130 million World Bank-funded, 6-year program that provides out-of-school children with non-formal education, school stipends, free books, and school uniforms. Helps students attend learning centers called Ananda Schools until the students are ready to join mainstream secondary schools. (108) Over the course of the project, provided education to 690,000 poor children in 20,400 learning centers. (109)
Enabling Environment for Child Rights†	Ministry of Women and Children’s Affairs program, supported by UNICEF, rehabilitates street children engaged in risky work by withdrawing them from child labor and enrolling them in school. Supports 16,000 children in 20 districts through cash transfers. (110; 111) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this program during the reporting period.
Child Help Line 1098†	Ministry of Social Work-implemented and UNICEF-supported 24-hour emergency telephone line. Connects children vulnerable to violence, abuse, and exploitation with social protection services. (112) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this program during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (87; 13)

Although the government has implemented child protection and non-formal education programs, research found that the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the child labor problem. In addition, research found no evidence that the government has carried out programs specifically designed to assist children working in tanneries or the informal garment sector. (33)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Bangladesh (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2013 – 2017
	Extend the law’s minimum age protections to children working in the informal sector, including in domestic work, on the streets, and in small-scale agriculture.	2009 – 2017
	Ensure that the types of hazardous work prohibited for children are comprehensive, in particular by including garment production and fish drying.	2016 – 2017
	Ensure that the law specifies the activities and the number of hours per week that children ages 12 and 13 are permitted to perform light work.	2015 – 2017
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits all offenses related to the sexual exploitation of children for pornographic performances.	2015 – 2017
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the use of children in illicit activities, particularly in the production of drugs.	2015 – 2017
	Ensure that the law establishes 16 as the minimum age for voluntary recruitment by the state military with safeguards for voluntariness.	2016 – 2017
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under 18 by non-state armed groups	2016 – 2017
	Ensure that the legal framework reflects the policy that education is compulsory through eighth grade and is consistent with the minimum age for work.	2012 – 2017
Enforcement	Ensure enforcement of citations and penalties for labor law violations, including authorizing the inspectorate to assess penalties for child labor law violations and increasing penalties for child labor law violations to be an effective deterrent.	2014 – 2017
	Create mechanisms for labor law enforcement to refer children involved in child labor to appropriate legal and social services.	2013 – 2017
	Significantly increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO’s technical advice.	2009 – 2017
	Ensure that labor inspections are conducted with sufficient frequency at unregistered factories and small businesses.	2013 – 2017

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Publish information relating to labor law enforcement, including the amount of labor inspectorate funding, number of labor inspections conducted at a worksite, number of violations for which penalties were imposed and the number of penalties imposed that were collected.	2012 – 2017
	Publish information on the enforcement of laws on the worst forms of child labor, including the number of investigations, the number of prosecutions, and the number of convictions.	2012 – 2017
	Provide police with sufficient resources and training to enforce violations involving human trafficking, forced labor, and the commercial sexual exploitation of children.	2014 – 2017
	Ensure that Child Protection Networks are adequately funded to provide a functional referral mechanism between law enforcement and social services.	2016 – 2017
Coordination	Publish information on activities undertaken by coordinating bodies.	2017
Government Policies	Publish information on activities undertaken to implement the Seventh Five Year Plan.	2017
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the National Education Policy.	2014 – 2017
Social Programs	Implement programs that seek to address inadequate access to water and sanitation facilities and prohibitive fees associated with education.	2013 – 2017
	Provide sufficient education services for Rohingya refugee children and ensure lack of documentation is not a barrier to their school attendance.	2017
	Publish information on activities undertaken to implement social programs, including Enabling Environment for Child Rights and Child Help Line 1098.	2017
	Expand programs to address the scope of the child labor problem, including developing and implementing programs to address child labor in tanneries and the informal garment industry.	2016 – 2017

Belize

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2017, Belize made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government re-convened the National Child Labor Committee to coordinate efforts to address child labor and released the National Results Framework for Children and Adolescents, which outlines the process to report complaints related to the mistreatment of children, including child labor. The government also partnered with the European Union to address child labor in the sugar industry, including by collecting statistical data and developing a list of hazardous occupations prohibited for children in agriculture. However, children in Belize engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Important gaps in the country's legal framework remain. The minimum age for work is 12, and the country lacks prohibitions against the use of children in illicit activities. In addition, the government does not appear to have programs that aim to reduce child labor in agriculture except in the sugar industry.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Belize engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (1; 2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Belize.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	1.6 (1,405)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	94.5
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	1.2
Primary Completion Rate (%)		105.7

Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1; 6; 7; 9; 14; 15)
	Illicit activities, including trafficking of drugs and weapons (16; 11)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Among Belize’s ethnic groups, Mennonites had the highest percentage of child labor with approximately 9.5 percent of Mennonite children engaged in child labor. (8; 13; 11) Non-Mennonite children are also engaged in child labor on Mennonite-owned land. (10) Children working on Mennonite land often use dangerous tools like machetes, tractors, and ploughs, and work long hours in the sun without proper hydration. (13; 10)

Children in Belize are also engaged in child labor in diving and fishing for fish, lobster, and conch. (11) Many of these children cannot swim and have been injured working with dangerous tools such as anchors, fish traps, chipping hammers, and spears. (11)

Girls from impoverished communities and LGBTI children are particularly vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation and labor trafficking in Belize. (17; 16; 15) Children are trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation in areas frequented by tourists or seasonal workers, including oil truckers and citrus workers. (2; 15) Anecdotal reports also indicate that teenage boys ages 12–17 from Belize City and San Pedro Town were recruited to transport and sell drugs. (13; 11; 16) Although several minors were charged for drug trafficking in 2017, there is no available data on the specific number of cases. (11)

Primary and secondary education is tuition-free in Belize, but children’s access to education is sometimes hindered by the cost of school fees, textbooks, uniforms, and meals. (18; 19; 20; 16) The government runs a secondary school subsidy program that operates only in the southern districts—once deemed to be the poorest in Belize. (10) However, the program overlooks districts in the north where child labor is concentrated and that struggle with extreme poverty. (16; 10) In February and March 2017, half the children in two schools in Corozal were absent from school to pick beans. (10) Some Spanish-speaking children in northern districts face language barriers at schools that provide instruction only in English. (10) Bullying is also becoming a barrier to attending school, making children more vulnerable to child labor. (11) Additionally, Belize lacks qualified teachers, basic supplies, and facilities to educate children. (11)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Belize has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Belize’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work and hazardous work.

Belizean law does not conform to international standards because it sets the minimum age for employment at age 12. (21; 30) However, the minimum legal age for work in wholesale or retail trade or business is age 14. (22) Belizean law is also inconsistent with international standards on hazardous work. Children under age 14 are prohibited from working in industrial undertakings—including activities such as mining, manufacturing, and construction—but children over age 14 are explicitly permitted to work in those types of activities. (21) Though Belizean law indicates that children under age 18 are prohibited from being employed or engaged in any activity that may be detrimental to their health, education, or mental, physical, or moral development, the law does not specify which employment activities are detrimental to children. (21; 23) A list of hazardous work prohibited for all children has not been adopted as law. (2; 31; 32) Furthermore, Belizean law is inconsistent with international standards on light work, as the types of light work permissible for children have not yet been identified. (32; 21)

The Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children (Prohibition) Act and the Criminal Code prohibit all forms of child sexual exploitation, with the former explicitly prohibiting child pornography. (25; 26) However, consensual sex with 16 or 17 year-old children is permitted, including in cases in which a person gives or promises remuneration, goods, food, or other benefits in exchange for the sexual act. This provision leaves these children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (2; 25) Research could not determine whether laws prohibit the use of children in specific illicit activities, including the production and trafficking of drugs. (30; 33)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Local Government, and Rural Development	Identify cases and enforce laws related to child labor and hazardous child labor through its Labor Department. (7; 9)
Ministry of Human Development and Social Transformation, Department of Human Services	Receive referrals for child labor cases; train immigration officials, labor inspectors, and the Belize Police Department (BPD) in making referrals; and handle human trafficking cases. (34; 6; 35) Provide victims with welfare services, including medical and social services and counseling assistance. (9; 36)
Ministry of Education, Youth, Sports, and Culture	Investigate truancy offenses in schools and issue fines for these violations. (37)
Belize Police Department (BPD)	Investigate cases of commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking through Sexual Offense and Family Violence Units. (5; 6)
Office of the Director of Public Prosecution	Prosecute criminal offenses, including cases of commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking. (38)

Labor Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether labor law enforcement agencies in Belize took actions to combat child labor (Table 6).

* The government does not publish this information.

The government does not publish information regarding labor law enforcement. Although the Labor Department is required to visit every business at least once a year, it usually falls short of this goal. (11)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Belize took actions to combat child labor (Table 7).

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

* The government does not publish this information.

There were no human trafficking convictions in 2017 even though human trafficking—including the trafficking of children—occurs in Belize. (33; 41) Although Belize’s anti-trafficking legislation establishes penalties, including imprisonment, human trafficking cases are handled by lower courts and are often dismissed. (43) Criminal investigators and police officers lacked sufficient resources—such as vehicles, fuel, office supplies, and adequate training—to investigate violations of criminal law, including the worst forms of child labor. (13)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
National Child Labor Committee (NCLC)	Coordinate efforts between ministries to combat child labor and implement the National Child Labor Policy. Led by the Ministry of Labor and 14 government and civil society members, and chaired by a senior labor officer. (5; 44; 45) Re-activated in February 2017. (11) Met twice in 2017. (46)
Anti-Trafficking in Persons Council	Identify and rescue human trafficking victims, train law enforcement officials, and educate the public about the commercial sexual exploitation of children. Led by the Vice Minister of Human Development and Social Transformation; includes 12 other government agencies and civil society organizations. (1; 5)
National Committee for Families and Children (NCFC)	Promote, monitor, and evaluate Belize’s compliance with its national and international commitments to children, including the UN CRC. (36) In 2017, developed the National Results Framework for Children and Adolescents (NRFCA) 2017–2030, and a communications strategy that outlines the process of opening complaints related to the mistreatment of children, including child labor. (12; 47; 48)

Although the National Child Labor Committee (NCLC) was re-activated in February, there is no record of actions or recommendations produced by this Committee in 2017. (11; 49) Additionally, the NCLC lacks a framework with objectives, goals, and time-bound activities, and has not determined responsibilities for its members, reporting requirements, or a regular meeting schedule. (45)

In the Orange Walk district, stakeholders from the police and the Ministries of Education, Labor, Human Development, and Social Services met monthly to address issues including child labor. (10) Research did not find evidence of coordination of efforts in other districts.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor‡

Policy	Description
National Child Labor Policy	Focuses on strengthening child labor laws, creating legislation to address existing gaps, and providing educational assistance to children who have been or who are currently engaged in child labor. (5; 50) Aims to strengthen government institutions and services and train labor officers. (5; 44; 50) In 2017, the government and civil society stakeholders collaborated on a project to address child labor in the sugarcane industry. (16)

Policy	Description
CARE Model	Coordinates the protection, care, and monitoring of sexually exploited and trafficked children. Outlines the role of the Department of Human Services and the BPD in receiving allegations of commercial sexual exploitation of children and referring children to services. (51) In 2017, this model was still used even though raids and surveillance have diminished due to decreased funding. (16)
National Results Framework for Children and Adolescents (Children's Agenda) 2017–2030†	Launched in June 2017. (48; 12) Sets out the government's agenda and priorities to protect the rights of children and adolescents including education, health, economic security and opportunity, and protection from discrimination, abuse, and exploitation, including child labor. (47) Raises awareness of the role of families in promoting early childhood education. (48)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (17)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy to address the full scope of the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor‡

Program	Description
USDOL-Funded projects	Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues (GAP) (2011–2017), established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010 and implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016; and Country Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce Child Labor II (CLEAR II), $7 million capacity-building project Implemented by Winrock International and partners Verité and Lawyers Without Borders in seven countries to build local and national capacity of the government to address child labor. (52) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (5; 6; 7)

In 2017, the government collaborated with the EU to address child labor in the sugar industry, including by collecting statistical data and developing a list of hazardous occupations in agriculture prohibited for children. (16) Additionally, in Orange Walk, the government conducted a parent outreach program to create awareness about the detrimental effects of child labor, the importance of children's education, and the existing subsidy program that may help children in some areas of Belize access secondary school. (10)

Research found no evidence of government programs to combat commercial sexual exploitation of children or assist children working in general agriculture and fisheries. (53)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Belize (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law prohibits all forms of commercial sexual exploitation of children ages 16 and 17.	2013 – 2017
	Ensure that the minimum age for work is 14 in all sectors.	2013 – 2017
	Adopt a list of hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children and ensure that all children under age 18 are prohibited from engaging in hazardous work.	2009 – 2017
	Ensure that laws prohibit the use of children in specific illicit activities, such as the production and trafficking of drugs.	2013 – 2017
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under 18 into non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2017
Enforcement	Ensure that law enforcement agencies have sufficient resources to conduct labor inspections and criminal investigations, especially in rural areas.	2009, 2011 – 2017
	Ensure that courts hear and try human trafficking cases.	2017

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Publish information on enforcement efforts to combat child labor, including Labor Inspectorate funding, number of labor inspectors, training for labor inspectors, number and type of labor inspections conducted, and number of child labor violations found.	2015 – 2017
	Publish information on enforcement efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor, including training for investigators, the number of criminal investigations, violations found, prosecutions initiated, and convictions secured.	2009 – 2017
Coordination	Conduct regular meetings of the National Child Labor Committee and develop a framework including objectives, goals, time-bound activities, responsibilities for its members, reporting requirements, and a regular meeting schedule.	2015 – 2017
Social Programs	Increase access to education by eliminating fees, improving educational facilities, hiring additional qualified teachers, and providing textbooks, uniforms, and meals; and expand the secondary school subsidy program to include districts in the north where child labor is concentrated.	2011 – 2017
	Develop programs aimed at reducing child labor, including in general agriculture and fisheries.	2009 – 2017

Benin

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2017, Benin made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government launched a public awareness campaign and inspection program in the open-air markets of Cotonou, Ouando, and Parakou that identified 822 children in working conditions and referred 77 children to care centers or reunited them with families. The government also established an inter-ministerial task force to coordinate government-wide efforts on trafficking in persons and validated the new national policy for child protection. The First Lady of Benin, along with other leading figures, made a declaration in Abidjan, Côte d'Ivoire, on child protection, including from child trafficking, exploitation, child labor, and all other forms of violence against children. However, children in Benin engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in the production of cotton and crushed granite. Children also perform dangerous tasks in domestic work and street vending. Limited resources for the systematic enforcement of child labor laws impede government efforts to protect children from the worst forms of child labor. Benin continues to lack a national action plan pertaining to the worst forms of child labor, and social programs to combat child labor are insufficient to adequately address the extent of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Benin engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in the production of cotton and crushed granite. Children also perform dangerous tasks in domestic work and street vending. (1; 2; 3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Benin.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	20.9 (680,004)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	71.0
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	16.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		81.1

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2015, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (4)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Demographic and Health Survey, 2011–2012. (5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of cotton† and cashew nuts† (6; 7; 3)
	Capturing, cleaning, and descaling fish† (8; 9)
	Raising livestock† (9)
Industry	Collecting,† crushing,† washing,† and sieving stones† for gold mining† and gravel† and granite quarrying† (1; 10; 11)
	Construction, including brickmaking† (2; 8; 11)
Services	Domestic work† (1; 2; 11; 12)
	Working as mechanics† and in the transportation industry† (11; 7)
	Street vending† (11; 13; 14; 15)
	Dressmaking† and carpentry† (9)
	Begging (2)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor ‡	Forced labor in domestic work, construction, artisanal mining, fishing, granite quarrying, and agriculture, including in the production of cotton, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1; 2; 7; 10; 16)
	Forced begging (17)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2; 13; 18; 19)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

Children are trafficked mostly within Benin but also to other countries, primarily Gabon, Nigeria, and the Republic of Congo, for domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation, as well as to work in vending, farming, and stone quarrying. (1; 17; 20; 21; 22; 2) Children working in mines and quarries are subject to long working hours and physical injuries and illnesses from dynamite explosions, falling rocks, collapsing quarry walls, and dust inhalation. (10) Traditionally, under a practice known locally as vidomegon, children, up to 95 percent of them girls, live with relatives or family friends to perform household services in exchange for educational opportunities; however, many children become victims of labor exploitation and sexual abuse. (1; 2; 17; 20; 23; 24)

The constitution guarantees free compulsory primary education; nevertheless, some parents are expected to pay school fees because many schools lack funds. (25; 26) In addition, evidence suggests that incidences of physical, psychological, and sexual abuse, including corporal punishment and rape of students by teachers, prevent some children from remaining in school. (2; 13; 17; 18; 27; 28) Children with disabilities have no access to the regular education system, and a lack of reliable transport forces some children to walk long distances to school. (24; 29; 25) In rural areas in particular, children are often unregistered due to limited understanding of procedures to receive a birth certificate and the associated costs. Unregistered children face denial of public services, and 15 percent of children under age 5 continue to be unregistered. (30; 22; 25)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Benin has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Benin’s legal framework to adequately protect children from child labor, including insufficient penalties.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Article 166 of the Labor Code; Article 210 of the Child Code (31; 32)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 1 of the Hazardous Occupations List (33)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Hazardous Occupations List (33)

Non-state	Yes	18	Articles 2 and 4 of the Law Relating to the Transportation and Trafficking of Minors (34)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 24 of Act No 2003-17; Article 4 of the Law on the Prevention of Violence Against Women and Children (35; 37)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 13 of the Constitution; Article 114 of the Child Code (32; 26)

During the reporting period, the draft Labor Code was presented to the Supreme Court for consideration and advice. The National Assembly's Law Commission is also examining the new draft Penal Code, set to incorporate specific penalties related to trafficking in persons. (9) Currently, Article 22 of the Law Relating to the Transportation and Trafficking of Minors prescribes insufficient penalties, especially in comparison to punishments for other serious crimes, such as rape. (34; 21)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Civil Service (MOLCS) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Civil Service (MOLCS)	Enforce child labor laws and investigate labor code infractions, including those related to child labor. (13; 18; 38) Provide support to victims of child labor and human trafficking. (2; 18; 39) In 2017, the Ministry of Labor, Civil Service, and Social Affairs split into MOLCS and the Ministry of Social Affairs and Microfinance. (22)
Ministry of Social Affairs and Microfinance	Offer social assistance and social support services to vulnerable populations. Through its Office of Family, Childhood, and Adolescence, provide assistance to trafficking victims by means of Social Promotion Centers. (9)
Ministry of the Interior	Enforce criminal laws related to the protection of minors, including the worst forms of child labor, through the Central Office for the Protection of Minors under the Criminal Police Department. (2; 18; 21) Through its Brigade des Moeurs (vice squad), address human trafficking for sexual exploitation. (23)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Benin took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MOLCS that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including an insufficient number of labor inspectors.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$6,700 (13)	$42,881 (22)

In 2017, 77 children were removed from child labor during inspections conducted in the open-air markets of Cotonou, Ouando, and Parakou. These children were placed in protective care or reunited with families. (22) MOLCS, in partnership with IOM, trained 50 law enforcement agents, magistrates, and civil society activists at a 3-day seminar. The Ministry also held a separate training for trainers on child trafficking prevention in 2017. (22) The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Benin's workforce, which includes over 3 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Benin should employ approximately 92 inspectors. (40; 41) The Labor Inspectorate stated that it lacks material and financial resources to adequately conduct inspections. (2; 13) The Central Office for the Protection of Minors (OCPM) under the Ministry of the Interior works together with Social Promotion Centers under MOLCS to provide social services to child victims and ensure criminal investigation of the cases. (42)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Benin took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Training for Investigators
Initial Training for New Employees	Unknown (13)	No (22)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A	N/A

In September 2017, OCPM, with UNICEF, organized a 2-week training-of-trainers workshop for 26 gendarmes and police on child protection best practices. (44) OCPM, which maintains a transit center for trafficking victims, received 176 child trafficking victims in 2017. UNICEF worked with police in Alibori, Atlantique, Borgou, and Zou departments to provide police with OCPM-type support services. (22; 9) Yet, OCPM remained understaffed, underfunded, and without adequate office supplies, transportation, and fuel to adequately enforce laws and provide victims with immediate assistance. (2) Police lacked the transportation resources to investigate human trafficking cases and the tools with which to maintain database records. Court officials continued to express difficulties maintaining database records on human trafficking and reported a lack of personnel and infrastructure to efficiently prosecute cases. (20; 44)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the clarity of institutional mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
National Executive Committee to Combat Child Labor	Provide policy guidance; approve programs; and coordinate, monitor, and evaluate efforts to combat child labor in Benin. (2) Led by the MOLCS, and comprising delegates from multiple ministries, UNICEF, the ILO, trade unions, and NGOs. (18; 45)
National Commission on Children's Rights	Coordinate and promote efforts on children's rights at the national level. Chaired by the Ministry of Justice, with the participation of delegates from multiple other ministries and representatives of civil society groups, who are appointed by the Minister of Justice. (2)
Inter-Ministerial Task Force to Combat Trafficking in Persons*	Coordinate government efforts to address trafficking in persons through five committees: prosecution, prevention and protection, statistics, intellectual, and policy. Led by the Ministry of Planning and Development and includes the membership of key ministries and NGOs. (22; 44; 9)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

The government formed the Inter-Ministerial Task Force to Combat Trafficking in Persons to consolidate efforts to address trafficking in persons. In 2017, the group organized a 2-day workshop to finalize a national human trafficking policy and action plan, including an implementation plan, and a policy on data collection. (22; 44; 9) The mandates of the National Executive Committee to Combat Child Labor and the National Commission on Children's Rights overlap and are a source of confusion. Moreover, neither committee met in 2017. (2) In addition, although there is an information management system at the national level, data are rarely analyzed or used to effect implementation on the ground. (46)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the lack of a National Action Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor‡

Policy	Description
Action Plan to Eradicate Child Exploitation in Markets	Aims to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in the major markets of Benin, including Dantokpa in Cotonou, Ouando in Porto-Novo, and Arzèkè in Parakou; strengthen child labor laws; raise awareness of child labor in markets; and create social programs for children rescued from labor exploitation in the targeted markets. (47; 48; 22) As part of this initiative in 2017, the government launched the "Zero Children in Working Situations in the Markets" campaign, which aims to remove children from these situations. (49; 50)
National Policy for Child Protection (2014–2025)	Aims to improve child protection in Benin. Includes components to improve school feeding programs and combat the worst forms of child labor, with a focus on child trafficking. (13; 48; 51) At the end of 2017, the policy was awaiting final approval by the Council of Ministers. (22)
UN Development Assistance Framework (2014–2018)	Outlines the collective actions and strategies of the UN system for achieving national development goals, including specific activities to address child labor by increasing access to social protection services. (52) In 2017, undertook activities to support a school canteen program and a second-chance education program for children who drop out of school. (9)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (22)

The First Lady of Benin, along with other leading figures, made a declaration in Abidjan, Côte d'Ivoire, on child protection, including from child trafficking, exploitation, child labor, and all other forms of violence against children. (53; 54)

Research was unable to determine whether the expired National Action Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor in Benin was renewed. (22) The government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the Education Sector Plan. (17; 55)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor‡

Program	Description
Understanding Children's Work-Action Against Child Labor (2015–2018)	$750,000 Government of Canada-funded, 3-year project to combat child labor by supporting data collection and policy efforts related to children's work and youth employment. (56) In 2017, research was unable to determine whether any actions were undertaken. (9)
Government-Funded Shelters †	Social Promotion Centers provide food, shelter, education, and vocational training to vulnerable children, including victims of labor exploitation, in 85 centers. The Central Office for the Protection of Minors also operates an interim care facility for human trafficking survivors before their placement in a long-term shelter. (18; 39; 45; 22; 9) In 2017, the Social Promotion Centers continued to provide assistance to trafficking victims in the 77 communes of Benin. (9)
Government-Funded Re-Training Centers †	MOLCS, with the assistance of UNICEF, maintains a vocational school program to train survivors of child trafficking in a trade. (45; 46) In 2017, the two counseling and leisure centers in the markets of Bohicon and Zakpota continued to operate and provide training opportunities to children exposed to labor exploitation. (13; 9)
Benin Global Partnership for Education Program (2014–2018)	Approximately $42.3 million, World Bank-funded project to provide equity in access to basic education in impoverished districts. In 2017, the project was extended through April 30, 2018. (57; 9)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (13; 39; 58; 59)

In 2017, the government carried out a public awareness and inspection campaign, “Zero Children in Working Situations in the Markets,” at open-air markets in major cities in Benin. A third phase with increased mobilization is projected for 2018. (22; 44; 9) Although the Government of Benin has implemented programs to protect children from human trafficking and participated in programs focused on child labor in quarrying and mining, research was unable to determine whether the government has conducted programs to assist children engaged in other worst forms of child labor, including in domestic work, commercial sexual exploitation, or agriculture. (13)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Benin (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Create meaningful penalties for child trafficking crimes involving labor exploitation.	2014 – 2017
Enforcement	Provide consistent training for criminal and labor law enforcement officials on child labor.	2013 – 2017
	Increase resources, including the number of labor inspectors and criminal investigators, to enforce laws against child labor and provide immediate victim assistance.	2009 – 2017
	Publish data on whether unannounced inspections are conducted, as well as the number of inspections conducted at worksites, child labor violation penalties imposed and collected, violations, and prosecutions related to child labor.	2009 – 2017
	Increase the resources available to law enforcement officials to efficiently investigate child labor cases.	2015 – 2017
Coordination	Take measures to coordinate efforts between the National Executive Committee to Combat Child Labor and the National Commission on Children's Rights, ensuring that committees meet and coordinate mandates.	2013 – 2017
	Analyze the data received from national information management systems and disseminate the results nationwide.	2013 – 2017

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Government Policies	Complete a new National Action Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor in Benin.	2010 – 2017
	Ensure that child labor elimination and prevention strategies are integrated into the Education Sector Plan.	2010 – 2017
Social Programs	Increase access to education by eliminating school-related fees, ensuring that children with disabilities have access to regular schools, ensuring the safety of children in schools, providing reliable transport, and increasing birth registration rates.	2010 – 2017
	Institute programs to address the worst forms of child labor, including in domestic work, commercial sexual exploitation, and agriculture, and monitor and report annually on the progress of these programs.	2010 – 2017

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2017, Bhutan made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the year, law enforcement received training on trafficking in persons. Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Bhutan engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work, and engage in child labor in agriculture. Bhutan's minimum age for work is inconsistent with international standards and education is not compulsory. The government has not adopted a national policy to address child labor, including its worst forms.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Bhutan engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work, and engage in child labor in agriculture. (1; 2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Bhutan.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	3.8 (6,338)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	84.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	3.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		97.4

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (3)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 4, 2010. (4)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, activities unknown (2; 5; 6)
Industry	Construction, † activities unknown (7)
Services	Domestic work (2; 5; 6)
	Work in shops, restaurants, hotel service, and automobile repair (8; 5; 9)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor ‡	Forced domestic work, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (8; 1)
	Forced labor in karaoke bars, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (10; 1)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1; 11)
	Use in illicit activities, including the smuggling of tobacco (9)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

There is a lack of current data on child labor in Bhutan. To date, no national survey on child labor has been conducted.

While the government provides a minimum of 11 years of free education to all Bhutanese citizens, children living in remote villages, children of nomadic communities and migrant populations, and children with disabilities face significant difficulties in accessing public schools, which may increase their vulnerability to labor exploitation. (5; 12; 6; 7)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Bhutan has ratified some key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	N/A
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Bhutan's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	13	Sections 170–171 of the Labor and Employment Act; Section 7 of the Regulation on Acceptable Forms of Child Labor (13; 14)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Sections 170–171 of the Labor and Employment Act (13)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Section 9(e) of the Labor and Employment Act; Section 9 of the Regulation on Acceptable Forms of Child Labor (13; 14)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Sections 6 and 9(a) of the Labor and Employment Act; Sections 154, 227, and 379 of the Penal Code; Section 221 of the Child Care and Protection Act (13; 15; 16)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Section 9(a) of the Labor and Employment Act; Sections 221 and 224 of the Child Care and Protection Act; Sections 227, 379, and 380 of the Penal Code (13; 15; 16)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Section 9(b) of the Labor and Employment Act; Sections 222–224 of the Child Care and Protection Act; Sections 225 and 375–380 of the Penal Code (13; 15; 16)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Section 9(c) of the Labor and Employment Act; Sections 216 and 220 of the Child Care and Protection Act (13; 15)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment
State Compulsory	N/A*
State Voluntary	Yes	18	Defense Service Rules and Regulations (17)
Non-state	Yes	18	Section 9(a) of the Labor and Employment Act (13)
Compulsory Education Age	No
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 9.16 of the Constitution of the Kingdom of Bhutan (18)

* No conscription

The minimum age for work is not compliant with international standards because the Labor and Employment Act allows children under age 14 to work. (13) Bhutan has no compulsory age for education, which may increase the risk of children's involvement in child labor. (6)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Human Resources (MOLHR) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Bhutan

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Human Resources (MOLHR)	Investigate child labor complaints and ensure that employers comply with child labor laws. Refer cases involving the worst forms of child labor to the police. (19)
Royal Bhutan Police	Investigate and enforce criminal laws relating to the worst forms of child labor. (20) Includes two Women and Child Protection Units and eight Women and Child Protection Desks to enforce laws protecting women and children. (5; 21; 22; 7) Refer abused and exploited children to child welfare officers and the National Commission for Women and Children. (16; 23)
Child Welfare Officers	Protect and assist children in difficult circumstances, including children abused and exploited for illegal purposes. (16)
Royal Court of Justice	Adjudicate cases involving child labor, including its worst forms. (6)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Bhutan took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MOLHR that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$27,000 (5)	$23,000 (6)
Number of Labor Inspectors	27 (5)	23 (6)
Inspectorate Authorized to Assess Penalties	Yes (5)	Yes (6)
Training for Labor Inspectors
Initial Training for New Employees	No (5)	N/A (7)
Training on New Laws Related to Child Labor	N/A	N/A (6)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (5)	No (6)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted	2,434 (5)	2,169 (6)
Number Conducted at Worksites	2,434 (5)	2,169 (6)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	0 (5)	0 (6)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties were Imposed	0 (5)	0 (6)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that were Collected	0 (5)	0 (6)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (5)	Yes (6)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (5)	Yes (6)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (5)	Yes (6)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (5)	Yes (6)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (5)	Yes (6)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (5)	Yes (6)

The MOLHR has reported that limited resources place constraints on the number of inspections conducted and inspectors employed. (5)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Bhutan took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

* The government does not publish this information.

In 2017, senior law enforcement officials from the Royal Bhutan Police Force and the MOLHR participated in human trafficking training organized by UNODC. (24)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
Child Labor Task Force	Coordinate the development and drafting of a national child labor action plan. (5) Led by the MOLHR and the NCWC. Collaborate with multiple government ministries and agencies. Comprises of a national committee and a regional committee. (25; 26) Research was unable to determine whether actions were taken during the year.
National Commission for Women and Children (NCWC)	Coordinate the implementation of policies concerning abused and exploited women and children. Advise the government on legislation and policies for the protection of women and children. (5) Comprises a chairperson and commissioners who represent relevant government agencies and non-government sectors. (27) Research was unable to determine whether actions were taken during the year.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that the government has established policies to address child labor. The government had policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor; however, child labor elimination and prevention strategies have not been included in these policies. (28; 29)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to the prevention or elimination of child labor (Table 9). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 9. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor†

Program	Description
Project Hope†	NCWC program that provides residential shelters for children at risk of labor exploitation. Targets children on the street and provides them with counseling, group therapy, and assistance enrolling in school. (19) Research was unable to determine actions taken during the year.
Trafficking Victims Shelter†	Respect, Education, Nurture, and Empower Women (RENEW), a Thimphu-based NGO, receives government funding to provide shelter, counseling, and rehabilitation for women and children who have been victims of human trafficking. (19) Research was unable to determine actions taken during the year.
Enhance Government and Civil Society Responses to Counter Trafficking in Persons	UNODC-funded program that seeks to increase law enforcement capacity to enforce anti-trafficking laws, including victim identification, investigation of human trafficking cases, and victim reintegration. (30)
Improving Rural Children's Access to Basic Education with a Focus on Primary Education (2014–2018)	$8.58 million WFP-funded program that provides financial support to rural primary schools. (31) Aims to increase primary school enrollment, retention, and graduation by providing school breakfasts and lunches to students. Implemented in 232 schools across the country, reaches 37,000 children annually, and supports school construction and kitchen improvements. (19; 31) Research was unable to determine actions taken during the year.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (32)

Bhutan

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

While the Government of Bhutan has implemented programs that target children at risk of labor exploitation, research found no evidence that these programs target children working in agriculture or domestic service, or children involved in the worst forms of child labor, including in domestic servitude.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Bhutan (Table 10).

Table 10. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2013 – 2017
	Ensure that laws on child labor comply with the international standard for the minimum age for work.	2010 – 2017
	Make primary education compulsory and ensure that the compulsory age extends to the minimum age for employment.	2010 – 2017
Enforcement	Publish child labor law enforcement data.	2017
	Ensure that the MOLHR has the resources and training necessary to enforce labor laws and combat child labor.	2014 – 2017
	Publish data on training of investigators responsible for enforcing criminal laws prohibiting the worst forms of child labor, and publish data on the number of investigations, violations, prosecutions, and convictions of crimes involving the worst forms of child labor.	2010 – 2017
Coordination	Ensure that coordinating bodies take actions to address child labor.	2017 – 2017
Government Policies	Adopt a policy to address child labor, including its worst forms.	2016
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into existing policies that address child labor.	2014 – 2017
Social Programs	Conduct a national child labor survey and publish the results.	2013 – 2017
	Publish information about the implementation of child labor-related programs, such as Project Hope.	2017
	Implement programs to make education more accessible for children living in remote locations.	2014 – 2017
	Create social programs targeting working children, particularly in agriculture, and children engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including forced domestic work.	2009 – 2017

Bolivia

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2017, Bolivia made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Bolivia is receiving an assessment of moderate advancement because the country's Plurinational Constitutional Tribunal declared unconstitutional provisions in the 2014 Child and Adolescent Code that previously allowed children as young as 10 years old to work. In contrast to previous years, the law no longer contains exceptions to the minimum age that allow children as young as 10 to work. In addition, the government created the Special Advocacy Delegation on Childhood and Adolescence Matters to promote the protection of children and personnel in the Offices of the Child Advocate and trained social workers and attorneys to collect child labor data and protect children's rights. However, children in Bolivia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in mining and commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. In addition, gaps remain in the Child and Adolescent Code as it continues to permit children ages 12-13 years old to work but does not meet the requirements of a light work exception by determining the activities in which light work may be permitted and specifying the conditions in which light work may be undertaken. Further, the ILO has urged the government to update the Code to comply with ILO Convention 138.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Bolivia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in mining and commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1; 2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Bolivia.

Industry	Production of bricks† (10; 15; 16; 8)
Services	Street vending, juggling, shoe shining, and assisting transportation operators (13; 10; 17; 18; 8; 19; 20)
	Cleaning cemeteries (graves) and hospitals† (19; 20; 21)
	Domestic work (10; 22; 8; 23)
	Restaurant work, activities unknown (12)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in ranching, and in the production and harvesting of Brazil nuts and sugarcane (7; 24; 25; 8; 23)
	Forced begging, and forced labor in mining and domestic service (2; 26; 8; 23)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2; 8; 23)
	Forced illicit activities, including robbery and producing or transporting drugs (2; 8; 23)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children produce and harvest sugarcane and Brazil nuts in the departments of Beni, Pando, Santa Cruz, and Tarija. (1; 5; 7; 13) Indigenous children are particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (27; 28; 29) Some indigenous Guarani families live in debt bondage and work on ranches, including in raising cattle, in the Chaco region of Bolivia. (30; 5; 13) In Tarija, the sugar cane and Brazil nut harvest seasons attract over 3,000 internal migrants, increasing the vulnerability of these workers—many of them children—to forced labor and human trafficking. In 2017, 25 members of the Guarani community, including eight children, were rescued from forced labor in Tarija. (8)

The cultural practice known as padrinazgo, which involves rural families sending their children to urban areas to live with individuals to better access education, social services, and food, often leads to forced labor, including in domestic service and third party businesses. Girls, age 14 on average, were found to be engaged in commercial sexual exploitation in El Alto. (8) Bolivian children are also smuggled to other countries, where they are vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation. The government does not have a system in place to track data on forced child labor, commercial sexual exploitation of children, or engagement of children in illicit activities. (8)

Bolivian law requires children to attend school up to age 17. However, attendance rates for secondary education are low in rural areas. (26; 29; 31)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Bolivia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Bolivia’s legal framework to adequately protect children from child labor, including the prohibition of military recruitment.

* The minimum age for combat is 18 per Article 36 of the Law of National Military Service (41)

‡ Age calculated based on available information

The 2014 Child and Adolescent Code specifies the conditions under which children may work, in addition to providing a number of other protections. (33) In a 2017 decision, the Bolivian Plurinational Constitutional Tribunal declared unconstitutional provisions of the Code that previously allowed children as young as 10 to be self-employed and 12-year-olds to be employed by third parties under certain conditions. (34) Article 129(1) of the Code establishes the minimum age for work at 14 years, which is consistent with Article 58 of the General Labor Law and with international standards. (32; 33)

The Code continues to permit children ages 12 and 13 to work with authorization from the Offices of the Child Advocate and on the conditions that the work is not precarious to the child's well-being and is not conducted for more than 6 hours a day and 30 hours a week. However, these requirements are not sufficient to comply with the light work exception because they do not determine the activities in which light work may be permitted or specify the conditions in which light work may be undertaken. (33) Additionally, the ILO has urged the government to update the Code to bring it into compliance with ILO Convention 138. Moreover, even though Bolivian law requires that apprentices attend school, it does not set a minimum age for participation in apprenticeships. (32; 44)

Articles 108 and 249 of the Constitution require Bolivian males to perform compulsory military service in accordance with national law. (35) Article 1 of Supreme Decree No. 1875, passed in 2014, lowered the minimum age at which compulsory military service may begin from 18 years, as previously established, to 17 years, which does not comply with international standards. (39; 40)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established relevant institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate child labor enforcement.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Enforce child labor laws, in part through its Fundamental Rights Unit, which also addresses forced labor of indigenous peoples. (45; 46) Refer cases to the Labor Courts for adjudication of penalties and unpaid wages. (2) Engage municipal Offices of the Child Advocate to ensure the protection of children's rights. (10; 47) Assist in the implementation of the Child and Adolescent Code. (10; 33)
Municipal Offices of the Child Advocate	Authorize children from the age of 14, and some between 12 and 14 years old, to engage in work and register them in the government's Child and Adolescent Information System (SINNA), pursuant to the Child and Adolescent Code. Protect the rights and welfare of children, including by accompanying child labor inspectors, and refer criminal child labor cases to prosecutors and for social services. (10; 33)
Attorney General's Office	Oversee all human trafficking investigations and prosecutions. (48) Oversee through its National Coordinator's Office regional prosecutors who, in conjunction with the Bolivian National Police, pursue cases of human trafficking. Maintain a database of human trafficking cases. (48)
Ministry of Justice and Transparency	Create and administer SINNA, in which municipal Offices of the Child Advocate register 12 and 13-year old workers authorized to engage in self-employment or work for third parties, as required by the Child and Adolescent Code. (33)
Bolivian National Police	Maintain the Special Force in the Fight Against Crime (FELCC), which runs 15 investigative human trafficking units, and the Police Unit for Migratory Control and Assistance, which patrols national borders. (10; 49; 50) Refer trafficking victims to departmental social services or Offices of the Child Advocate. (51)

The Child and Adolescent Code requires that children ages 12 and 13 receive authorization from their parent or guardian and the municipal Offices of the Child Advocate to engage in work under certain conditions to ensure children's protection. (33) However, the Code transferred this registration responsibility to municipal governments without additional resources. Additionally, reports indicate that up to 15 percent of municipalities in Bolivia lack an Office of the Child Advocate; many more are reported to lack sufficient resources and the capacity to perform their mandate and raise awareness of children's rights and their parents' obligations under the Code. (8) In 2017, the government reduced budgets for these offices by 30 percent with respect to the previous year, further restricting their capacity to adequately carry out their duties. (52) This lack of institutional coverage may leave certain children particularly vulnerable to child labor. (2; 10; 53) In La Paz and Santa Cruz, Child Advocate Offices reported additional barriers to implementation of the registration section of the Code. These barriers include lack of cooperation from parents to register their working children and prohibitive financial obstacles to obtain proper paperwork required for registration. (8)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Bolivia took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the lack of proper financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

* The government does not publish this information.

The number of labor inspectors is insufficient for the size of Bolivia's workforce, which includes over 5.7 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Bolivia should employ roughly 380 labor inspectors. (56) While the Ministry of Labor (MOL) continued to use mobile inspection units to help ensure that labor inspections occurred in all sectors of the country, the number of mobile inspections conducted in 2017 is unavailable and their adequateness is unknown. (8; 9) In 2017, the labor inspectorate conducted 850 inspections and 250 child labor inspections. However, the government does not disaggregate between inspections involving child labor and criminal investigations involving the worst forms of child labor. Labor inspectors lack necessary resources to enforce labor laws, especially in the Chaco region. (9) Additionally, the government does not publish information regarding labor inspectorate funding. (8)

The MOL and National Office of the Child Advocate still have not developed the SINNA, as mandated by the Child and Adolescent Code. The government reported that children removed from child labor are referred to the municipal Offices of the Child Advocate for services. Information on the number of children removed from child labor and whether they received services, particularly in cases where an Office of the Child Advocate did not exist, was not publicly available. (8) Rural offices of the Child Advocate in municipalities throughout the country lack proper funding, personnel, and materials. While municipalities are required to allot a certain percentage of their budget to the Child Advocate's office, this percentage has decreased over the last few years. (8)

In 2017, the Ombudsman created the Special Advocacy Delegation on Childhood and Adolescence Matters to strengthen defense of human rights and promote the protection of children, including protection from child labor. (57) The MOL and UNICEF collaborated to provide training on children's rights and compiling child labor data to offices of the Child Advocates, social workers, and attorneys in all nine departments. (8; 58) In coordination with UNICEF, the government also trained 80 public servants through a child labor prevention certificate program. (8) Additionally, in collaboration with UNODC and the Department of State, the government developed a series of workshops to train relevant government employees regarding investigation and prosecution of trafficking cases in Bolivia. (59)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Bolivia took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal law enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including resources to conduct criminal investigations.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017

Number of Convictions	Unknown* (2)	Unknown* (8)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (2)	Yes (8)

In 2017, children were involved in at least 10 cases of drug smuggling detected between Bolivia and Chile. The government did not make publicly available the number of prosecutions or convictions it achieved related to child labor. (8) For trafficking crimes, the government gathers prosecution and conviction numbers, but does not disaggregate by case type. (61) Children rescued from the worst forms of child labor are often not referred to social service providers because some cities lack shelters and other social service providers for children. (61; 8; 62) The government did not report the number of children referred to receive social services. While children can report workforce abuse to the Child Advocate's Office, they rarely do. (8)

Many criminal law enforcement agencies reported that funding levels were inadequate to carry out their mandates, and that they sometimes lacked fuel to conduct investigations. (60) Additionally, low rates of dedicated training on human trafficking hampered law enforcement efforts. The high rate of rotation among police, prosecutors, and judges—a standard practice to help combat corruption—leads to a lack of sufficient knowledge and experience on human trafficking and a judicial backlog for these types of cases. (61)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
National Commission for the Progressive Eradication of Child Labor (CNEPTI)	Coordinate national efforts to address child labor issues. Led by the Ministry of Labor (MOL), and includes the Ministries of Justice, Education, and Planning, as well as several NGOs. (10)
Plurinational System for the Comprehensive Protection of Children and Adolescents (SIPPROINA)	Coordinate national efforts to manage and implement the Plurinational Plan for Children and Adolescents, the Coordinating Council for Children and Adolescents, and the Congress on Children's rights. Evaluate and advise on national plans, public policies, reports, and budget allocation relating to children and adolescents' right. Monitor and update, in coordination with INE, the Information System of Children and Adolescents (SINNA). (33) Led by the Ministry of Justice. (33) Research was unable to determine whether this coordinating body took actions in 2017.
Plurinational Council to Combat the Trafficking and Smuggling of Persons	Coordinate anti-trafficking efforts and implement national laws and policies on human trafficking and smuggling. (37; 49; 63) Chaired by the Minister of Justice and comprised of eight ministries, the Public Advocate, and NGOs. (49) Met several times in 2017. (8) Provided free legal assistance to victims of trafficking in persons and training assistance on trafficking in persons to the departments. (61)
Department-Level Councils against Human Trafficking and Smuggling	Coordinate efforts of the Plurinational Council in Bolivia's nine departments. Comprised of officials from the Special Force in the Fight Against Crime, the MOL, the Ministries of Migration and Education, the Human Rights Ombudsman, and NGO representatives. (10; 37; 63) Research was unable to determine whether this coordinating body took actions in 2017.

The National Commission for the Progressive Eradication of Child Labor has been increasingly inactive, and many government agencies and NGOs agree that its central coordinating role has lapsed. (8) Reports also indicate that some of the Ministry of Labor's departmental sub-commissions on child labor have not been active, due in part to a lack of resources. (10; 26)

The Comprehensive Law against Human Trafficking and Smuggling mandates that the Plurinational Council to Combat the Trafficking and Smuggling of Persons include NGOs. However, reports indicate that NGOs have not participated fully in this Council despite NGOs' efforts for inclusion. (49) Reports also indicate that some Department-Level Councils against Human Trafficking and Smuggling have yet to develop department-level plans to combat human trafficking, as mandated by law. (2; 37; 60; 63)

In 2017, the government collaborated with UNICEF to finalize a standardized registration form to determine the scope of child labor in Bolivia. (8) The Tarija Department Coordinating Council began producing public awareness campaigns and programs to teach Bolivian domestic workers about their rights. (61)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementing a new national action plan.

Bolivia

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor‡

Policy	Description
Bolivian General Plan for Economic and Social Development (2016–2020)	Sets goals for economic and social development including eliminating child labor. (64) In 2017, created a program to help parents of children vulnerable to child labor obtain employment. (62)
Plurinational Policy to Combat Trafficking and Smuggling of Persons (2013–2017)	Sets national priorities on combating human trafficking and smuggling through five core areas: the prevention of trafficking, remediation and the reintegration of survivors, the prosecution of crimes, the strengthening of national coordination mechanisms, and international cooperation. (63; 65; 66) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.
National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking and Smuggling of Persons (2015–2019)	Establishes eight lines of action drawn from the five core areas of the Plurinational Policy to Combat Trafficking and Smuggling of Persons, including building capacity and coordination among criminal law enforcement agencies. (67) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (68)

Bolivia's national policy for addressing child labor, the National Plan for the Progressive Eradication of Child Labor (2000–2010), expired in 2010. (69) A new plan was not established during the reporting period. (70)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including funding and adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem in all sectors and regions.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor‡

Program	Description
Juancito Pinto Subsidy Program†	Government program that provides a conditional cash transfer to all primary and some secondary school students to increase school attendance and reduce the dropout rate. (51) In 2017, provided $68.1 million USD to the more than 2 million participating students. (8)
Human Rights of Children Working in Sugarcane, Brazil Nuts, and Mining†	Human Rights Ombudsman's Office program that promotes the elimination of the worst forms of child labor, along with labor and social protections for working adolescents ages 14 to 17. Launched in 2013 in the Tarija, Potosí, and Beni Departments. (71) Expanded in 2014 to monitor the use of child labor in sugarcane harvesting in Santa Cruz. (72) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this program during the reporting period.
Bolivian Foreign Trade Institute's Triple Seal Initiative	Ministry of Labor collaboration with the Bolivian Institute of Standardization and Quality, UNICEF, and the ILO to develop a voluntary certification program to recognize companies that comply with Bolivian law and ILO conventions on child labor, forced labor, and worker discrimination in the production of their goods. (10; 51; 73) In 2017, two companies in the city of Santa Cruz went through this certification process. (74)
Child Trafficking Awareness-Raising Campaigns	Government program implemented with the Bolivian Network for the Fight Against Human Trafficking and Smuggling that conducts awareness campaigns to educate the public about the Comprehensive Law against Human Trafficking and Smuggling. Has reached more than 3,000 government officials and NGO representatives. (75; 47) In 2017, the government conducted several awareness-raising campaigns at national and local levels, including through social media. (74)
Program to Protect the Rights of Children and Adolescents	Government collaboration with UNICEF in 17 Bolivian Brazil nut and sugarcane-producing municipalities to provide education assistance, with funding from the Government of Italy and the Swiss Cooperation Agency. Seeks to improve living conditions of 2,300 families and reintegrate 3,400 children in school. (76) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this program during the reporting period.
Social Risk Program	Established by the Mayor of La Paz, provides financial support to allow children to choose school over work, or to finish their school day before attending work. Approximately 50 children participated in this program in 2017. (8)
Critical Route ( Ruta Crítica )*	Program created by the La Paz Child Advocate's Office to better identify working children, facilitate registration of working children with the Office, and help working children understand their legal rights. (8)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Bolivia.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (26; 76; 77; 78; 79; 80)

In 2017, the Tarija Mayor's Office developed a school outreach program deploying 40 specialists to 115 schools in the municipality to educate 10,000 students, 1,200 teachers, and 5,000 parents on trafficking in persons. (61) The government also conducted five surveys related to child labor in the sugarcane and Brazil nut harvests, domestic work, and work in the Amazon region. (8) However, results of these surveys are not currently available.

Although Bolivia has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to address the extent of the problem, particularly in the production of Brazil nuts and sugarcane, ranching and cattle raising, mining, domestic work, street work, and commercial sexual exploitation. Although the Juancito Pinto subsidy program continues to expand and has been effective in rural areas, reports indicate that the $29 per-year subsidy is insufficient to meaningfully cover costs associated with attending school in larger cities, such as transportation. For example, reports indicate that costs associated with attending school in La Paz's sister city, El Alto, may reach $410 per year. (26)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Bolivia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the light work framework specifies the activities in which light work may be permitted, and the conditions in which light work may be undertaken.	2017
	Ensure that the law prohibits children under the age of 14 from participating in apprenticeships.	2010–2017
	Ensure that the law establishes 18 as the minimum age for compulsory recruitment by the state military, and criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under 18 into non-state armed groups.	2015 – 2017
	Update the Child and Adolescent Code to reflect the decision of the Bolivian Plurinational Constitutional Tribunal regarding minimum age for work.	2017
Enforcement	Establish and maintain an Office of the Child Advocate in every municipality with sufficient resources to ensure that legal protections are extended to all children who are permitted to work and to coordinate the provision of services to children who are removed from child labor, including its worst forms.	2014 – 2017
	Ensure that Offices of the Child Advocate publicly report on the number of children authorized to work and the number of children rescued from child labor and referred for social services.	2015 – 2017
	Provide sufficient funding to increase the capacity of the Ministry of Labor (MOL) to ensure the adequate enforcement of child labor laws.	2013 – 2017
	Increase the number of labor inspectors responsible for enforcing laws on child labor to meet the ILO's technical advice and ensure that the number of labor inspections is sufficient.	2013 – 2017
	Authorize the Labor Inspectorate to assess penalties.	2015 – 2017
	Ensure that labor inspectors conduct inspections in all sectors and geographical areas.	2011 – 2017
	Publish information on child labor law enforcement, including the number of children found in child labor as a result of inspections, the number of violations found, and the number of penalties imposed and collected.	2009 – 2017
	Publish information on the number of criminal child labor investigations, prosecutions, convictions, and penalties.	2011 – 2017
	Disaggregate data between inspections involving child labor and criminal investigations involving the worst forms of child labor.	2017
	Provide sufficient funding and training, including training on human trafficking, to criminal law enforcement agencies to ensure adequate enforcement of laws related to the worst forms of child labor.	2015 – 2017
Coordination	Ensure that the National Commission for the Progressive Eradication of Child Labor fulfills its central coordinating role and develops concrete mechanisms to improve coordination among participating agencies and organizations.	2009 – 2017
	Ensure that all the MOL departmental sub-commissions designed to combat child labor convene and receive sufficient resources to carry out their functions.	2014 – 2017

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Coordination	Ensure that NGOs participate in the Plurinational Council to Combat the Trafficking and Smuggling of Persons, as required by the Comprehensive Law against Human Trafficking and Smuggling.	2014 – 2017
	Ensure that all Department-Level Councils against Human Trafficking are fully operational as required by the Comprehensive Law against Human Trafficking and Smuggling.	2014 – 2017
Government Policies	Establish and implement a new National Plan for the Progressive Eradication of Child Labor.	2010 – 2017
Social Programs	Expand national programs, especially those targeting children in rural areas to increase secondary school attendance.	2010 – 2017
	Increase the Juancito Pinto subsidy to ensure that school children are able to cover the costs associated with attending school.	2014 – 2017
	Expand social programs to address the worst forms of child labor where hazardous child labor exists, particularly in the production of Brazil nuts and sugarcane, ranching and cattle raising, mining, domestic work and street work, and commercial sexual exploitation.	2009 – 2017

In 2017, Bosnia and Herzegovina made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe's Bosnia and Herzegovina Mission provided training on child begging to 30 judges and prosecutors, and criminal law enforcement officials received training on human trafficking, including victim identification. In addition, the government funded activities to address human trafficking, including street campaigns, workshops, conferences, activities in schools, and media events. However, children in Bosnia and Herzegovina engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in street work. The minimum age protections in the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Republika Srpska, and Brčko District do not apply to children who are self-employed or work outside of formal employment relationships. In addition, the Anti-Trafficking Strike Force lacks coordination between government and criminal law enforcement members, and labor inspectors do not have jurisdiction to investigate forced begging cases.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Bosnia and Herzegovina (BiH) engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1; 2) Children also perform dangerous tasks in street work. (3; 4; 5; 6; 1) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in BiH. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	8.9 (44,017)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	83.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	10.6
Primary Completion Rate (%)		Unavailable

Primary completion rate was unavailable from UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (7)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 3, 2006. (8)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Street work, including begging, vending, washing car windows, and scavenging for scrap metal (3; 4; 5; 6; 9; 10)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced begging and forced domestic work, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2; 11; 12; 13; 14)
	Commercial sexual exploitation as a result of human trafficking (2; 11; 15)
	Use in illicit activities, including for pickpocketing (3; 6; 11; 10; 15)
	Use in the production of pornography (4; 16; 10; 15; 17; 18)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Street begging is the most common form of child labor in BiH. (3; 6; 12; 19) Organized groups sometimes traffic children to lucrative locations, both domestically and internationally, to regional and European Union countries, where they are forced to beg. (3; 11; 13; 20; 14)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Children from the largest minority group in BiH, the Roma, remain vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (3; 5; 6; 1; 2; 11; 12; 21; 14) The Roma custom of paid and arranged marriages between families has resulted in the exploitation of some Roma girls as domestic workers. (2; 11; 22; 14; 23) Birth registration is required to attend school in BiH and some Roma children lack identity documents, which may affect their access to education. (1; 20; 24; 25; 26; 27; 22) Children out of school are vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. Sources also indicate that some Roma children face discrimination by some teachers and peers, travel long distances to schools, and are unable to afford school supplies, as well as clothing and food. (16; 21; 28; 29; 10) In addition, research found that discrimination against some Roma children by school administrators has led to disproportionately high enrollment rates of Roma children in schools for children with intellectual disabilities. (30)

Children with disabilities generally face barriers to accessing education, which may make them vulnerable to child labor. (1; 22) Although the number of school programs for children with disabilities is increasing, parents of such children often receive little support from the government, and many schools are unable to provide accommodations for their disabilities. (31; 23)

Children ages 6 to 17 from Republika Srpska (RS) are being recruited to participate in military training camps in Russia. (32; 33) The military training includes teaching these children how to use weapons and other basic paramilitary skills. (34)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

BiH has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

BiH is a democratic republic with a bicameral parliament. Governmental responsibility lies within the entities of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina (FBiH), RS, and the self-governing Brčko District (BD). (1) The Government of BiH has established laws and regulations related to child labor, at the state, entity, and district levels (Table 4). However, gaps exist in BiH's legal framework to adequately protect children from child labor, including the minimum age for work and the prohibition of military recruitment by non-state armed groups.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Related Entity	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina (FBiH)	No	15	Article 20 of the Labor Law of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina (35)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The RS government introduced the Special Register of Individuals Convicted of Sexual Abuse and Exploitation of Children Law, enacted in 2018, which aims to protect children from the worst forms of child labor in the RS. (48)

Laws related to illicit activities in BiH are not sufficient because using, procuring, and offering of children for the production and trafficking of drugs is not criminally prohibited. Also, minimum age protections in the FBiH, RS, and BD labor codes do not apply to children who are self-employed or working outside of formal employment relationships. (35; 36; 37) Therefore, most children engaged in street work, the most common form of child labor, are not protected by the law due to law enforcement practices and legal interpretations of the laws. (3; 4; 5; 6; 26; 35; 36; 37; 49) In addition, BiH, FBiH, RS, and BD do not have laws that prohibit the recruitment of children by non-state armed groups and children are punished for their association with armed groups. (9; 43; 41; 42; 39) Finally, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children do not include begging, an area of work in which there is evidence of associated dangers. (50; 51; 52)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministries of Labor for FBiH, RS, and BD that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
FBiH Ministry of Labor and Social Policy Federal Inspection Agency and Cantonal-Level Labor Inspectorates	Enforce labor laws, including those on child labor, in FBiH. (6; 53; 54)
RS Ministry of Labor and Veterans Labor Inspectorate	Enforce labor laws, including those on child labor, in RS. (6; 54)
BD Administrative Support Department	Enforce labor laws, including those on child labor, in BD. (6)
Entity and Cantonal-Level Police	Enforce criminal laws against human trafficking, forced labor, prostitution, and begging. (55)
Ministry of Security (MOS)	Enforce national policy to prevent the worst forms of child labor. Collect data on human trafficking. (53) Ensure that victims are placed in government-approved shelters. (53)
State Investigative and Protection Agency (SIPA) and State Border Police (SBP)	Investigate human trafficking crimes and enforce anti-trafficking laws across the entire country (SIPA). Identify victims of human trafficking at the border (SBP). (53; 55)
State, Entity, and FBiH Cantonal-Level Prosecutors' Offices	Prosecute human trafficking, forced labor, enticement to prostitution, and forced begging cases at their respective levels, based on applicable laws. (53; 55)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in BiH took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministries of Labor for FBiH, RS, and BD that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including labor inspector training for agricultural inspections.

Although labor inspectors receive training on detecting child labor, inspectors in all entities are not trained on child labor in agriculture, including handling agricultural chemicals. (57) Labor inspectors have a quarterly plan for inspections. (56) A complaint mechanism exists in all entities, and each entity inspectorate has a mechanism for receiving online complaints. (56; 49) All three labor inspectorates are authorized to inspect any formal sector site without receiving prior approval. Inspectors who find violations of the child labor law are permitted to assess administrative penalties or issue fines. (6) Forced begging cases are pursued by entity-level police and state-level prosecutors; however, labor inspectors do not have jurisdiction to investigate such cases. (10)

In 2017, labor inspectors reported that they had sufficient resources to carry out inspections, and officials confirmed that the number of inspectors was adequate. (10)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in BiH took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including prosecution planning.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Police refer children detained for begging to appropriate social service providers. NGOs receive funding from either the Ministry of Security or the Ministry for Human Rights and Refugees to provide shelter to these children. (6) However, law enforcement personnel and prosecutors often are unwilling to pursue investigations and prosecutions against parents involved in the trafficking of their children, particularly for forced labor, and the shelters subsequently return the children to the parents who trafficked them. (10; 49) In addition, law enforcement officials sometimes penalize child victims of begging by issuing fines against the children. (49)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

NGOs and a government official acknowledged that, although judges and prosecutors receive some basic training on human trafficking through the Agency for Education and Training, additional training is needed on identifying children used for forced labor and begging. (30; 58; 59; 14) Prosecutors, police, and social workers continuously fail to identify forced begging as trafficking and instead classify them as child negligence or regard it as Roma custom and dismiss the charges against the perpetrators. (14; 49)

In 2017, the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE) Mission in BiH coordinated with the governments to provide trainings on identifying human trafficking, including victim identification and the use of internet communication technology in perpetuating human trafficking. (60; 61) The OSCE Mission also provided training to 30 judges and prosecutors on trafficking cases involving Roma children who are subject to forced begging. (14) In addition, frontline officers received training on human trafficking victim identification. (14) The NGO International Forum of Solidarity (EMMAUS) organized two trainings for 60 legal professionals on how to treat and work with victims of human trafficking. (14)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the inclusion of all relevant agencies.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
Department of the State Coordinator for Combating Trafficking in Persons (State Coordinator) within the MOS	Coordinate human trafficking victim protection efforts among relevant ministries at the entity level and among prosecutors at the state, entity, and local levels, as well as with NGOs. (11; 62) Oversee the human trafficking database, which includes data from NGOs, SIPA, SBP, and police agencies and Prosecutors' Offices at all levels. (55) Publish data from this database in its annual report on human trafficking. (11) Oversee shelter management and monitor NGO compliance with the agreed-upon provisions on victims' assistance. (55)
Strike Force for Combating Trafficking in Persons and Organized Illegal Migration (Anti-Trafficking Strike Force)	Coordinate human trafficking investigations across government agencies. (11) Convene monthly, with additional meetings scheduled as needed. (9; 11; 13; 59) Chaired by the Chief State Prosecutor, includes BiH, FBiH, RS, and BD ministries and agencies. (11; 53) Active in 2017. (10)
Inter-Ministerial Working Group	Monitor implementation of the National Action Plan to Counter Trafficking, the corresponding Action Plan, and the National Referral Mechanism. (11; 63) Comprises appointed representatives from the state and entity governments, including labor inspectors and elected representatives from NGOs. (4)
Regional Monitoring Teams	Facilitate anti-human trafficking coordination among state, entity, and cantonal-level institutions, as well as between NGOs and intergovernmental organizations. (11; 64) Includes labor inspectors. (15) In 2017, incorporated mental health centers and representatives of Daily Centers into the regional monitoring teams to help street children. (14)
Council for Children	Coordinate children's issues among state-level agencies and institutions under the Action Plan for Children of BiH. (65; 66)

Labor inspectors have been included in the National Referral Mechanism, which allows them to determine how a child became part of a begging ring. However, labor inspectors are not part of the Anti-Trafficking Strike Force. (10) During the reporting period, research found that the regional monitoring teams would benefit from training on human trafficking issues. (14) The Anti-Trafficking Strike Force also has lacked coordination because the BiH Prosecutor Office has not assigned a new representative, FBiH has not appointed additional members, and the State Investigative and Protection Agency rarely participates in the meetings. (14)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The Government of BiH has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including covering all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor‡

Policy	Description
Action Plan for Children of BiH (2015–2018)	Outlines a multidisciplinary approach to continue improving the government’s efforts to protect children’s rights. (67) Active in 2017. (49)
National Action Plan to Counter Trafficking (2016–2019)	Mandates that the government provide assistance to human trafficking victims, efficiently prosecute trafficking crimes, work to prevent human trafficking, and strengthen collaboration and coordination among stakeholders involved in combating human trafficking in BiH. (11; 68; 10) Active in 2017, with regional monitoring teams implementing activities, such as the National Referral Mechanism; enhancing victim protection; and publishing guidelines and indicators for stakeholders involved in combating human trafficking. (10; 14)
Council of Europe Action Plan for BiH (2015–2017)	Outlined a comprehensive strategy for cooperative efforts between the government and the Council of Europe. Included components designed to increase inclusive education and decrease discrimination against Roma. (69) Active and completed in 2017. (49)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (10; 70)

Although the Government of BiH has adopted the National Action Plan to Counter Trafficking and the Action Plan for Child Protection, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor, including for forced labor, or illicit activities. (4; 6; 11; 71; 10) Sources also have indicated that the government has not allocated adequate financial resources for effective implementation of inclusive education initiatives. (29; 72; 73; 31) In addition, Roma organizations and government agencies have expressed intentions to develop an action plan to combat child begging; however, the plan has not been completed. (10)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the Government of BiH funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including funding.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor‡

Program	Description
Registration Project	UNHCR-funded project, implemented by NGO Vaša Prava , which promotes the registration of Roma people to increase their access to social benefits and schools. (11; 53; 74) Helped 1,300 Roma individuals register for citizenship and enabled 19,000 individuals to apply for social inclusion programs from 2009 to 2016. (65; 75; 14) Active in 2017 by working with BiH authorities to simplify the process for birth and citizenship registration. (14)
Daily Centers†	Center for Social Welfare-supported and NGO-operated day care centers in seven locations across the country for vulnerable children, especially street children. (14) Provide direct assistance for children, including educational activities, counseling, food, and hygiene. (3; 24)
Assistance for Trafficking Victims†	Government program that allocates small grants to local NGOs for the provision of shelter and social services to victims of human trafficking, including counseling, educational assistance and job training for domestic victims, and visa and legal services for foreign victims of human trafficking. (58) In 2017, MOS and the Ministry of Human Rights and Refugees allocated $79,750 for shelters and $6,130 for European Anti-Trafficking Day. (14; 49) Daily Centers identified 130 children as potential human trafficking victims in 2017. (14)
Fight Against Trafficking in Human Beings and Organized Crime—Phase 2 (2014–2017)	EU-funded project implemented by the International Center for Migration Policy Development in six countries, including BiH. Aimed to build the capacity of participating governments to prevent human trafficking by providing policy, legal, and technical assistance. (76) Focused on improving victim identification, increasing the prosecution of traffickers, and strengthening coordination among stakeholders. (76) Active and completed in 2017. (49)
UNICEF Country Program (2015–2019)	UNICEF-funded program. Aims to reduce child poverty and enhance child protection and inclusive education and to create inclusive early education for Roma children, as well as identify gaps in access to education for Roma children and children with disabilities. (77) Active in 2017. (49)
United Nations Program and Common Budgetary Framework (2015–2019)	UN-funded project implemented by UN-affiliated implementing partners. Aims to provide inclusive education for Roma children and children with disabilities, plus social protection for vulnerable individuals. (78) Active in 2017. (49)

† Program is funded by the Government of BiH.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (14)

During the reporting period, amendments to the Law on Children’s Protection of BD were proposed, which would increase the amount of money given to cash transfers for children. (15; 49)

Bosnia and Herzegovina

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

As labor inspectors do not have a mandate to inspect informal work on the streets, staff from Daily Centers are often the first to identify children engaged in hazardous street work. Sarajevo's Center for Social Welfare's Mobile Team engages in daily outreach to children on the streets and to families in vulnerable communities. (5; 13) The Mobile Team staff stated, however, that they lack sufficient resources for their work, especially reliable transportation. (3; 49) Government support for outreach to street children in areas outside of Sarajevo varies significantly. Although most Daily Centers collaborate with local Centers for Social Welfare, most Daily Centers are not institutionalized and, therefore, lack consistent financial and technical support. (19; 49) This may limit the ability of Daily Centers to identify and assist children working on the streets. Although the government provides some social services for low-income families through the Center for Social Welfare, many families do not receive enough assistance to reduce their reliance on child labor, especially begging. (3; 49)

Some organizations that provide services to victims of domestic human trafficking may lack adequate financial resources. (4; 13; 30; 66) During the reporting period, research found that most NGOs that provide social services rely exclusively on grant funding from foreign donors. Their capacities have diminished as foreign assistance to NGOs has declined, creating obstacles for continued implementation of their programs. (14)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in BiH (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that all children are protected by labor law, including those who work in the informal sector, such as children engaged in street work.	2015 – 2017
	Ensure that BiH law prohibits the use of children in illicit activities, including using, procuring, and offering children for the production and trafficking of drugs.	2015 – 2017
	Ensure that the laws criminally prohibit the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups and that children are not punished for engagement in non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2017
	Include child begging in the list of hazardous occupations prohibited for children for all entities.	2016 – 2017
Enforcement	Collect and publish information on labor law enforcement efforts, including labor inspectorate funding.	2015 – 2017
	Ensure that labor inspectors receive training on sectors where child labor is known to occur and enable them to inspect for child labor in agriculture.	2017
	Enable labor inspectors to pursue forced child begging cases and hold parents legally accountable for trafficking their children.	2017
	Increase training for law enforcement prosecutors and judges on how to properly apply criminal law in cases of child labor trafficking, forced labor, and forced begging and not classifying cases as Roma custom.	2014 – 2017
Coordination	Include labor inspectors in the Anti-Trafficking Strike Force and ensure that the Strike Force fulfills its coordinating mandate with the inclusion of all relevant government entities and law enforcement.	2017
	Provide additional training to the regional monitoring teams on the referral and protection of human trafficking victims.	2016 – 2017
Government Policies	Adopt a policy designed to address child labor and its worst forms, other than child trafficking, including for forced labor and illicit activities.	2015 – 2017
	Ensure that inclusive education initiatives receive adequate funding.	2017
	Create an action plan to address forced begging for the children of the Roma population.	2017
Social Programs	Collect data on children involved in the worst forms of child labor to enhance policymakers' ability to identify problems more accurately and address them more effectively.	2009 – 2017
	Promote inclusive education for minority children, including Roma, by assisting parents in registering their children for birth and identity documentation that entitles them to access school, expanding efforts to reduce discrimination in schools, and mitigating the costs to families associated with education.	2011 – 2017
	Remove barriers to education for children with disabilities by ensuring that schools have adequate resources to provide the necessary accommodations.	2015 – 2017

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Social Programs	Institutionalize and provide sufficient funding for Daily Centers to ensure that they have the resources and technical support necessary to assist children involved in child labor and those who are at risk of involvement.	2014 – 2017
	Strengthen social protection programs that provide support to economically vulnerable families to reduce their reliance on child labor.	2014 – 2017
	Ensure that resources for human trafficking victims are sufficient to meet the needs of domestic victims.	2014 – 2017
	Increase funding for programs that provide social services, including housing, for child trafficking victims.	2015 – 2017

In 2017, Botswana made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the year, the government's primary school feeding program served 755 primary schools with an enrollment of 354,317 students. The government also finalized the Anti-Human Trafficking National Action Plan. However, children in Botswana engage in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation. Children also engage in child labor in cattle herding and domestic work. Key gaps remain in the country's legal framework, including the lack of minimum age for compulsory education and insufficient prohibitions for hazardous work. In addition, social programs do not always reach intended child labor victims, especially those engaged in cattle herding and domestic work.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Botswana engage in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation. Children also engage in child labor in cattle herding and domestic work. (1; 2; 3; 4; 5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Botswana. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		69.2

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2013, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (6)
Data were unavailable from Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis, 2018. (7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming activities, including picking beans (2; 8; 9; 10)
	Herding cattle (4; 2; 3; 10)
Services	Street work, including vending (1)
	Domestic work (1; 2; 4; 5)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in herding cattle and domestic work, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (10)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3; 5; 10)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

According to UNICEF data published in 2016, approximately 9 percent of children in Botswana are engaged in child labor. However, the data did not provide information about the sectors, types of activities, and hazards children encounter as child laborers. (11) Reports also indicate that children in Botswana are victims of commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. In addition, children of San ethnic minority groups may be subjected to forced labor conditions on private farms and cattle posts. (5; 4; 3)

Furthermore, UNICEF's data indicated that 16 percent of children of primary school age are not attending school, although the data did not reveal the direct cause. (11) In its 2017 and 2018 budget, the Government of Botswana allocated 17.2 percent of total government spending ($672 million) to education. (10) Primary education is free, and poor families receive free meals, toiletries, and school uniforms. (8; 10; 12) However, secondary school costs between $38 and $43 per year; some poor families may receive a tuition exemption. (12; 13) Research was unable to determine the number of families that benefitted from the tuition exemption during the year.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Botswana has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Botswana's legal framework to adequately protect children from child labor, including a lack of a compulsory education age that is consistent with the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	15	Articles 2 and 107 of the Employment Act (14)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 2 and 110 of the Employment Act (14)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 108 and 109 of the Employment Act (14)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 2 and 71 of the Employment Act; Articles 175 and 262 of the Penal Code; Section 114 of the Children's Act; Articles 9 and 10 of the Anti-Human Trafficking Act (14; 15; 16; 17)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 175 of the Penal Code; Section 114 of the Children's Act; Articles 9 and 10 of the Anti-Human Trafficking Act (15; 16; 17)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Sections 25 and 57–59 of the Children's Act (15)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Section 60 of the Children's Act (15)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment
State Compulsory	N/A*
State Voluntary	Yes	18	Section 17 of the Botswana Defence Force Act (18)
Non-state	Yes	18	Section 26 (4) of the Children's Act (15)
Compulsory Education Age	No
Free Public Education	Yes		Revised National Policy in Education, White Paper No. 12 of 1994; Section 18 of the Children's Act (15; 19)

* No conscription (18)

Under Botswana law, children working without a contract do not benefit from minimum age protections. Although the Employment Act allows children at age 14 to conduct light work activities, the government has yet to determine the types of light work activities permitted for children. (20) In addition, the Employment Act prohibits night work and hazardous underground work for children, but fails to prohibit other types of hazardous work, including work with dangerous machinery, equipment, and tools. (14) Although the government compiled a comprehensive list of hazardous occupations in 2013, the list has yet to be approved. (21; 22; 23)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor of Home Affairs and the Ministry of Defense, Justice, and Security that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Employment, Labour Productivity and Skills Development	Enforce child labor laws and policies. In the case of the Commissioner of Labor, authorized by the Employment Act to conduct labor inspections. (8; 14; 21) Facilitate coordination with local leaders and law enforcement officers. Post labor inspectors to District Council offices to carry out their duties. (24)
District and Municipal Council Child Welfare Divisions	Enforce child labor laws at the local levels. (8)
Botswana Police Service	Investigate cases of the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation of children and child trafficking. (2)
Ministry of Defense, Justice, and Security	Monitor suspected human trafficking cases and lead the Human Trafficking (Prohibition) Committee. (25; 26) In 2017, launched a booklet used as a reference document on Prevention and Combating Trafficking in Persons: Lessons from the SADC Region. (27)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Botswana took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Employment, Labour Productivity and Skills Development that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the lack of authority to assess penalties.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Although the government did not release information regarding its enforcement actions, an NGO reported that two children were found in child labor in domestic work. (10)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Botswana took actions to combat the worst forms of child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist in the operations of the Ministry of Defense, Justice, and Security (MDJS) that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Training for Investigators
Initial Training for New Employees	N/A (2)	N/A (10)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (2)	N/A (10)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (2)	Unknown (10)
Number of Investigations	9 (2)	1 (10)
Number of Violations Found	14 (2)	Unknown (10)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	14 (2)	1 (10)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (2)	0 (29)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (2)	Yes (10)

In 2017, the Directorate of Public Prosecutions (DPP) continued prosecution of a case of child commercial sexual exploitation involving a Zimbabwean perpetrator. The DPP also reported seven convictions pertaining to the ill treatment and neglect of children under the Children's Act, but did not provide information as to whether the cases involved child labor. (10)

The MDJS reported the need for technical support, training, and increased coordination among agencies to address human trafficking. It also indicated that rehabilitation services for human trafficking victims are also needed. (30) Reports indicate that police are sometimes insensitive, untrained in approaching and communicating with women and children victims, and lacking in investigative training to identify, aid, or assist in prosecuting and preventing human trafficking violations. (22; 25; 31)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
Human Trafficking (Prohibition) Committee	Establish a reporting and referral mechanism for children subjected to human trafficking. Created by the 2014 Anti-Human Trafficking Bill and led by the MDJS. (1) Met and completed drafting the Anti-Human Trafficking National Action Plan, which is slated to be launched in 2018. (10)
Advisory Committee on Child Labor	Oversee child labor issues and report to the government three to four times a year. Includes representatives from government agencies, various NGOs, worker federations, and employer organizations. (2; 21) Research was unable to determine whether the Advisory Committee on Child Labor was active during the reporting period.
Child Labor Committees	Identify child laborers at the village level. Includes social workers; school teachers; members of the Village Development Committees, which are local government structures; labor inspectors; and community leaders, including chiefs and priests. (2; 12; 10) Research was unable to determine whether the Child Labor Committees were active during the reporting period.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Outlines the government's plan to address child labor through legislation and policy, and includes awareness-raising programs and training on child labor for relevant stakeholders and implementers. (1) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Action Plan on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor during the reporting period.
Ministry of Labor and Home Affairs Sustainability Plan	Aims to incorporate addressing child labor issues into the regular duties of labor inspectors. Calls on local leaders and volunteers to identify and refer cases of child labor to social workers and school teachers to monitor attendance and promote retention. (10) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Ministry of Labor and Home Affairs Sustainability Plan during the reporting period.

Child labor elimination and prevention strategies are not included in some national policies, including the Education and Training Sector Strategic Plan, Ministry of Local Government Development Plans, National Plan of Action for Orphans and Vulnerable Children, Botswana National Youth Policy, and National Action Plan for Youth. (12; 32; 33; 34)

V. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor†

Program	Description
Government-Funded Programs to Combat Child Labor †	NGO-run shelters, with financial support from the government, cater to human trafficking victims, including children. (10) The National School Feeding Program focuses on providing meals to children (grades one through seven) in all public primary schools in the country. In 2017, the Primary School Feeding program involved 755 primary schools with an enrollment of 354,317 students. (10) The Remote Area Dweller Program provides a second meal to school children in remote areas, and to those from marginalized communities. (10) The Orphan Care Program provides orphans with meals and subsidizes the cost of school fees and transportation costs. (26; 35)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (36; 37)

Although Botswana has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the scope of the problem, especially in cattle herding and domestic work.

VI. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Botswana (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Establish light work provisions specific enough to prevent children's involvement in child labor.	2016 – 2017
	Prohibit hazardous work for children younger than age 18 in all relevant sectors, including in agriculture.	2009 – 2017
	Ensure that the law's minimum age protections apply to children working without a contract.	2010 – 2017
	Determine a compulsory education age consistent with the minimum age of employment.	2010 – 2017
Enforcement	Authorize labor inspectors to assess penalties for child labor violations.	2016 – 2017
	Publish information about the Labor Inspectorate's funding, number of inspectors employed, number of inspections conducted, types of training of labor inspectors on child labor issues, and the amount of child labor violations found and penalties imposed.	2016 – 2017
	Publish information about the number of investigations, prosecutions, and convictions involving the worst forms of child labor.	2017
	Ensure the Ministry of Defense, Justice, and Security receives sufficient training to address victims of human trafficking.	2017

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into relevant policies, such as the Education and Training Sector Strategic Plan, Ministry of Local Government Development Plans, National Plan of Action for Orphans and Vulnerable Children, Botswana National Youth Policy, and National Action Plan for Youth.	2011 – 2017
	Implement key child labor elimination policies, such as the National Action Plan on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor.	2017
Social Programs	Collect and publish child labor data on the sectors in which children work, the types of child labor activities, and the hazards child laborers encounter, to inform policies and programs.	2013 – 2017
	Develop programs to address child labor in domestic work and cattle herding.	2012 – 2017

In 2017, Brazil made a significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government published an updated version of the “Dirty List,” which contains information on employers that the Ministry of Labor has found to be using slave labor, including that of children. Civil police officers from 24 states and the Federal District conducted a large operation to combat the sexual exploitation of children, including child pornography. The city of Campinas, the second largest city in Brazil’s largest state, São Paulo, approved a Municipal Plan for the Eradication of Child Labor. In addition, the Labor Prosecution Service launched the #StopChildLabor campaign, using celebrities to raise awareness of child labor throughout the country. However, children in Brazil engage in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture, including in the production of coffee. From September to December, labor inspections were limited to state capitals or cities that have a regional Ministry of Labor office due to the lack of funds for vehicles, gasoline, air travel, and daily lodging and meals for labor inspectors. Furthermore, there are not enough labor inspectors to provide sufficient coverage of the workforce, and there is a lack of resources, including specialized shelters, for child victims of commercial sexual exploitation.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Brazil engage in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation. (1; 2; 3) Children also engage in child labor in the production of coffee. (4; 5) Although the government has not yet published an analysis of the results from the 2016 National Household Survey (PNAD), the survey found 998,000 children ages 5–17 in child labor, including 190,000 children ages 5–13 and 808,000 children ages 14–17. (6) The survey also found that 20 million children are engaged in domestic work, which includes children engaged in household chores as well as child labor. (7) The North and Northeast regions had the highest number of child laborers, and 48 percent of these child laborers ages 5–13 work in agriculture. (6) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Brazil.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of bananas, ceramics, citrus fruits,† cocoa, coffee, corn, cotton,† manioc, mate tea, pineapples,† rice, sisal,† soy, sugarcane,† and tobacco† (4; 10; 11; 12; 13; 14; 15; 5)
	Cattle ranching and raising livestock, including hogs, poultry, and sheep (12; 16; 5; 15)
	Fishing and harvesting mollusks† (17; 5; 15; 18)
	Forestry, including logging,† extracting carnauba palm leaves, and producing charcoal† (13; 19; 15; 5; 20; 21)
	Slaughtering animals,† including for beef production (22; 23; 24)
Industry	Processing manioc flour† and cashews† (11; 25; 26; 27)
	Production of bricks† (13; 28)
	Production of footwear† and textiles, including garments (12; 13; 29; 15; 30)
	Work in quarries† (31)
	Street work,† including vending,† washing cars,† and garbage scavenging† (32; 33; 34; 35; 36)
Services	Work in markets and fairs, including hauling fruits and vegetables and transporting heavy loads (23; 36; 37; 38)
	Work in fast-food establishments (39)
	Selling alcoholic beverages† (38)
	Artistic and cultural work and playing in soccer clubs (12; 40)
	Domestic work† (32; 38)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, including use in the production of pornography, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1; 2; 33; 34; 3; 35)
	Forced domestic work and playing in soccer clubs, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (41; 33; 42)
	Forced labor in agriculture, including in the production of coffee and manioc (4; 43; 10; 33)
	Use by gangs to perform illicit activities, including drug trafficking, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (32; 33; 38; 44; 35; 45; 46)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

While the overall scope and magnitude of the commercial sexual exploitation of children is unknown, the government acknowledges that it occurs throughout Brazil, with higher rates reported in the North and Northeast regions. (47; 42) Child sex tourism is particularly common in tourist and coastal areas. In addition, girls from other South American countries are exploited in commercial sex in Brazil. (42)

Research found that schools, particularly those in rural areas, are overcrowded, have poor infrastructure, and lack basic resources and teachers. (35; 48; 33) In addition, approximately 11,000 indigenous children in remote, rural areas do not have birth certificates, which may affect their ability to access education because birth registration documents are required for school enrollment. (33; 35; 49) The government is aware of the problem and drafted legislation that will alter the National Education Law and allow schools to register children without birth registration. (49)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Brazil has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Brazil's legal framework to adequately protect children from child labor, including child trafficking for labor exploitation.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 403 of the Labor Code (50)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 2 of the Hazardous Work List (51)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Hazardous Work List (51)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 149 and 149-A of the Penal Code (52; 53)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Article 149-A of the Penal Code; Article 244A of the Child and Adolescent Statute (53; 54)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 218-A, 218-B, and 227–228 of the Penal Code; Articles 240–241 and 244A of the Child and Adolescent Statute (52; 54)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 33 and 40 of the National System of Public Policies on Drugs; Article 244-B of the Child and Adolescent Statute (54; 55)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment
State Compulsory	Yes	18	Article 5 of the Military Service Law (56)
State Voluntary	Yes	17	Article 127 of the Military Service Regulation (57)
Non-state	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17	Article 4 of the National Education Law (58)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 4 of the National Education Law (58)

In October, the Ministry of Labor (MTE) published a new version of the “Dirty List” which comprised 131 employers found to be using slave labor. (59) In addition, during the reporting period, Espírito Santo state signed Law 10.755, which establishes the month of June as “Red June.” Starting in 2018, this month will be dedicated to the prevention and eradication of child labor. (60)

Prohibitions against child trafficking for forced labor exploitation do not meet international standards because they require the use of threats, violence, coercion, fraud, or abuse to be established for the crime of child trafficking. (53)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MTE that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MTE)	Conduct labor inspections and enforce child and forced labor laws. (61) Mobile inspection units comprising labor inspectors, labor prosecutors, Federal Police officers, and other law enforcement officials conduct inspections at sites in which forced labor, including forced child labor, is suspected. (12; 62)
Labor Prosecution Service (MPT)	Prosecute child labor and forced labor violations by working with prosecutors from MPT's National Committee to Combat Child and Adolescent Labor, an in-house body that coordinates efforts to combat child labor. Collects fines for forced labor violations and allocates funds for initiatives that address child labor and forced labor. (63) In 2017, held trainings on child labor for municipal guardianship counselors ( conselheiros tutelares ) in all states and coordinated with the ILO to launch the Slave Labor Global Observatory, an interactive platform that integrates several government databases to promote the development of policies and programs to prevent and eliminate forced labor. (64; 35)
Military, Civil, and Federal Police	Military police operate at the local level and act as first responders. They refer cases to the civil police for investigation. (35) Federal police work on interstate or international cases and maintain a database to track cases of human trafficking for sexual exploitation. (12; 35) Federal Highway Police identify areas at high risk of commercial sexual exploitation. (65)

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Justice	Lead efforts to combat human trafficking and coordinate Advanced Posts ( Postos Avançados ) and state-run Anti-Trafficking Coordination Centers ( Núcleos de Enfrentamento ). There are 12 Advanced Posts ( Postos Avançados ) that identify human traffickers and potential victims in high-transit areas, including airports and bus stations. (66) Provide guidance to federal, state, and local government officials on referrals for victims of human trafficking, including to Anti-Trafficking Coordination Centers ( Núcleos de Enfrentamento ), Specialized Social Assistance Reference Centers, and NGOs. (66)
Ministry of Human Rights	Administer Dial 100, a human rights violation hotline that directs child labor complaints to the appropriate institution for follow up. In the first half of 2017, Dial 100 received 2,739 calls reporting child labor; 2,067 calls for commercial sexual exploitation of children, including 301 calls for child pornography and 13 calls for child sex tourism; 39 calls for child trafficking; and 7 calls for forced child labor. (35)
National Forum of the Judiciary for Monitoring the Effectiveness of Policies on Forced Labor and Human Trafficking (FONTET)	Collect data on forced labor and human trafficking cases. Comprises 15 judges, including the president of the Supreme Federal Court, judges from the Supreme Labor Court, and 12 members of the National Council of Justice. (66)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Brazil took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MTE that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2016	2017

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (67)	Yes (35)

In 2017, the government conducted 7,491 child labor inspections, an increase from 5,376 inspections in 2016; however, research found that the Labor Inspectorate experienced significant funding issues, which limited their ability to enforce child labor laws. (16; 35; 46) In July, inspectors declined requests from the Labor Prosecution Service (MPT) to conduct labor inspections in the states of São Paulo and Rio Grande do Norte due to a lack of funding. (69) From September to December, labor inspections were limited to state capitals or cities that have a regional MTE office due to the lack of funds for vehicles, gasoline, air travel, and daily lodging and meals for labor inspectors. In addition, MTE's mobile inspection units did not conduct child labor and forced labor inspections during this four-month period. (70; 71) Furthermore, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Brazil's workforce, which includes approximately 110 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Brazil would employ about 7,360 labor inspectors. (72; 73; 74)

Upon finding children in hazardous working conditions, MTE officials immediately remove the children and return them to their families or refer them to social services providers. In 2017, inspectors removed 2,078 children in child labor from their workplaces, a decrease from 2,483 children removed in 2016. (35; 75)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Brazil took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including holding violators of child labor laws accountable in accordance with the law.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Training for Investigators
Initial Training for New Employees	Yes (75)	Yes (35)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (76)	Yes (66)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (67)	Yes (35)
Number of Investigations	950 (67)	Unknown
Number of Violations Found	Unknown	Unknown
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown	32 (35)
Number of Convictions	Unknown	5 (35)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (67)	Yes (35)

In October 2017, more than 1,000 civil police from 24 states and the Federal District conducted a large operation to combat the sexual exploitation of children, including child pornography. More than 150 search warrants were executed, and over 100 individuals were arrested for their involvement in producing, storing, and sharing child pornography. (77; 78) During the reporting period, MPT initiated 19 criminal prosecutions for child labor violations in São Paulo, 10 in Santa Catarina, and 3 in Paraná. MPT won three convictions for child labor violations in São Paulo and two in Santa Catarina. (35) Although the Federal Police claim to maintain a database to track cases of human trafficking for sexual exploitation, there is no process for collecting and tracking the data, and it is not disaggregated by victims' ages. (79)

According to the government, the judicial system does not sufficiently hold perpetrators accountable for child labor law violations, including forced child labor, which may lead to a sense of impunity among violators. (12)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
National Committee for the Eradication of Child Labor	Lead the implementation of the National Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and the Protection of Working Adolescents. Led by the MTE, includes 17 government agencies and representatives from trade unions, business associations, and civil society organizations. (80; 81)
Intersectoral Commission to Combat Sexual Violence Against Children and Adolescents	Monitor implementation of the National Plan to Combat Sexual Violence Against Children and Adolescents. Led by the Ministry of Justice's Special Secretariat for Human Rights (SDH). (82; 83)
National Committee to Combat Forced Labor	Coordinate and evaluate the implementation of the National Plan for the Eradication of Forced Labor. Led by the SDH. (84)
National Committee to Combat Trafficking in Persons	Coordinate activities to address human trafficking. Led by the Ministry of Justice. (85) In 2017, continued to monitor and evaluate the results of the Second Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons, which ended in 2016, and developed the third national action plan. (42)
Interagency Committee to Implement Strategies to Ensure the Protection of Children's and Adolescents' Rights	Coordinate the implementation of policies to protect children's and adolescents' rights, including the National Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and the Protection of Working Adolescents. Led by the SDH. (86)

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
Labor Justice Commission for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of Working Adolescents	Organize efforts of the labor courts to eliminate child labor and ensure that adolescents have decent work opportunities. (87) Includes 11 representatives from the Superior Labor Court and regional labor courts. (88)
Anti-Trafficking Coordination Centers ( Núcleos de Enfrentamento )	Coordinate activities carried out by local, state, and federal agencies to combat human trafficking. Established in 16 states and the Federal District. (66)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor‡

Policy	Description
National Plan to Combat Sexual Violence Against Children and Adolescents (2013–2020)	Identifies strategies to prevent the sexual exploitation of children, protect children’s rights, and assist child victims. (83)
National Plan for the Eradication of Forced Labor	Establishes the policy framework to address forced labor. (89)
Federal Pact for the Eradication of Forced Labor	Aims to establish a forced labor database to share research and data, create state-level plans to combat forced labor, and strengthen interagency coordination. Led by the Ministry of Justice’s SDH, and signed by 15 states. (90; 91)
National Education Plan (2014–2024)	Aims to expand access to education and improve the quality of education. Plans to allocate 10 percent of Brazil’s GDP to public education by 2024. (92)

‡ The government had other policies which may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (93)

In April, the city of Campinas, the second largest city in Brazil’s largest state, São Paulo, launched a Municipal Plan for the Eradication of Child Labor. (35) An analysis of the National Education Plan found that only 6 of the 20 targets that should have been met by the end of 2017 were totally or partially achieved. Research found that greater resources are needed to ensure adequate implementation. (94) Although the government has adopted the National Plan to Combat Sexual Violence Against Children and Adolescents, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to assist child victims of commercial sexual exploitation.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor‡

Program	Description
National Program to Eradicate Child Labor [Programa de Erradicação do Trabalho Infantil (PETI)]†	Ministry of Social Development (MDS) social assistance program that combats child labor through awareness-raising activities, victim identification and protection, and conditional cash transfers. (62; 95) To receive program benefits, participants must ensure that children are not working and maintain at least 85 percent school attendance. (96)
#StopChildLabor Campaign* (#ChegaDeTrabalhoInfantil)	MPT campaign that uses celebrities to raise awareness of child labor. (97)
Living Together and Strengthening Links Program [ Serviço de Convivência e Fortalecimento de Vínculo (SCFV)]†	MDS social assistance program for vulnerable groups, including child laborers. Aims to strengthen familial and communal ties through sports, artistic, and cultural activities. Offers services at Social Assistance Reference Centers and Living Centers. (98)
Social Assistance Reference Centers†	MDS and SDH program that provides vulnerable populations, including victims of child labor and commercial sexual exploitation, with psychological, social, and legal services. (99; 100) In 2017, there were 2,521 Specialized Social Assistance Reference Centers located throughout the country; however, many centers lacked necessary funds to sufficiently serve clients’ needs. (42; 66)

Program	Description
Family Stipend ( Bolsa Família )†	MDS program that provides families living in poverty and extreme poverty with cash transfers. (32; 101) In 2017, 93.1 percent of children ages 6–15 met the minimum requirement of 85 percent school attendance; 82.3 percent of children ages 16–17 met the minimum requirement of 75 percent school attendance. (102; 103)
Brazil Without Extreme Poverty ( Brasil Sem Miséria )†	MDS program that lifts people out of extreme poverty by guaranteeing a minimum income; expanding access to public services, including education, health, and citizenship; and increasing job opportunities and income generation for the poorest families. (104) One program component, Caring Brazil ( Brasil Carinhoso ), focuses on Bolsa Família participants with children ages 0–15 with a monthly family income of less than $22 per person. (105)
National Program on Job Training and Employment ( Programa Nacional de Acesso ao Ensino Técnico e Emprego )†	Ministry of Education program that provides job training and employment opportunities to workers and social program recipients, including high school students. (106; 107)
South-South Cooperation Projects†	Government of Brazil-funded projects implemented by the ILO to combat child labor and promote South-South cooperation. (108) In 2017, the government hosted representatives from six countries to discuss ILO's child labor predictor model and the redesign of the PETI program. (109)
USDOL-Funded Projects	USDOL-funded projects implemented by the ILO that aim to combat child labor and forced labor. The Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues Project is implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 , established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. (110) Consolidating and Disseminating Efforts to Combat Forced Labor in Brazil and Peru (2012–2018) is a $6.8 million project that combats forced labor, including forced child labor, in Brazil and Peru, and shares Brazil's best practices with the Government of Peru and Peruvian stakeholders. (111; 112) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.

† Program is funded by the Government of Brazil.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (113; 114)

Because the National Program to Eradicate Child Labor (PETI) and Bolsa Família are decentralized, municipal governments are responsible for their implementation. Some municipalities do not have the necessary human and financial resources to fully implement and effectively monitor these programs. (32) Many states also report a lack of resources to adequately assist victims of human trafficking. (42) In addition, research found a lack of specialized shelters for child victims of commercial sexual exploitation. (33; 42)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Brazil (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that laws do not require the use of threats, violence, coercion, fraud, or abuse to establish the crime of child trafficking for forced labor exploitation.	2016 – 2017
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2017
Enforcement	Publish information regarding the number of labor inspections conducted at worksites, number of child labor violations for which penalties were imposed, number of penalties imposed that were collected; and the number of criminal investigations conducted and violations found.	2012 – 2017
	Significantly increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2014 – 2017
	Ensure that the Labor Inspectorate receives adequate funding to conduct child labor and forced labor inspections throughout the year in all areas of Brazil.	2017
	Systematically collect and track data on cases regarding human trafficking for sexual exploitation and ensure the data is disaggregated by victims' ages.	2009 – 2017

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure that all violators of child labor laws, including the worst forms of child labor, are held accountable in accordance with the law.	2015 – 2017
Government Policies	Provide adequate resources to ensure that the goals outlined in the National Education Plan are achieved.	2015 – 2017
	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor, such as children engaged in hazardous work.	2017
Social Programs	Ensure that schools have an adequate number of trained teachers and basic resources, and improve school infrastructure to ensure all children, particularly those in rural areas, have access to education.	2013 – 2017
	Expand the accessibility of birth registration services in remote areas and ensure indigenous communities are aware of the benefits of birth registration.	2013 – 2017
	Provide local governments with the necessary resources to fully implement and monitor PETI and Bolsa Família .	2009 – 2017
	Provide adequate resources to state governments to ensure that child trafficking victims receive appropriate social services; and ensure the availability of specialized shelters for child victims of commercial sexual exploitation.	2012 – 2017

Burkina Faso

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2017, Burkina Faso made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government trained law enforcement officials on child labor and began piloting a new child labor monitoring system. The government also validated a National Strategy to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor, which is still awaiting adoption by the Council of Ministers. However, children in Burkina Faso engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and artisanal gold mining. Children also perform dangerous tasks in cotton harvesting. Limited resources for the enforcement of child labor laws may hinder government efforts to protect children from engaging in the worst forms of child labor. In addition, the Labor Code does not identify the activities in which children may engage in light work.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Burkina Faso engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and artisanal gold mining. Children also perform dangerous tasks in cotton harvesting. (1; 2; 3; 4; 5; 6) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Burkina Faso.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	42.1 (2,116,752)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	41.9
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	21.7
Primary Completion Rate (%)		61.7

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (7)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Enquête Démographique et de Santé et à Indicateurs Multiples, 2010. (8)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Planting, weeding, and harvesting crops, including cotton and mangos (2; 3; 4; 9; 5; 10; 11)
	Raising and herding † livestock, including cattle and goats (4; 10; 12; 13; 14)
Industry	Artisanal mining † of gold, including digging † and crushing † rock, installing dynamite, † working underground, † carrying water and other heavy loads, † and using cyanide † and mercury † (2; 5; 12; 15; 16; 17; 11; 18; 19; 20; 21; 22; 23; 24; 25; 6; 26; 27)
	Quarrying † and transporting heavy loads † while working to extract granite (14; 28; 25; 29; 30; 31; 32; 33)
	Working in carpentry † and construction (12; 13)
Services	Domestic work (3; 10; 12; 13; 6; 34; 35)
	Street work, including vending † (10; 12; 13; 33)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor ‡	Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking (20)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (10; 6; 36; 37)
	Farming, including production of cotton and livestock raising, domestic work, begging, gold mining, and quarrying, each as a result of human trafficking (2; 4; 36; 38; 20; 39)

Burkina Faso is a destination, transit point, and source for child trafficking to and from other West African countries. (36; 40; 41; 42; 43) The practice of confiage, which involves sending a child to live with a relative or friend to attend school in a larger town or city, may place children at risk of internal human trafficking. (28) Child labor in artisanal gold mining is particularly acute and often exposes children to dangerous chemicals used in the gold extraction process, such as cyanide and mercury. (4; 5; 44; 45; 46; 47)

Although the Law Orienting the Education System mandates free education until age 16, uniform costs, school-related fees, teacher shortages, and school infrastructure shortfalls in rural areas hinder children's access to education. (1; 2; 6; 29; 48) About a quarter of children under age 5 in Burkina Faso lack a birth certificate. As birth certificates are required to attend school, many of these children remain out of school and vulnerable to child labor. (49; 50)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Burkina Faso has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Burkina Faso's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including unspecific light work provisions.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 152 of the Labor Code; Order Deviating the Age of Admission to Employment (51; 52)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 149–150 of the Labor Code; Article 1 of the Hazardous Work List (51; 53)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 153 of the Labor Code; Articles 3–6 of the Hazardous Work List; Article 77 of the Mining Code (51; 53; 54)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 5 and 153 of the Labor Code; Articles 3–5 of the Law Suppressing the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography; Article 1 of the Law on Combating Trafficking of Persons and Similar Practices (51; 55; 56)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 153 of the Labor Code; Articles 1–5 and 14–15 of the Law on Combating Trafficking of Persons and Similar Practices (51; 56)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 153 of the Labor Code; Articles 3–4, 7–10, and 20 of the Law Suppressing the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography (51; 55)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 153 of the Labor Code (51)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
State Compulsory	N/A*
State Voluntary	Yes	20	Article 2 of the Decree Organizing Operations Related to Convoking the Contingent (57)
Non-state	Yes	18	Articles 153 and 424 of the Labor Code (51)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 4 of the Law Orienting the Education System (48)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 6 of the Law Orienting the Education System (48)

* No conscription (58)

The light work provisions in the Labor Code are not specific enough to prevent children from involvement in child labor, as activities in which light work may be permitted are not identified in legislation. (51; 52)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established relevant institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Public Service, Labor, and Social Security (MFPTSS) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Public Service, Labor, and Social Security (MFPTSS)	Enforce labor laws, including child labor laws and laws on the worst forms of child labor, and establish a government policy to combat child labor. (10; 45; 59; 60) Use provincial committees to raise awareness, conduct workshops for community members, and enforce laws at the local level. (41; 61)
Ministry of Women, National Solidarity, and Family (MFSNF)	Remove children from exploitative child labor, provide reintegration services through its mobile unit for intervention, and work with local village surveillance committees on awareness-raising efforts through participation in joint routine inspections with MFPTSS, the lead agency on child labor law enforcement. (10; 59; 62) Operate a free hotline to report child abuse. Maintain civil registry offices in maternity wards to register newborn babies. (1; 63; 64; 65) Use its National Council for Childhood to oversee all policies for the survival, protection, development, and participation of children in broader policy initiatives. (66)
Ministry of Territorial Administration, Decentralization and Interior Security (MATDSI)	Through its Morals Brigade in the MATDSI National Police Force, oversee criminal cases involving children and women, which are referred to the Ministry of Justice for prosecution. (67; 68) Assist MFPTSS through joint routine inspections related to child labor in the course of actions against traffickers. (62)
Ministry of Justice	Investigate and prosecute crimes related to child labor, including its worst forms. (69) Appoint one or more judges who specialize in child protection issues to each high court to oversee juvenile court cases. May also collaborate with MFSNF social workers in charge of child protection to conduct investigations on behalf of vulnerable children, including victims of child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, exploitative child labor, and begging. (70)
Parliamentary Network for the Promotion of Child Rights	Train government officials on children's rights, including child labor laws and other issues affecting children. (71; 72; 2)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Burkina Faso took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MFPTSS that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2016	2017

In 2017, the government employed 149 labor controllers to assist the 169 labor inspectors, who are in charge of conducting labor inspections; however, the government indicated that it lacks adequate resources to enforce labor laws throughout the country, including the human and financial resources needed to carry out a sufficient number of preliminary labor inspections and follow-up inspections to ensure remediation of notices to comply with labor law obligations. (1; 36; 59; 47) The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Burkina Faso's workforce, which includes over 8.5 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Burkina Faso should employ about 213 inspectors. (74; 75)

The government conducted a training for 35 government and non-governmental individuals—from the media, mining unions, and others—on the application of legal texts on the rights of children, including in situations of economic and sexual exploitation of children at gold mining sites and quarries. (76)

The MFPTSS publishes an annual report listing 12 types of labor infractions; however, none relate to child labor. (10) Law enforcement collaborates ad hoc with the Ministry of Women, National Solidarity, and Family (MFSNF) to provide social services to child labor victims. (73; 29) In 2017, the government began implementation and assessment of the pilot phase in the Mouhan region of the Système de Surveillance du Travail des Enfants (Child Labor Monitoring System), aiming to reduce and eliminate the incidence of child labor through increased surveillance. (47; 77) It is unknown how many cases of child labor were identified as a result of complaints made to the MFSNF hotline. (58)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Burkina Faso took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including haphazard application of standard victim identification and referral procedures by authorities and front-line responders.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Number of Convictions	Unknown (29)	Unknown* (58)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (29)	Yes (47)

* The government does not publish this information. (58)

Although the government has standard victim identification and referral procedures, authorities and front-line responders do not apply them uniformly. (43) As part of regional training, the UNODC provided a workshop for police and gendarme, and heads of justice schools on issues of illicit smuggling and trafficking of persons. (78)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
National Coordination Committee for the National Action Plan to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor (CNC-PAN/PFTE)	Supervise, evaluate, and oversee implementation of the National Action Plan to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor. Chaired by the MFPTSS Directorate to Combat Child Labor and its Worst Forms, includes representatives from various civil society organizations, 24 government ministries, and 6 observers from donor countries and international NGOs. (10; 12; 59) Hold meetings twice a year to review efforts to combat child labor and identify needs. (59)
MFPTSS Directorate to Combat Child Labor and its Worst Forms	Coordinate and lead interagency efforts to combat child labor, including its worst forms; collect information on child labor; and conduct awareness-raising activities. Serve as the Secretariat for the CNC-PAN/PFTE. (69; 47)
National Committee for Vigilance and Surveillance Against the Trafficking in Persons and Assimilated Practices (CNVS)	Coordinate actions at the national level to combat the worst forms of child labor, including human trafficking. Oversee Committees for Vigilance and Surveillance in each of the regions. (36; 41) The MFSNF serves as president and the MATDSI is vice president. (36; 63) Includes representatives from the MFPTSS, the Ministry of Justice, the Ministry of Women and Gender, and NGOs. (36)
Child Protection Networks	Assist the CNVS with coordinating and facilitating the collection of statistical data on human trafficking, in particular the trafficking of women and children. Established by the MFSNF, comprises social workers, magistrates, judges, police officers, health workers, and NGOs in 23 of the country's 45 provinces. (79)

Poor coordination among ministries, lack of research to determine whether the coordinating bodies were active, and a lack of resources, such as computers and electricity, continued to hamper the government's ability to coordinate efforts to fully address child trafficking. (1; 36)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies and covering all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor‡

Policy	Description
2015 National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking	Combats human trafficking; developed by the MFSNF and implemented by the CNVS. (36)
Communal Action Plan Against Trafficking (2013–2018)	Seeks to prevent child trafficking, raise awareness in local communities, and rehabilitate and reintegrate victims of child trafficking. Includes government plans to replicate elsewhere in the country, however currently piloted in Diébougou. (36; 79)
National Parenting Program	Aims to support families in their efforts to provide education and care for their children to reduce their vulnerability to child trafficking. (36; 79)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (20; 29; 36; 80; 81; 82)

The First Lady of Burkina Faso, along with other leading figures, made a declaration in Abidjan, Côte d'Ivoire, on child protection, including child trafficking, exploitation, child labor, and all other forms of violence against children. (83; 84)

Although the National Action Plan to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor ended in 2015, a National Strategy to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor (SN-PFTE) was validated in 2017. The SN-PFTE is currently awaiting adoption by the Council of Ministers. (47; 85; 86; 87; 58) The government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the National Plan for Economic and Social Development. (29; 42; 88) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the 2015 National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking, Communal Action Plan Against Trafficking, and the National Parenting Program. (44; 47)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor‡

Program	Description
National Program for the Fight Against Child Labor on Artisanal Gold Mining Sites and Quarries (2015–2019)†	The MFSNF program that aims to prevent and withdraw children from working in artisanal gold mines as part of the government’s efforts to eliminate child labor in mining by 2025. (1; 36; 73; 89; 90) Seeks to strengthen child protection systems, improve coordination among stakeholders, and implement existing legislation. Builds on the previous project (2009–2013) that aimed to eliminate child labor in mines and quarries. (73) Approximately $42.9 million, 40 percent of the program costs, to be provided by the government. (1) In 2017, research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken.
Country Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce Child Labor II (CLEAR II)	USDOL-funded capacity-building project implemented by Winrock International and partners Verité and Lawyers Without Borders in seven countries to build local and national capacity of the governments to address child labor. (91; 92; 93) Additional information is available on the DOL website.
MFSNF Projects to Combat Human Trafficking†	MFSNF-funded programs aim to combat human trafficking through the operation of 23 transit centers that provide food, medical assistance, and counseling to child trafficking victims and children vulnerable to trafficking. (36; 42; 64; 43) The transit centers aim to reintegrate victims into their communities and facilitate repatriation of foreign victims when possible. (68) The National Parenting Program assists parents in managing and educating their children to combat child trafficking. (79) The government funds nationwide media campaigns to combat human trafficking by providing advocacy, raising awareness, and building capacity for key actors involved in child protection issues, including child trafficking. (79; 36) The government operates watchdog and monitoring committees to ensure that all cases of alleged trafficking of children are reported to the justice system by social workers. (94) In 2017, research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken.
World Bank-Funded Projects	Includes $51 million Education Access and Quality Improvement Project to support the government in increasing access to preschool education in the two poorest regions and secondary education in the five poorest regions, and improve teaching and education. $50 million Social Safety Net Project to provide income support to poor households and lay the foundations for a basic safety net system in Burkina Faso. (95; 96) In 2017, research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken.
Resilience and Economic Growth in the Sahel—Enhanced Resilience (REGIS—ER) (November 2013–November 2018)	Over $70 million USAID-funded, 5-year project to increase food security and improve livelihoods in Niger and Burkina Faso. Works to increase the resilience of chronically vulnerable populations in marginal agricultural and agro-pastoral zones in Niger and Burkina Faso, particularly in 23 communes in the marginal agriculture and agro-pastoral belt. (44; 97; 98) In 2017, resulted in increased access to formal financial services for project participants—to savings by 646 percent and to credit by 1,300 percent. (62)

‡ The Government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (2; 10; 29; 99; 100; 101; 102; 103; 104)

Although Burkina Faso has social programs to address the worst forms of child labor in the production of cotton and in gold mining, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem. (1; 2)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Burkina Faso (Table 11).

Burkina Faso

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that light work provisions are specific enough to prohibit children's involvement in child labor.	2016 – 2017
Enforcement	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice ratio.	2014 – 2017
	Ensure that labor law enforcement receives sufficient resources to fulfill their mandates, including by conducting an adequate number of inspections and following up after preliminary inspections to ensure remediation of notices to comply with certain labor law obligations.	2009 – 2017
	Publish statistics on the enforcement of child labor laws, including funding, the number and type of labor inspections conducted, labor violations found, and penalties imposed and collected.	2009 – 2017
	Include the number of child labor infractions in the MFPTSS annual report.	2015 – 2017
	Establish a mechanism to log all calls to the MFSNF child protection hotline and track cases of child labor for referral to law enforcement or social services providers.	2015 – 2017
	Ensure that authorities and front-line responders apply standard victim identification and referral procedures uniformly.	2016 – 2017
	Publish statistics on the criminal enforcement of child labor laws, including the number of investigations, violations found, prosecutions, and convictions.	2016 – 2017
Coordination	Ensure that coordinating bodies receive adequate resources, such as computers and electricity, to accomplish their mandates.	2015 – 2017
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the National Plan for Economic and Social Development policy.	2013 – 2017
	Take steps to implement the 2015 National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking, the Communal Action Plan Against Trafficking, and the National Parenting Program.	2016 – 2017
Social Programs	Improve access to education by eliminating school-related fees and increasing the number of schools and teachers in rural areas.	2010 – 2017
	Make efforts to register children at birth to ensure access to social services, including education.	2010 – 2017
	Expand existing programs to fully address child labor in the production of cotton and in gold mining.	2009 – 2017
	Undertake activities to support the National Program for the Fight Against Child Labor on Artisanal Gold Mining Sites and Quarries projects and the MFSNF projects to combat human trafficking.	2016 – 2017

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

In 2017, Burma made efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor, but also was complicit in the use of forced child labor. Despite initiatives to address child labor, Burma is receiving an assessment of no advancement because its national armed forces recruited, sometimes through force or coercion, and used children as combatants in armed conflict. The military also forced children to work as porters, cleaners, and cooks in conflict areas. In addition, Burmese security forces perpetuated acts of violence against the Rohingya people in northern Rakhine State. These operations, which constituted ethnic cleansing, resulted in the displacement of thousands of Rohingya children to refugee camps in Bangladesh, where they are vulnerable to labor exploitation and commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. In central Rakhine, Rohingya children were denied access to education due to school segregation and travel restrictions. Otherwise, the government made some progress in addressing child labor, including by establishing the National Child Labor Committee to coordinate efforts to address child labor and implementing the National Action Plan on Child Labor. In addition, the government's Technical Working Group on Child Labor finalized the list of hazardous work prohibited for children. Children in Burma also engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. The penalties imposed for recruiting and using children in the military are not appropriate for the seriousness of the crime. In addition, the legal framework does not prohibit the recruitment and use of children by non-state armed groups.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Burma engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and armed conflict. (1; 2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Burma.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	3.3 (312,152)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	86.0
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14
Primary Completion Rate (%)		88.9

Source for all other data: Report on Child Labor in Myanmar, 2015. Data were not available for the percent of children combining work and school. (4)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including rubber, sugarcane, beans and pulses, rice, betel nut, and bamboo (5; 6; 7; 8; 9; 4)
	Fishing and processing fish and seafood (4; 6; 10; 7)
	Forestry, including on teak plantations (4; 11)
Industry	Producing garments (12; 13; 14; 15; 16; 17)
	Construction and carrying stones (12; 18; 19; 13; 20)

	Forced labor in manufacturing bricks and construction (21; 1)
	Forced labor in domestic work, teashops, and begging (27; 1)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (9; 1)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

In 2017, Burmese armed forces—the Tatmadaw—forcibly recruited children and used children as combatants in armed conflict. Since 2012, there have been 856 verified reports of child recruitment, including 49 cases in the first half of 2017. (2) Military and civilian brokers are reported to use force and coercion to formally recruit children into the armed forces. Children are deployed as combatants to the front lines of armed conflict, and they also serve as guards and messengers. (2) In addition, in conflict areas Burma’s armed forces use children for forced labor to porter goods, cook for battalions, and clean barracks. During the reporting period, there were at least 13 documented cases of children working in these types of support roles, one of which involved over 200 children. (1) Further, the military’s “self-reliance” policy requires local military units to procure their own food and labor supplies, which has led to the use of forced labor, including forced child labor, to produce goods and provide support for the armed forces. (1) Children are also recruited and used in armed conflict by non-state armed groups, including the Karen National Liberation Army, the Kachin Independence Army, the Karenni Army, the Shan State Army–South, the United Wa State Army, and the Ta’ang National Liberation Army in Kachin, Kayin and Shan States. (2; 1)

Children from the Rohingya ethnic minority in Burma’s Rakhine State were also vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. Since August 2017, an estimated 690,000 Rohingya people fled from Burma to Bangladesh due to the continued violence and acts of ethnic cleansing, perpetrated by the Burmese military in Rakhine State. Nearly 400,000 of those displaced are children, many of whom are subjected to hazardous work, forced labor, and commercial sexual exploitation in Bangladesh. (29; 30; 31) There are reports that Rohingya children are exploited in bonded labor in the fish drying industry, while other Rohingya boys work on farms, in construction, or on fishing boats. (32; 33; 31; 30) Girls are often sent to work in domestic service for Bangladeshi families, where some are physically and sexually abused, and others do not receive payment. Also, some young girls are forced into commercial sexual exploitation, in some cases after they were promised job in domestic service. (34; 33; 32; 35; 31; 36; 30) Rohingya children internally displaced in Rakhine State as a result of the violence are also vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, including in the extractive industries in Burma’s Kachin State. (37)

Prior to the 2017 ethnic cleansing in Rakhine State, many Rohingya children were already unable to attend school during the first half of 2017 due to discriminatory government policies and practices adopted after the 2012 riots and violent clashes between ethnic Rakhine and Rohingya communities. (38) Local officials and school authorities typically ban Rohingya children from attending government schools with ethnic Rakhine children. (38; 39) In addition, the government imposed severe travel restrictions on Rohingya make it difficult for children to access schools outside of their internally displaced persons (IDP) camps, villages, or townships. (40; 41; 42) School segregation and particularly travel restrictions impact children ages 10 to 17 because most Rohingya children must travel outside of their villages or IDP camps to attend middle school and high school. (40; 41; 42; 39) In addition, many Rohingya children lack the documentation that is required to attend middle schools and high schools in Rakhine State because the government denies them citizenship or officials refuse to register their household residency. (43; 44) Rohingya children have better access to primary school education in their villages, but they still encounter significant barriers to education due to a lack of schools, particularly in IDP camps, and teacher absence in Muslim villages due to security concerns. (45; 46) In addition to

Rakhine State, children throughout Burma face barriers to education, such as long distances to schools and expenses that include uniforms, books, and transportation. (5; 13; 47; 25)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Burma has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor, but it has not ratified the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Burma's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including with establishing a minimum age for work consistent with international standards and comprehensively identifying the types of hazardous work prohibited for children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government continued to work on the Child Law, expected to be adopted in 2018, which extends hazardous work protections for children up to age 18 years and includes prohibitions against child prostitution. (59; 25) During the reporting period, the Technical Working Group on Child Labor also developed and finalized a list of hazardous work prohibited for children. However, the list has yet to be adopted in tripartite discussions or given the force of law. (59; 25)

Although age 14 has been established as the minimum age for work in certain sectors, there is no minimum age for work for all sectors in which children are employed, including agriculture and informal work. Some sector-specific laws identify activities that are prohibited for children under age 18. (49; 51) However, the general minimum age of 16 for hazardous work, established in the Child Law, is not in compliance with international standards. (50)

In addition, the legal framework does not sufficiently prohibit commercial sexual exploitation of children, as there are no criminal prohibitions for the procurement and offering of children for the production of pornography or pornographic performances. Burma's Anti-Trafficking in Persons Law also requires a demonstration of force, fraud, or coercion to constitute a child trafficking offense. (53; 50; 52) The legal framework also does not sufficiently prohibit the use of children in illicit activities as the use of children ages 16 and 17 for the production and trafficking of drugs is not criminally prohibited. (50; 55) The legal framework also does not prohibit non-state armed groups from recruiting children for use in armed conflict. (60)

Children in Burma are required to attend school only up to age 10. This standard makes children ages 10 through 13 vulnerable to child labor as they are not required to attend school but are not legally permitted to work. (50; 61)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within operations of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate child labor enforcement.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Immigration and Population's (MOLIP) Factories and General Labor Laws Inspection Department (FGLLID)	Inspect factories, shops, and establishments for child labor law violations. (48; 49)
Yangon Police	In the case of the Anti-Trafficking Unit, enforce criminal laws related to child trafficking, including for the purpose of commercial sexual exploitation of children and labor exploitation. Operate through police departments in Rangoon, Mandalay, and Naypyidaw. (62) In the case of the Child Protection Units, enforce laws on child trafficking, child abuse and rape, and abduction. In addition, raise awareness of child exploitation issues in high-risk areas.
Ministry of Defense's Committee for the Prevention of Military Recruitment of Underage Children	Sanction perpetrators that recruit or use children in the armed forces. (63)
Department of Social Welfare	Investigate cases in which children need protection and the care of the State. (50)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Burma took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate child labor law enforcement, including the lack of publicly available enforcement information and inadequate number of labor inspectors.

† Data are from April 1, 2015, to March 31, 2016.

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Burma's workforce, which includes approximately 22 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Burma would employ about 558 inspectors. (58; 68; 69)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Burma took actions to combat the worst forms of child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the Burmese military's practices that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including with the application of penalties for the recruitment and use of children in armed conflict.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2017, the military took action against 19 officers in connection with past child soldier recruitment. (25; 29) However, the penalties imposed for recruiting and using child soldiers were not appropriate for the seriousness of these crimes. (1; 29) In past years, most of these cases reportedly culminated in reprimands, fines, or decreases in pension—penalties significantly less than those prescribed by criminal law. (37) Although the military also released 49 former child soldiers, the military's oversight and monitoring of recruitment procedures were insufficient to prevent the recruitment of children. (1; 29; 2) The Department of Social Welfare also lacks sufficient staff and resources to provide adequate reintegration services. (29) In some instances, children were penalized for their recruitment into the armed forces. While authorities prevented 11 children from enlisting, including through the use of new biometric registration technology, the Burmese armed forces filed fraud charges against some of these children for lying about their age, rather than referring them to social services. (2) In addition, during the first half of 2017, three enlisted children were detained on charges of desertion after leaving the Tatmadaw without authorization. The Tatmadaw also arrested children from ethnic minority groups for alleged association with non-state armed groups. (2)

During the reporting period, the Burmese police rescued 36 children who were victims of trafficking. (29) Though UNICEF has developed a training program for police investigators to develop child-sensitive policies and practices, it is unknown whether new criminal investigators receive training for enforcing laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (25; 29)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
National Child Labour Committee*	Oversee the implementation of the National Action Plan on Child Labor. Chaired by the Vice President. (25; 70) Consists of 13 government ministries, including MOLIP, chief ministers of 10 states, the mayors of Rangoon and Mandalay, employer organizations and civil society organizations. (71)
Technical Working Group on Child Labor	Coordinate the implementation of ILO Convention 182, including drafting the list of hazardous work prohibited for children, developing a national plan of action against child labor, and developing a mechanism for monitoring, identifying, and referring child labor cases. Chaired by MOLIP, consists of stakeholders from eight government ministries, employers, and civil society organizations. (72; 73)
Central Body for the Suppression of Trafficking in Persons	Coordinate efforts to address trafficking in persons. Chaired by the Minister of Home Affairs and includes six government agencies and several non-governmental stakeholders. (63)
Township Child Rights Committee	Coordinate local child welfare and protection activities. Led by the Township Administrator and consists of government agencies, including the Department of Social Welfare, the police, and NGOs. (74) Research was unable to determine whether the Township Child Rights Committees were active during the reporting period.

*Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established one policy related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including adoption of policies that address all relevant worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Joint Action Plan to Prevent the Recruitment and Use of Children for Military Purposes	Aims to end all government recruitment and use of children in its armed forces. Seeks to ensure the release of children under age 18 from the armed forces and facilitate their reintegration into families and communities. Resulted in 849 children and young people who had been recruited as children being released since the start of the policy in 2012, including 49 in 2017. (75; 29)

The Factories and General Labor Laws Inspection Department and the Technical Working Group on Child Labor continued to develop the National Action Plan on the Elimination of Child Labor although it was not completed during the reporting period. (59; 70) In 2017, Burma also signed the Paris Principles on Children Associated with Armed Forces or Armed Groups, which provides guidelines on the disarmament, demobilization, and reintegration of children associated with armed groups. (75)

Although the government has adopted a policy to end the military's recruitment and use of child soldiers, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor, including hazardous work, forced child labor, or commercial sexual exploitation of children. The government also continued to prevent the UN from playing a constructive role in ending the recruitment and use of children by non-state armed groups. (37)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of programs to address all worst forms of child labor.

Burma

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Forced Labor Complaint Mechanism	Joint government-ILO program that gives citizens a mechanism to lodge complaints of forced labor and seek remedies from the government. (76)
Hotlines	UNICEF- and World Vision-operated hotlines for reporting suspected cases of child recruitment or use by Burma's military. (77) The hotlines continued to operate during the reporting period. (75)
Myanmar Programme on the Elimination of Child Labour (My-PEC) Project (2014 – 2019)	$6.25 million, USDOL-funded project implemented by ILO to expand the knowledge base on child labor in Burma, increase awareness and knowledge of child labor, improve laws to meet international standards, and improve the capacity of stakeholders to address child labor. (78; 59) In 2017, provided educational services to 1,164 children, livelihood services to 652 households, and occupational safety and health training for youth. (59) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
SafeYouth@Work Project: Building a Generation of Safe and Healthy Workers (2014 – 2018)	USDOL-funded global project implemented by ILO, with Burma as one of the three pilot countries. In Burma, focuses on young workers ages 15 to 24 in the construction and agricultural sectors. Seeks to improve availability and use of occupational safety and health (OSH) data, improve regulations and programs on OSH, build the capacity of the government and social partners to promote and enforce compliance with OSH laws and regulations, and increase youth knowledge and awareness of hazards and risks. (79) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.

Overall, the government lacks sufficient social programs to adequately address the worst forms of child labor, including the recruitment of children by state and non-state armed forces, forced child labor, and the commercial sexual exploitation of children.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Burma (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict.	2016 – 2017
	Establish a minimum age of at least 14 years for work for all sectors.	2016 – 2017
	Establish a minimum age of 18 for hazardous work.	2017
	Ensure that the types of hazardous work prohibited for children are comprehensive by including sectors and activities in which children engage in hazardous work, such as garments.	2016 – 2017
	Prohibit all forms of child commercial sexual exploitation, including procuring and offering of children for the production of pornography or pornographic performances.	2016 – 2017
	Ensure that the law does not require a demonstration of force, fraud, or coercion to constitute a child trafficking offense.	2017
	Criminally prohibit the use of children in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2016 – 2017
	Criminally prohibit the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2017
	Ensure that the age up to which education is compulsory is the same as the minimum age for work, as established by international standards.	2016 – 2017
	Enforcement	Cease the military's continued use of children as combatants in armed conflict and for forced labor in conflict areas.
Cease committing ethnic cleansing the Rohingya people, which directly contribute to the exploitation of Rohingya children in the worst forms of child labor.		2017
Improve military oversight and monitoring of recruitment procedures to prevent the recruitment of children.		2017
Hire and train a sufficient number of labor inspectors to enforce labor laws, including child labor regulations.		2016 – 2017
Ensure that the Department of Social Welfare has sufficient resources to provide rehabilitation and reintegration services to victims of the worst forms of child labor.		2016 – 2017
Establish a referral mechanism between the Labor Inspectorate and social services.		2016 – 2017
Publish information related to labor law enforcement, including Labor Inspectorate funding and the number of worksite inspections conducted.		2016 – 2017

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure that the penalties for the recruitment and use of children in the military are appropriate for the seriousness of the crime.	2017
	Cease penalizing children for attempting to enlist in the military, and cease penalizing children for leaving the military without authorization.	2017
	Cease penalizing children suspected of being associated with non-state armed groups. Refer these children for appropriate social services.	2017
	Publish data on training for investigators and the number of investigations, prosecutions, and convictions for violations related to the worst forms of child labor.	2016 – 2017
Coordination	Publish information on activities undertaken by coordinating bodies, such as the Township Child Rights Committees.	2017
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor, such as armed conflict by state and non-state armed groups, hazardous work, forced child labor, and commercial sexual exploitation.	2016 – 2017
Social Programs	Develop and implement programs to ensure that all children, including displaced and stateless children, can access education.	2016 – 2017
	Remove all restrictions on Rohingya access to education, including school segregation, travel restrictions, and the refusal to issue documentation necessary to enroll in school.	2017
	Develop and implement programs to address all worst forms of child labor, including the recruitment of children by state and non-state armed groups, forced child labor, and the commercial sexual exploitation of children.	2016 – 2017

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2017, Burundi made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government enacted a revised criminal code that formally integrated the existing penalties of the 2014 Trafficking in Persons law into the criminal code, which included stronger penalties for human trafficking and the criminalization of begging. However, children in Burundi engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Burundi lacks a compulsory education age that is equal to or higher than the minimum age for work. The government's ability to address the worst forms of child labor was constrained by a lack of necessary resources to conduct labor inspections and criminal investigations, adequate and sustained funding for the education sector, and sufficient social programs to address child labor in the country.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Burundi engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (1; 2; 3; 4; 5; 6; 7; 8) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Burundi.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	27.2 (633,126)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	60.9
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	26.0
Primary Completion Rate (%)		69.8

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (9)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Demographic and Health Survey, 2010–2011. (10)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of tea, coffee, sugarcane, cotton, palm oil, peat, potatoes, and rice (1; 5; 7; 8; 11; 12)
	Fishing, including preparing materials and equipment, managing heavy fishing nets, preparing meals for fishermen, loading and unloading materials from vessels, and cleaning the vessels (1; 5; 7; 8; 11; 13; 12)
	Herding and feeding livestock (5; 11; 12)
Industry	Extracting,† washing, and transporting minerals in mines and quarries, including artisanal gold mines (1; 5; 6; 7; 8; 11; 14; 15; 12)
	Making and transporting bricks (1; 7; 8; 12)
	Construction, including transporting materials, welding, and installing electrical cables† (5)
Services	Domestic work (1; 5; 6; 7; 11; 12)
	Street vending, including selling food, newspapers, cigarettes, and used clothes and shoes (5; 6; 11)
	Begging (6; 16; 12)
	Handling and transporting heavy loads† (5; 6)
	Work as help in hotels and restaurants (5; 12)

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1; 2; 3; 4; 5; 6; 7; 17; 15; 12)
	Domestic work as a result of human trafficking (2; 15; 18; 12)
	Forced labor in agriculture, mining, charcoal production, construction, street vending, and begging, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (17; 12)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Burundian children are trafficked within the country, often from rural areas, for domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation. (2; 3; 4; 17) Women who offer room and board to children sometimes force the children into commercial sexual exploitation to pay expenses; these brothels are found in the more impoverished parts of Bujumbura, near Lake Tanganyika, along trucking corridors, and in other cities such as Gitega, Ngozi, and Rumonge. (2; 3; 19) Burundian girls are also trafficked internationally for commercial sexual exploitation in Kenya, the Middle East, Rwanda, and Uganda. (20; 21; 22; 12; 19) Evidence also suggests that children are trafficked to Tanzania for work in agriculture and forced labor. (17; 23; 12)

Burundi is one of the poorest countries in the world, with over 90 percent of its citizens engaged in subsistence agriculture. (24) In Burundi, research indicates that children perform dangerous tasks in agriculture in the production of tea, coffee, sugarcane, cotton, palm oil, peat, potatoes, and rice. (1; 5; 7; 8; 11; 12) In 2017, there were no reports of new recruitment of child soldiers in Burundi. (12; 25)

Although the government abolished school fees in 2012, the cost of books and uniforms has prevented many children from accessing free public schooling. A dearth of well-trained educators and poor infrastructure has also limited educational opportunity; moreover, as birth certificates are required to attend school, many unregistered children, in particular members of the Batwa ethnic group, remain out of school and vulnerable to child labor. (11; 26; 24)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Burundi has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Burundi’s legal framework to adequately protect children from child labor, including a lack of a compulsory education age through the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Article 3 of the Labor Code; Article 3 of the Ministerial Ordinance to Regulate Child Labor (27; 28)

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 13 of the Ministerial Ordinance to Regulate Child Labor (28)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 9–15 of the Ministerial Ordinance to Regulate Child Labor (28)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 4 and 10 of the Trafficking in Persons Law (29)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 244–246 and 537 of the Penal Code; Articles 4–6 and 10 of the Trafficking in Persons Law (29; 30)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 542–544 of the Penal Code (30)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Prohibition of Military Recruitment
State Compulsory	N/A*
State Voluntary	Yes	18	Article 6(c) of the National Defense Troops Law (31)
Non-state	No	15	Article 200.2.27 and 200.5.7 of the Penal Code (30)
Compulsory Education Age	No	12	Legislation title unknown (11)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 17 of the Law on Basic and Secondary Education (32)

* No conscription (31)

In 2017, Burundi enacted a revised criminal code that included the criminalization of begging and also formally integrated the existing penalties for human trafficking from the 2014 Trafficking in Persons law. (12; 33; 30; 34; 35)

The Labor Code prohibits work by children under age 16 in public and private enterprises; however, the law’s minimum age protections do not apply to children outside of formal employment relationships. (27; 36; 37) The Penal Code does not prohibit the use of children in the production and trafficking of narcotics. (30) Although the Constitution prohibits the use of children in armed conflict, the Penal Code criminalizes only the use of children under age 15 in armed conflict, leaving children between the ages of 15 and 18 vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (30; 38) However, Burundian law does prohibit the recruitment of children under 18 by the state armed forces, and available evidence indicates the government complied with this provision. (24) In addition, the prohibitions against hazardous work are not comprehensive, including in agriculture, an area of work in which there is evidence of work with dangerous machinery, equipment, and tools. (28; 12) Education in Burundi is not compulsory through the minimum age for work, and research did not uncover a public version of the law establishing compulsory education. (11; 39)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Public Service, Labor, and Social Security that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Public Service, Labor, and Social Security	Administer and enforce all labor laws, including those on child labor, through the General Directorate of Labor and Professional Development. (40)
National Police	Conduct criminal investigations on the worst forms of child labor, including forced child labor, child trafficking, and the use of children in illicit activities. (1; 7) Through its Brigade for Minors and Morals, protect children from commercial sexual exploitation, illicit activity, and military recruitment. (1; 12)
Ministry of Justice	Prosecute cases of the worst forms of child labor through its General Prosecutor’s Office. (15; 12)
Ministry of National Solidarity, Human Rights, and Gender	Coordinate, monitor, and oversee children’s advocacy and family service programs conducted by public and private organizations. Develop policies and national laws on the promotion and protection of children and families. (41) Refer cases to police officers and judicial officials for enforcement through its Child Protection Committees at local levels; victims are referred to local NGOs for social services. (23)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Burundi took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Public Service, Labor, and Social Security that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including an insufficient number of labor inspectors.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$2,424 (11)	$4,000 (12)
Number of Labor Inspectors	12 (11)	11 (12)
Inspectorate Authorized to Assess Penalties	Yes (11)	Yes (12)
Training for Labor Inspectors
Initial Training for New Employees	No (11)	No (12)
Training on New Laws Related to Child Labor	N/A (11)	N/A (12)
Refresher Courses Provided	No (11)	No (12)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted	152 (11)	390 (12)
Number Conducted at Worksites	Unknown (11)	130 (12)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	0 (11)	0 (12)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties were Imposed	N/A (11)	N/A (12)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that were Collected	N/A (11)	N/A (12)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (11)	Yes (35)
Routine Inspections Targeted	No (11)	No (12)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (11)	Yes (12)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	No (11)	No (12)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (11)	Yes (12)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (11)	Yes (12)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Burundi's workforce, which includes approximately 5 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Burundi should employ roughly 125 inspectors. (42; 43; 44) Research found that financial constraints hamper the General Directorate of Labor and Professional Development's enforcement of child labor laws, as annual funding does not cover fuel costs, per diem, or office supplies and, furthermore, the Inspectorate does not own any vehicles. (11; 42; 12)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Burundi took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the lack of consistent training for criminal investigators of child labor law.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Training for Investigators
Initial Training for New Employees	No (11)	No (12)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

During the reporting period, no formal training was provided for criminal investigators; however, the IOM trained 100 immigration police officers in June on trafficking in persons enforcement activities. (12; 24) In addition, the Ministry of National Solidarity, Human Rights, and Gender organized a sensitization workshop on Burundi's Trafficking in Persons law that included participants from various government ministries, the National Independent Commission for Human Rights, civil society organizations, and the National Police Brigade for Minors and Morals. (24)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including non-operational coordination mechanisms.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
National Multi-Sector Committee for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Coordinate efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor, including implementation of community development programs that address the education and socioeconomic reintegration of children engaged in or removed from the worst forms of child labor. (40; 46) Includes nine ministries, including the Ministry of Labor, organizations and representatives from UNICEF, youth associations, and civil society organizations. (7)
Commission for Consultation and Monitoring on the Prevention and Suppression of Trafficking in Persons	Oversee national anti-trafficking in persons efforts, including implementation of the National Action Plan for Combating Trafficking in Persons. (18; 47; 35) Includes officials from the Ministry of National Solidarity, Human Rights, and Gender, and the Ministries of Justice, Public Security, Foreign Affairs, and Interior. (7)

In 2017, the Commission for Consultation and Monitoring on the Prevention and Suppression of Trafficking in Persons continued as non-operational, and research was unable to determine the status of the National Multi-Sector Committee for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor. (11; 19; 12; 35)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including inactive and expired policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor‡

Policy	Description
National Action Plan for Combatting Trafficking in Persons (2014–2017)	Aimed to significantly reduce human trafficking in Burundi by 2017 through the adoption of political, social, economic, and institutional measures. (47) Identified women and children as being the most vulnerable to human trafficking, noting sectors of high prevalence and human trafficker profiles. (15; 47) In 2017, the government assessed plans to draft a new National Action Plan, which remains in discussion among government ministries, the IOM, and NGOs. (35; 24)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (48; 49)

Despite the completion of the UNDAF (2012–2016), in 2017 the government was in discussion with the UN to finalize an extension covering from 2018 to 2023. (50; 35) Research was unable to determine whether any extension to the expired National Revised Action Plan for the Fight Against the Worst Forms of Child Labor was made. (35; 46)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Centers for Family Development†	Ministry of National Solidarity, Human Rights, and Gender operates centers that address human rights issues, including child exploitation, and reintegrate victims to their home communities. (23) Coordinate with Child Protection Committees to refer victims to local NGOs for care, when necessary. (23) In 2017, no activities were held due to continued lack of public funding. (35)
“Back to School” Campaign†	UNICEF and the Ministry of Education “Back to School” campaign to promote equitable access and retention in school of 2.6 million basic education students, half of them girls. (51) In 2017, activities continued under this annual program with more than 1 million children targeted in seven provinces for the year. (35; 24)

† Program is funded by the Government of Burundi.

Research found no evidence that the government has carried out programs to assist children working in agriculture or victims of commercial sexual exploitation. Further, the scope of existing programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the child labor problem.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Burundi (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Criminally prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, particularly in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2015 – 2017
	Establish by law a compulsory education age equal to or higher than the minimum age for work.	2009 – 2017
	Ensure that all children are protected by law, including children working outside of formal employment relationships.	2015 – 2017
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under 18 by non-state armed groups.	2012 – 2017
	Ensure that all children are protected from hazardous work, including in agriculture that have hazardous conditions and in which child labor is known to occur.	2016 – 2017
	Publish the law establishing compulsory education for review.	2017
Enforcement	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet ILO’s technical advice on the number of inspectors, and provide sufficient training and resources to all inspectors to ensure that labor inspections, including unannounced and routine targeted inspections, are conducted nationwide.	2009 – 2017
	Establish a referral mechanism between criminal authorities and social services providers.	2009 – 2017
	Provide sufficient training and resources to ensure that criminal investigations and prosecutions take place.	2009 – 2017
	Publish information on the number of investigations and violations found related to the criminal enforcement of child labor laws.	2017
Coordination	Ensure that the National Multi-Sector Committee for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor and the Trafficking in Persons Permanent Commission are operational and make efforts to combat and prevent child labor.	2015 – 2017
Government Policies	Take steps to implement the National Action Plan for Combatting Trafficking in Persons and the revised National Revised Action Plan for the Fight Against the Worst Forms of Child Labor.	2015 – 2017
Social Programs	Increase access to education by eliminating school-related costs for books and uniforms, increasing the number of well-trained educators, expanding the infrastructure, and increasing birth registration rates.	2015 – 2017
	Institute and expand existing programs to address child labor, including in agriculture and commercial sexual exploitation.	2009 – 2017
	Increase public funding for the Centers for Family Development to undertake activities.	2016 – 2017

In 2017, Cabo Verde made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government drafted a national action plan to combat human trafficking for labor and sexual exploitation and published information related to its labor law enforcement efforts. The Cabo Verdean Institute for Children and Adolescents also expanded coverage by establishing an office on Boa Vista Island. However, children in Cabo Verde engage in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. In addition, social programs to assist children involved in agriculture and domestic work are not sufficient to address the scope of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Cabo Verde engage in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (1; 2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Cabo Verde.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	10 to 14	3.2 (2,392)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	90.1
Combining Work and School (%)	10 to 14	1.7
Primary Completion Rate (%)		85.3

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (3)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children’s Work Project’s analysis of statistics from Inquérito as Despesas e Receitas Familiares, 2001–2002. (4)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including carrying heavy loads† (1; 5)
	Raising livestock (1)
	Artisanal fishing in small boats† (6; 5)
Industry	Construction, including extracting sand (7; 6)
Services	Domestic work (2)
	Street work, including vending, garbage scavenging,† car washing, and begging (2; 1)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (8; 9; 2)
	Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking (10)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Limited research found that commercial sexual exploitation of both boys and girls, including in the tourism industry, occurs in the cities of Mindelo, Praia, and Santa Maria. (2)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Cabo Verde has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Cabo Verde

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Cabo Verde's legal framework to adequately protect children from child labor, including acceptable light work for children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	15	Article 261 of the Labor Code (11)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 264 of the Labor Code; Article 133 of the Civil Code (11; 12)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		National List of Dangerous Work for Children (13)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 14 of Chapter 3 of the Labor Code; Articles 149, 271, and 271-A of the Penal Code (11; 14)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 149 and 271-A of the Penal Code (14)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 144–145, 148–150, and 271-A of the Penal Code (14)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 8 of the Drug Trafficking Law (15)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment
State Compulsory	Yes	18	Article 2 of the Military Service Law (16)
State Voluntary	Yes	17	Article 31 of the Military Service Law (16)
Non-state	Yes	18	Article 268-C of the Penal Code (14)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15‡	Articles 13 and 20 of the Education Law (17)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 14 of the Education Law (17)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (17)

The Civil Code includes a list of light work activities that children age 14 are allowed to perform however, the law does not prescribe the number of hours per week permissible for light work, or specify the conditions under which light work may be performed. (12; 18)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Inspector General for Labor (IGT) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Inspector General for Labor (IGT)	Monitor and enforce child labor laws, working closely with the Cabo Verdean Institute for Children and Adolescents (ICCA). (19; 20)
Judicial Police and National Police	Judicial Police conduct criminal investigations; National Police make arrests related to the worst forms of child labor, including human trafficking. (20; 21)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Cabo Verde took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the IGT that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2016	2017

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (23)	Yes (1)

IGT does not have national coverage because there is only representation on Sal, Santiago, and São Vicente islands. (23; 5) According to the government, enforcement of child labor laws remains challenging due to the lack of resources for inspections. (22) When IGT inspectors find a case of child labor, they inform the Cabo Verdean Institute for Children and Adolescents (ICCA) of the case for referral to social services providers. (25)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Cabo Verde took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including a lack of published information.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
National Committee for Child Labor Prevention and Eradication in Cabo Verde (CNPETI)	Coordinate the execution of the National Action Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor. Supervised by ICCA. (21; 26)
ICCA	Coordinate and monitor the implementation of all national programs and activities to prevent and combat child labor. (1) In 2017, established an office on Boa Vista island and investigated for referral to social services providers 16 cases of children who were engaged in domestic and agricultural work and street vending. (1)
Children and Adolescent Committee to Prevent and Combat Sexual Abuse and Exploitation	Contribute to the prevention and elimination of child sexual exploitation by coordinating the activities of member organizations and public and private services. (21) Led by ICCA. (27)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor	Prioritizes the eradication of child labor. Outlines specific objectives, including data collection, institutional capacity building, and enhancement of measures to prevent, protect, and remove children from involvement in child labor. (26)
National Plan to Combat Sexual Violence Against Children and Adolescents (2017–2019)	Aims to prevent and combat the sexual exploitation of children. (28)
Code of Ethics Against the Sexual Exploitation of Children	Guides and governs agencies involved in the tourism sector to combat the sexual exploitation of children and adolescents. (29)

In 2017, the government drafted a national action plan to combat human trafficking. (30)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating and preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Child Labor Awareness Campaigns†	Government program implemented by ICCA and the National Committee for Child Labor Prevention and Eradication that conducts national awareness campaigns on the worst forms of child labor. (31) In 2017, ICCA worked with the local government on a project to remove children from street vending on Santiago island. (32)

Program	Description
Help for At-Risk Children†	ICCA-implemented program that provides education, health services, and professional training to vulnerable children and their families. Eight day centers for street children vulnerable to sexual and labor exploitation operate on Boa Vista, Fogo, Sal, Santiago, Santo Antão, and São Vicente islands. (31)
Child Emergency Centers and Social Protection and Reintegration Centers†	ICCA-implemented program that operates emergency centers for child victims of abuse and sexual exploitation on Santiago, Santo Antão, and São Vicente islands. (21; 26; 31) The government also operates five social protection and reintegration centers that provide support and educational integration services to children who have experienced long-term trauma. (25; 21; 2)
Government Efforts to Increase Access to Education†	Donor-funded programs implemented by the government that ensure access to education for disadvantaged children by paying for school fees, materials, and meals. (24)

† Program is funded by the Government of Cabo Verde.

Research found that programs to assist children involved in agriculture and domestic work are not sufficient to address the scope of the problem.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Cabo Verde (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Prescribe the number of hours per week and conditions under which light work may be undertaken.	2015 – 2017
Enforcement	Make law enforcement data publicly available, including information on the number of criminal investigations, violations found, prosecutions initiated, and convictions achieved.	2011 – 2017
	Ensure that IGT receives sufficient resources to enforce child labor laws on all islands.	2014 – 2017
Social Programs	Institute programs to address child labor in agriculture and domestic work.	2010 – 2017

In 2017, Cambodia made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government released the Action Plan to Prevent and Respond to Violence Against Children, including child labor. In addition, the Ministry of Social Affairs, Veterans and Youth repatriated approximately 500 child laborers back to Thailand and provided training to law enforcement officials on identifying human trafficking victims, including children. In addition, the Ministry of Education conducted trafficking-in-person awareness training for education officials and teachers in six provinces. However, children in Cambodia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including forced labor in brick making and commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Due to challenges in accessing basic education and the absence of a compulsory education requirement, children are vulnerable to involvement in the worst forms of child labor. Inadequate resources and training also hamper the Labor Inspectorate’s capacity to enforce child labor laws, especially in rural areas and in high-risk sectors.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Cambodia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including forced labor in brickmaking and in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1; 2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Cambodia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent

	Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking (21)
	Forced labor in the production of bricks (2; 21)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children are trafficked domestically, from rural to urban areas, and internationally, to countries such as Thailand and Vietnam, for commercial sexual exploitation. (9; 1) In Cambodian brick factories, some children engage in forced labor, including in hazardous conditions, to offset family debt to employers. (2; 31; 8; 12)

Although the Education Law establishes free basic education, children may be required to pay school-related fees, such as for building maintenance, which are prohibitive for some families. (21; 32; 33; 12) Other barriers to education include limited transportation to schools in remote areas, lack of drinking water and toilet facilities in some schools, language barriers, and an insufficient number of teachers. These barriers particularly affect ethnic minority children and children with disabilities. (12; 8)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Cambodia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Cambodia’s legal framework to adequately protect children from child labor, including a minimum age for work and a prohibiting the commercial sexual exploitation of children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	15	Article 177 of the Labor Law (34)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 173 and 177 of the Labor Law; Regulation on the Prohibition of Hazardous Child Labor; Articles 339–340 of the Penal Code (34; 35; 36)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 2 of the Regulation on the Prohibition of Hazardous Child Labor (35)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 15–16 of the Labor Law; Articles 10, 12, 15–17, and 19 of the Law on Suppression of Human Trafficking and Sexual Exploitation; Article 80 of Law on Juvenile Justice (34; 37; 38)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 10, 12, 15–17, and 19 of the Law on Suppression of Human Trafficking and Sexual Exploitation (37)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 15, 28, 33–37, and 41 of the Law on Suppression of Human Trafficking and Sexual Exploitation; Articles 284, 289, and 346 of the Penal Code (36; 37)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 345 of the Penal Code; Articles 3 and 47 of the Law on Control of Drugs (36; 39)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment
State Compulsory	Yes	18	The Law on General Statutes for the Military Personnel of the Royal Cambodian Armed Forces (40)
State Voluntary	Yes	18	Article 42 of the Law on General Statutes for the Military Personnel of the Royal Cambodian Armed Forces (40)
Non-state	No
Compulsory Education Age	No
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 31 of the Education Law (33)

The Labor Law's minimum age protections do not apply to domestic or household workers, which leaves children vulnerable to child labor in this occupation. (34; 41; 42) Laws do not sufficiently prohibit commercial sexual exploitation of children, as the use or offering of a child for pornographic performances is not criminally prohibited. In addition, laws do not prohibit the recruitment of children under age 18 into non-state armed groups. (21)

Education is free, but not compulsory, through grade nine. (33) The lack of compulsory schooling makes children under age 15 particularly vulnerable to child labor because they are not required to be in school but are not yet legally permitted to work. (34; 33)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor and Vocational Training (MOLVT) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Child Labor, Ministry of Labor and Vocational Training (MOLVT)	Enforce child-related provisions of the Labor Law, and train Commune Committees for Women and Children that oversee local child labor monitoring systems. (43) Includes 24 MOLVT interdepartmental inspection teams. (44)
Cambodian National Police Anti-Human Trafficking and Juvenile Protection Department	Enforce laws against human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children, in collaboration with municipal and provincial anti-human trafficking and juvenile protection offices. Commanded by the Ministry of the Interior. (21; 45) Field complaints about human trafficking, which can be filed through the anti-human trafficking hotline. (29)
Ministry of Social Affairs, Veterans, and Youth Rehabilitation	Accompany the police on investigations, and refer victims of child labor to NGOs for services. (6)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Cambodia took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the MOLVT that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including training on hazardous work regulations.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$100,000 (8)	$100,000 (8)
Number of Labor Inspectors	499 (21)	520 (8)

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (21)	Yes (8)

In 2017, the Department of Child Labor (DOCL) received $10,000 in funding for child labor enforcement operations, as well as for the implementation of the National Social Protection Strategy. (8) The DOCL employs 33 inspectors based in Phnom Penh and 1 child labor inspector in each of Cambodia's 25 provinces; however, the department did not conduct any child labor inspections during the first half of the year. (8; 46) When child labor inspections do occur, they are concentrated in the city of Phnom Penh, as well as in the provincial, formal-sector factories producing goods for export, such as textiles and garments, rather than in rural areas where the majority of child laborers work. (5; 22; 47)

The MOLVT has established regulations on hazardous work for children in several sectors, including in agriculture, brickmaking, fishing, tobacco, and cassava production; however, inadequate training limits the capacity of local authorities to enforce these regulations. (43; 48; 49; 8) For example, MOLVT inspectors visited various brick factories but found no child labor violations, despite numerous reports of children working in brick factories. (50; 2) In addition, sanctions for labor violations, including those related to child labor, are rarely imposed in accordance with the law. (44; 47)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Cambodia took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the lack of information regarding enforcement actions.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Training for Investigators
Initial Training for New Employees	Yes (21)	Yes (8)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (21)	N/A (8)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (21)	Yes (8)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (21)	Unknown (8)

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor (cont)

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Number of Violations Found	46 (21)	46 (8)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (21)	Unknown (8)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (21)	Unknown (8)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (21)	Yes (8)

The Ministry of Social Affairs, Veterans and Youth (MOSAVY), in collaboration with Winrock International, conducted 2 trainings for 105 MOSAVY enforcement officials and NGOs, Deputy Governors, Communal Councilors, and teachers with training. MOSAVY also organized 3 trainings on the identification of trafficking victims for 202 participants in Kratie, Svay Rieng, and Kompong Speu. (8) However, the Ministry of Interior has not yet introduced anti-human trafficking training into the curriculum of the Cambodian National Police academies. (51; 46)

According to the Anti-Human Trafficking and Juvenile Protection Department, police rescued 106 children engaged in the worst forms of child labor in the first nine months of 2017. In addition, MOSAVY repatriated approximately 500 Thai child laborers along the Thailand border in the Banteay Meanchey province back to Thailand, as well as 12 child human trafficking victims to Vietnam. (8)

In Cambodia, judges have discretion to determine whether perpetrators of crimes related child labor will be imprisoned or fined, as well as the amount of the fine. In part, due to high levels of corruption within the judicial system, the penalties imposed are not uniformly administered and do not adhere to the parameters prescribed by law. (6; 52; 53)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the lack of a decree to allow the National Committee on Child Labor of the Cambodian National Council for Children to begin operations.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
National Committee on Child Labor of the Cambodian National Council for Children	Coordinate child labor issues at the national level. Ensure that projects and programs follow the National Plan of Action on child labor. Includes concerned ministries, businesses, trade unions, and NGOs. Oversee Provincial Committees on the Protection of Child Rights and Provincial Committees on Child Labor. (54; 8)
Commune Committees for Women and Children	Advisory entities that raise awareness about child labor regulations, promote school attendance, collaborate with provincial labor departments to monitor for child labor violations, and refer children at risk of or engaged in child labor to social protection services. Led by the Ministry of Labor and Vocational Training's Department of Child Labor. (21; 43; 55)
National Committee for Counter Trafficking	Coordinate government, NGOs, civil society, and private sector efforts to address human trafficking. Focuses on children's affairs, international cooperation, justice, law enforcement, migration, prevention, protection, recovery, reintegration, and repatriation. (56) Chaired by the Deputy Prime Minister and the Ministry of Interior, with 4 vice chair ministries and 14 participating ministries. Oversees Provincial Committees for Counter Trafficking in each province. (46; 56)

In 2017, the National Committee for Counter Trafficking (NCCT) provided to 1,617 participants 39 trainings on children's rights, child labor exploitation obligations under ILO C. 182 on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor, and child sex tourist prevention. The NCCT coordinated further trainings with MOSAVY and the Ministry of Women's Affairs. However, the government has yet to issue a decree authorizing the National Committee on Child Labor of the Cambodian National Council for Children to begin operations and adequately function as a coordinating mechanism. (8) In addition, the Commune Committees for Women and Children are underfunded and have insufficient technical capacity for adequate social protection services to children involved in or at risk of child labor. (55)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including integrating child labor elimination and protection strategies into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor‡

Policy	Description
Action Plan to Prevent and Respond to Violence Against Children (2017–2021)†	Aims to prevent and respond to violence against children, including the worst forms of child labor. (57)
National Plan of Action on Worst Forms of Child Labor (2016–2025)†	Aims to build the capacity of law enforcement officers, strengthen the enforcement of relevant laws, raise public awareness of child labor issues, and enhance child labor monitoring systems at the community level. (21)
National Policies on the Elimination of Child Labor in the Fisheries Sector	Two policies address child labor in the fisheries sector, including the National Plan of Action to Tackle Child Labor in Inland and Coastal Fisheries and the Action Plan for Gender Equality Promotion and Child Labor Elimination in the Fisheries Sector. Seek to prevent and withdraw children from child labor and promote increased access to education and livelihood opportunities. (58; 59) During the reporting period, conducted awareness raising activities to help local fishers and families understand policy guidelines. (60)
Policy on Childhood Development and Protection in the Agricultural Sector (2016–2020)	Establishes a strategic framework to protect children working in the agricultural sector. Seeks to prevent and reduce child labor, especially in hazardous work, and improve agricultural vocational training for youth ages 15 through 17. (7) In 2017, the government worked with international organizations to conduct workshops and trainings for agricultural officials. (60)
National Plan of Action on the Suppression of Human Trafficking, Smuggling, Labor, and Sexual Exploitation (2014–2018)	Aims to prevent and eliminate all forms of human trafficking, including by strengthening criminal law enforcement to protect children from exploitation in entertainment venues, integrating anti-human trafficking and child safety issues into the public school curriculum, and promoting the inclusion of vulnerable children in both formal and informal education. (56) During the reporting period, the government lacked the financial and human resources necessary to collect data on policy implementation. (60)
The Education Strategic Plan (2014–2018)	Seeks to ensure equitable access to education and improve the education system’s response to human trafficking and child labor. (61) During the reporting period, provided scholarships to poor students at primary and secondary schools, and increased overall enrollments in primary schools. (60)
National Social Protection Strategy (2017–2021)	Aims to expand access to healthcare, nutrition, and educational services and promote the elimination of the worst forms of child labor. (62; 63) In July 2017, the Ministry of Social Affairs, Veterans and Youth launched a policy framework that outlines guidance for all government social assistance, including school feeding and vocational training programs. (45; 8)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (64; 65; 66; 67; 68)

The government has not specifically included child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the National Employment Policy and the Multilingual Education National Action Plan. (69; 70)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including with the lack of access to social protection safety nets in rural communities.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor‡

Program	Description
Cambodia Countering Trafficking in Persons (2015–2019)	$8.5 million, USAID-funded, 4-year program implemented by Winrock International to strengthen the capacity of government and community stakeholders to prevent human trafficking, protect at-risk populations, and increase the number of successful prosecutions of perpetrators. (71; 72) In 2017, established national guidelines for identifying and referring human trafficking victims and assisted 725 human trafficking victims. (60)
Better Factories Cambodia†	USDOL, the government of Cambodia, Garment Manufacturers in Cambodia, and the ILO-funded program to monitor garment factories’ compliance with national and international labor standards, including those related to child labor. (73; 8) In 2017, collaborated with garment manufacturers to investigate suspected child labor cases, which resulted in the confirmation and remediation of eight cases. (74; 75) Additional information is available on the program’s website.

Program	Description
UN WFP Country Program† (2011–2018)	Multi-government and private sector-funded, 8-year program implemented in collaboration with the Government of Cambodia that includes a school feeding program for children in need. In 2017, provided food assistance, although funding fell by 45%. (76)

† Program is funded by the Government of Cambodia.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. (77)

Many poor households in rural communities lack access to a social protection safety net, which increases the vulnerability of children to involvement in child labor as a means to supplement family income. (78)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Cambodia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law's minimum age provisions apply to children working as domestic workers.	2009 – 2017
	Criminally prohibit the offering and use of a child for pornographic performances.	2015 – 2017
	Criminally prohibit the recruitment of children under 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2017
	Institute a compulsory education age that is at a minimum equal to the minimum age for work.	2009 – 2017
Enforcement	Provide sufficient resources for the enforcement of child labor laws to ensure that inspections are conducted throughout the country, especially in rural areas and in the informal sector.	2010 – 2017
	Build the capacity of local-level authorities to enforce child labor regulations, including in agriculture, tobacco, cassava, and fishing.	2012 – 2017
	Collect and publicly release data on the number of investigations, prosecutions, and convictions for crimes related to child labor.	2015 – 2017
	Increase anti-human trafficking training for law enforcement officers, including at Cambodian National Police academies.	2014 – 2017
	Establish and uniformly administer penalties for violations of laws on child labor, including its worst forms, in accordance with the parameters prescribed by law.	2009 – 2017
Coordination	Issue the relevant decree to enable the National Committee on Child Labor of the Cambodian National Council for Children to begin functioning.	2017
	Increase funding and enhance training for Commune Committees for Women and Children to enhance social services provision for children involved in or at risk of child labor.	2016 – 2017
Government Policies	Publish information about the implementation of the National Plan of Action on the Suppression of Human Trafficking, Smuggling, Labor, and Sexual Exploitation.	2017
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the Multilingual Education National Action Plan and the National Employment Policy.	2015 – 2017
Social Programs	Increase access to free basic education by eliminating unofficial school fees and addressing issues related to limited transportation, inadequate school infrastructure, insufficient number of teachers, and language barriers.	2013 – 2017
	Expand social protection safety nets in rural areas to ensure that poor children and their families have access to services that may mitigate the risk of involvement in child labor.	2016 – 2017

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2017, Cameroon made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government increased the number of labor inspectors by almost one-third, convened a 3-day interim assessment of the Decent Work Country Program, and earmarked $18,000 for the Ministry of Labor and Social Security to revise the hazardous work list in 2018. The government also provided education to 93,190 children ages 3 to 17 living in internally displaced person or refugee camps and nearly doubled the total number of project participants in its Social Safety Nets program to 411,048 individuals. However, children in Cameroon engage in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation and perform dangerous tasks in cocoa production. The government has not acceded to the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography, nor has it prohibited the use of children in illicit activities, including the production and trafficking of drugs.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Cameroon engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and perform dangerous tasks in cocoa production. (1; 2; 3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Cameroon.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	56.2 (unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	79.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	52.7
Primary Completion Rate (%)		75.4

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2015, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2016. (4)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Enquête Démographique et de Santé et à Indicateurs Multiples, 2011. (5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of bananas, cocoa, palm oil, and tea, including handling pesticides, using machetes, clearing fields, climbing trees, and lifting heavy loads† (6; 7; 8; 9)
	Raising livestock (9)
	Fishing (10; 9; 7)
Industry	Working in artisanal gold mines† and gravel quarries,† transporting heavy loads† of sand or gravel, breaking stones, and digging or standing in stagnant water to extract minerals (8; 11; 10; 12; 3; 9)
	Construction, including carrying heavy loads† of water, concrete, cement, and bricks (8; 11; 9)
Services	Domestic work (8; 11; 13; 9)
	Working in restaurants and as phone booth operators (9)
	Working in transportation (8; 9)
	Street work, including carrying heavy luggage,† vending, and begging (7; 11; 14; 15; 16; 17; 9)
	Voluntarily recruited children used in hostilities by state-armed groups (18; 9)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2; 11; 14; 19; 20; 21; 3)
	Recruitment of children by Boko Haram , a non-state armed group, for use in armed conflict, including as suicide bombers and concubines (22; 23; 3; 24; 25; 26)

	Forced begging as talibés in Koranic schools (8; 28; 3)

Cameroon is a source, transit, and destination country for child trafficking from neighboring countries in Central and West Africa. (8; 16; 3) Some traffickers have resorted to kidnapping children, as increased public awareness has resulted in fewer parents entrusting their children to intermediaries. (3) Children engaged in cocoa production are exposed to dangerous working conditions, including exposure to pesticides and the use of sharp tools such as machetes. (9) The NGO Child Soldiers International alleged that some officially sanctioned community neighborhood watch groups, known as vigilance committees, may have used and recruited children as young as age 12 in military operations against Boko Haram. (18)

Although Decree N° 2001/041 on the Organization of Public Schools guarantees free education in Cameroon, costs associated with education may be prohibitive to some families, as they are required to pay for uniforms, books, and other school-related fees. (7; 16; 29; 30; 31; 32; 33; 27) In addition, a lack of schools and teachers in rural areas, the absence of potable water and sanitation facilities, and long distances to schools also hinder access to education. (16; 31; 34; 35; 27; 9) Children in refugee camps may have a particularly difficult time accessing education due to a lack of school infrastructure, teachers, and resources to pay for school-related expenses. (31; 36; 37; 38; 39) In 2017, many schools in the Far North, North, East, and Adamaoua regions were closed due to attacks by Boko Haram and insecurity, or re-appropriation as refugee housing, military bases, or detention centers. (27; 40; 41; 29; 42; 1; 43; 44; 24) The government has begun reconstructing schools in the Far North region and providing textbooks to students, but some teachers are unwilling to work in areas affected by Boko Haram. Of the 124 schools that closed in the Far North, only 31 reopened for the 2017–2018 school year. (36; 40; 45; 46; 9) Since November 2016, the Anglophone Northwest and Southwest regions have experienced strikes and boycotts protesting systemic government discrimination against Anglophone speakers. This has disrupted schooling for children in these areas due to school closures, an absence of teachers, and voluntary or forced displacement as a result of the protest. (47; 48; 49; 50; 51; 52; 53) Children in refugee or internally displaced persons camps are particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation. (9; 26)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Cameroon has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including in its worst forms (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Cameroon’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of using children in illicit activities and the compulsory education age.

* No conscription (63)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (29)

Human trafficking provisions remain discordant with international standards, as they require threats, the use of force, or coercion to be established for the crime of child trafficking, and individuals ages 16 to 18 are not considered children. (56; 57) In addition, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children under age 18 are not comprehensive, as work underwater or at dangerous heights are not prohibited. (13; 55) However, the government earmarked approximately $18,000 for the Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MINTSS) to revise the list in 2018. (9)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of MINTSS that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MINTSS)	Lead efforts to enforce all labor laws, including those related to child labor, promote decent working conditions, and lead the National Committee to Combat Child Labor (CNLCTE). (7; 64)
Ministry of Justice (MOJ)	Prosecute cases referred by the General Delegate for National Security (DGSN) or the Ministry of Defense's National Gendarmerie (SED) and contribute to investigations as appropriate. (65)

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Social Affairs (MINAS)	Lead efforts to combat human trafficking. Provide social services through its National Referral System. (7; 66; 67; 9) Through its Minors Brigade, support local police in their investigations of child trafficking and the use of children in hazardous work. (68) Through its Joint Mobile Brigade, prevent and combat the phenomenon of street children through identification, reintegration, and education; reintegrated street children assist in the Joint Mobile Brigade's work. (69)
Ministry of Women's Empowerment and Family (MINPROFF)	Promote and protect the rights of the child. (7)
General Delegate for National Security (DGSN)	Enforce laws against the worst forms of child labor and investigate violations in urban areas. (65) Through its Special Vice Squad, investigate cases of human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and other forms of abuse against women and children. (65; 13) Refer cases to the MOJ or Ministry of Defense for investigation by the National Gendarmerie. (69)
Ministry of Defense's National Gendarmerie (SED)	Investigate cases of child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation in both urban and rural areas before referring cases to MOJ for prosecution. (69)

Although it does not play a direct role in enforcement, Cameroon's National Commission on Human Rights and Freedoms advises government ministries on the enforcement of laws related to child labor and advocates for sanctions as appropriate. (9; 70) Local representatives from the Ministry of Territorial Administration may settle child labor disputes amicably or refer the case to the SED, DGSN, or MOJ for further investigation and prosecution. (69)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Cameroon took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of MINTSS that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including financial and human resource allocation.

‡ Data are from January 1, 2017, to October 31, 2017. (9)

Although the government significantly increased its number of labor inspectors from 2016, it is still likely insufficient for the size of Cameroon's workforce, which includes over 9 million workers. (72; 9; 65) According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Cameroon should employ roughly 644 labor inspectors. (72; 73; 74) Furthermore, inspectors are tasked with reconciliation duties, which may detract from time devoted to their primary duties, and labor inspections are not conducted in the informal sector where the majority of child labor occurs. (75; 54) In general, the Labor Inspectorate lacked resources during the reporting period, and field inspectors in particular lacked transportation. However, the 2018 budget includes funding to purchase vehicles for some divisions with heavy workloads. (29; 9)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In an attempt to increase its scope, the Ministry of Social Affairs, Interpol, and the General Delegate for National Security all maintain hotlines for reporting the worst forms of child labor, which are then routed to the National Referral System for assistance to victims. (27; 13; 26) However, the system has not been well-publicized since it was established in 2013, leaving the public unaware of its existence, and some calls may go unanswered. (26) Research was unable to determine how many cases of child labor were identified as a result of complaints made to these lines.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Cameroon took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including financial resources and collaboration between ministries.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Training for Investigators
Initial Training for New Employees	Yes (65)	Yes (9)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	No (65)	N/A (9)
Refresher Courses Provided	No (65)	No (26)
Number of Investigations	13 (76; 71)	0 (9)
Number of Violations Found	119 (65; 71)	Unknown
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	9 (76; 71)	0 (9)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (76)	0 (9)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (65)	Yes (9)

It is unclear how many investigators the government employed in 2017, although several government bodies work together to enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. In general, these agencies do not receive adequate funding or training to investigate the worst forms of child labor, and high staff turnover is a challenge. (29; 77; 3; 9) As a result, NGOs are critical in bringing child trafficking cases to the government's attention and providing services to victims. (3; 69) With the assistance of the EU and IOM, the government repatriated at least 55 children from Libya and Niger who were at risk of child trafficking for forced labor or commercial sexual exploitation, and provided them with social services upon their return. (26)

The government acknowledges that a lack of awareness of child trafficking issues may prevent citizens from reporting offenses to enforcement agencies and that children may be afraid to speak against perpetrators in court. (3) The ongoing participation of lawyers in the Anglophone protests also impacted the ability of victims to seek justice and may have contributed to delayed court proceedings, including those related to the alleged complicity of government officials in a child trafficking ring. (26) However, the preliminary inquiry was completed in 2017. (69) A lack of collaboration between NGOs and the government, combined with judicial inefficiencies, led some cases to be settled outside the judicial system. (3; 77) Although the government generally considers children to be victims rather than offenders, isolated reports indicate that the government has held children as young as age 5 in detention facilities for prolonged periods due to suspicion of being affiliated with Boko Haram elements, or to prevent them from being recruited into Boko Haram. (78; 42; 79; 80; 43; 18; 81; 70)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including coordination among agencies.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
National Committee to Combat Child Labor (CNLCCTE)	Coordinate government efforts to combat child labor, propose measures to harmonize Cameroon's legal framework to international standards, and implement the National Plan of Action to Combat Child Labor and Trafficking in Children (PANETEC). (64; 82; 83) Led by MINTSS, includes representatives from 10 other ministries and government bodies. (64; 82)
Inter-Ministerial Committee (IMC)	Coordinate government efforts to combat human trafficking. Chaired by the Secretary General of the Office of the Prime Minister, includes members of eight ministries, law enforcement personnel, civil society organizations, and NGOs. (3; 26) Oversee Regional Taskforces on Trafficking in Persons in Northwest, Southwest, and Littoral Provinces. (3; 84) In 2017, began consultations in anticipation of drafting a new Trafficking in Persons Action Plan for 2017–2019 and convened five times, including one meeting with NGOs to improve collaboration. (77; 9; 70; 26)

Poor communication hampered government efforts to adequately combat human trafficking as actions by member ministries of the Inter-Ministerial Committee (IMC) were not always communicated to the secretariat. (26) In addition, only the Northwest Regional Taskforce was active during the reporting period; the Southwest and Littoral Regional Taskforces were inactive due to a lack of resources. (70)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
MOJ's National Action Plan for the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights in Cameroon (2015–2019)	Aims to combat exploitative child labor by disseminating standard operating procedures for the National Referral System, raising awareness about how to identify and report cases of child trafficking, increasing punishments for offenders, and building the capacity of labor inspectors. (65; 85; 86) Also aims to improve access to education for vulnerable groups by increasing the number of teachers and classrooms, establishing a legal framework to regulate parent-teacher associations, and increasing the rate of educational attainment for girls. (86) Research was unable to determine if this policy was active during the reporting period.
Decent Work Country Program (2014–2017)	Incorporated child labor concerns into the strategy for work. (6) In March 2017, convened a 3-day interim assessment and provided training to labor inspectors, including child labor issues. (9)

Although the Action Plan to Combat Child Labor and Trafficking in Children (PANETEC) expired in 2016, before its official adoption in October 2017, the government of Cameroon updated the PANETEC objectives and implementing mechanism as part of its commitment to the Sustainable Development Goals. (9; 70) Although the Trafficking in Persons Action Plan (2014–2019) does not receive dedicated funding, member ministries of the IMC use their ministry funds to carry out activities in support of the Action Plan. (69) The government is drafting a new Trafficking in Persons Action Plan for 2017–2019. (70) The government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the PRSP (2010–2020), the UNICEF Country Program Action Plan (2013–2017), or the IMC's National Gender Policy Document (2011–2020). (87; 88; 89)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor†

Program	Description
Project to Fight the Phenomenon of Street Children (Project 559)†	MINAS-funded program that provides street children with health care, education, and psychosocial care. (29; 33; 9) Through its partnership agreement PAIRPEV with the National Employment Fund, supports the reintegration of street children and provides vocational training opportunities. (9) In 2017, MINAS conducted awareness-raising activities about the negative impacts of child labor and conducted a 2-week campaign in the capital to round up children under age engaged in street vending. The children were released to their parents, who were informed about the risks of child labor. (26)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Program	Description
Country Program Action Plan (2013–2017)	UNICEF- and MINAS-implemented program that aimed to improve social protection and preventive health care and ensure access to primary education. (1; 89) In 2017, Nascent Solutions converted its school feeding program to a Village Mobile Reading Program due to prolonged school closures in the Northwest; its literacy initiative served over 18,000 students per month. (9)
School Feeding Program	$12 million U.S. Department of Agriculture-funded McGovern-Dole International Food for Education and Child Nutrition Program, which improves literacy and nutrition in 92 primary schools, benefitting 40,000 children in the Northwest region. (65; 9)
Services for Displaced or Refugee Children†	UNICEF programs that provide educational services to children affected by conflict, including: CARE2, which offers accelerated education curriculums for children in refugee camps in the Far North; ETAPES, which establishes temporary schools and protection centers in Adamawa and East regions; and the Child Protection and Education Project, which works with Catholic Relief Services in the East to enroll and retain refugee children in schools. (90) In 2017, provided education to 93,190 children ages 3 to 17 living in internally displaced persons or refugee camps. (90) The government also built eight schools in the Far North region for Nigerian refugees. (9)
World Bank Projects	Aim to provide social safety nets and improve educational outcomes, including Social Safety Nets (2014–2018), a $50 million program by the Ministry of Economy, Planning, and Regional Development to provide direct cash transfers to vulnerable families for healthcare and education expenses; and the Equity and Quality for Improved Learning Project (2014–2018), a $55.8 million program by the Ministry of Basic Education to distribute textbooks for grades 1 to 3, promote girls' education, increase the number of teachers in Cameroon, and improve access to primary education as part of the Education for All initiative. (91; 92; 35) In 2017, the Social Safety Nets expanded to include 6,000 participants in the Far North who are affected by displacement due to Boko Haram activities, and nearly doubled the total number of project participants to 411,048 individuals by September 2017. (93; 94) The Education project increased the number of contracted teachers from 2,970 to 5,898 and reduced the ratio of students to textbooks from 6:1 to 4:1 in 2017. (95)
Cameroon Institute of Childhood (ICE) Rehabilitation Project (2017–2020)*†	$2.9 million project financed by MINAS and its partners to rehabilitate a center in Betamba, which serves children in conflict with the law and provides vocational training to area youth. The government contributed $552,000 in 2017 and pledged $1.1 million in 2018. (9) One of several centers for vulnerable children operated by MINAS. (26)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Cameroon.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (14; 3)

Although the government has implemented programs to assist victims of child trafficking and children engaged in street work and domestic work, the scope of these programs is insufficient and does not fully address the extent of the problem. (1; 76) Government-run centers can temporarily house victims, but space is insufficient. (96; 77; 26) In addition, research did not find evidence of programs to specifically address child labor in agriculture, mining, and quarrying.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Cameroon (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s)
Legal Framework	Accede to the Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography.	2013 – 2017
	Criminally prohibit the use of children for illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2014 – 2017
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2017
	Establish a minimum age for compulsory education that is consistent with the minimum age for admission to work.	2009 – 2017
	Ensure that laws prohibiting child trafficking do not require threats, the use of force, or coercion to be considered child trafficking and that all children under age 18 are protected.	2015 – 2017
	Ensure that the hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children are comprehensive and include work underwater and at dangerous heights.	2014 – 2017

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s)
Enforcement	Collect and publish comprehensive statistics on enforcement efforts, including Labor Inspectorate funding, the number of inspections conducted at worksites, and number of criminal labor law violations found.	2009 – 2017
	Significantly increase the number of labor inspectors according to the ILO's technical advice.	2009 – 2017
	Ensure that the Labor Inspectorate and criminal law enforcement agencies receive an adequate amount of funding, training, and resources with which to conduct inspections and investigations.	2009 – 2017
	Strengthen the Labor Inspectorate by conducting inspections in all sectors, including in the informal sector.	2013 – 2017
	Ensure all hotlines for reporting the worst forms of child labor are well-publicized, operational, and log all calls so that cases of child labor may be tracked for referral to law enforcement or social services providers.	2015 – 2017
	Raise awareness of child trafficking issues to encourage citizens to report offenses to enforcement agencies and ensure that such cases are resolved within the judicial system.	2016 – 2017
Coordination	Ensure that children are not held in detention without reasonable evidence of wrongdoing.	2015 – 2017
	Ensure that existing coordinating mechanisms function effectively and receive sufficient resources to carry out their stated mandates.	2014 – 2017
Government Policies	Ensure that existing policies, such as the Ministry of Justice's National Action Plan for the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights in Cameroon (2015–2019) and the IMC's Trafficking in Persons Action Plan (2014–2019), receive adequate funding and are implemented as intended.	2016 – 2017
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the PRSP and the IMC's National Gender Policy Document.	2010 – 2017
Social Programs	Ensure that all children, regardless of refugee status, have access to education by eliminating school-related fees and teacher strikes, and ensure that schools are not re-appropriated for other purposes.	2009 – 2017
	Ensure that the number of schools, teachers, potable water, and sanitation facilities are adequate throughout the country.	2009 – 2017
	Expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem in Cameroon and institute programs to address child labor in agriculture, mining, and quarrying.	2009 – 2017
	Ensure that all government-run centers have sufficient space to accommodate victims.	2016 – 2017

Central African Republic

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2017, the Central African Republic made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government acceded to the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict and convened representatives from 14 armed groups as part of the follow-up to the Bangui Forum Agreement, during which the groups agreed to participate in a pilot disarmament, demobilization, and reintegration project. The government appointed several members to the Special Criminal Court, which investigates serious human rights abuses including the use of children in armed conflict; created a coordinating group for the Rapid Intervention and Repression of Sexual Violence; and established the Ministry of the Promotion of Women, Family, and Protection of Children to improve coordination on programs related to women, family, and children. However, children in the Central African Republic engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in diamond mining and armed conflict, sometimes as a result of forced or compulsory recruitment by non-governmental armed groups. An estimated 1.4 million children lacked access to education as a result of ongoing instability, and limited resources hampered the government's implementation of policies and programs to address child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in the Central African Republic (CAR) engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in illicit activities and armed conflict, sometimes as a result of forced or compulsory recruitment by non-governmental armed groups. (1; 2; 3; 4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in CAR.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	31.0 (373,742)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	63.1
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	28.0
Primary Completion Rate (%)		42.2

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (5)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 4, 2010. (6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Working in agriculture, activities unknown (7)
	Working in forestry, including carrying tools (8)
	Fishing, activities unknown (7)
Industry	Diamond and gold mining† (7; 9; 10; 11; 12)
	Working in sawmills, forges, and foundries, including sharpening sawblades and maintaining fires (7; 8)
	Construction, activities unknown (7)
Services	Domestic work (13)
	Street work, including carrying heavy loads, garbage scavenging, and market vending (7; 8)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict, including as porters, concubines, domestic workers, and guards (14; 15; 16; 17; 2; 12)
	Domestic work and working in agriculture, markets, and mining, including in diamond mines, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (15; 18; 19; 2)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor ‡	Forced labor of indigenous Baka children in farming (2)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (15; 18; 19; 20; 21; 22; 2)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

CAR experienced a surge of violence in 2017, almost doubling the number of internally displaced persons (IDP) to 688,700, and militias controlled much of the country beyond the capital of Bangui. (14; 17; 23; 24; 25; 3; 26; 27; 12) Although the government worked with the UN Multidimensional Integrated Stabilization Mission in CAR (MINUSCA), UNICEF, and other partner agencies to demobilize and reintegrate children into community life, there were allegations of abuse and commercial sexual exploitation lodged against UN peacekeepers. (2; 24; 4; 3) Non-state armed groups intensified the forcible recruitment of children during the reporting period as a result of the increase in violence. (2; 28; 12) UNICEF estimated between 6,000 and 10,000 children were associated with armed groups in 2017. (28)

The Ministry of Education has attempted to improve access to education by providing free school admission to children from IDP camps, waiving school exam fees for children affected by conflict, and expanding programs to provide birth registration which may be required for school enrollment. (15; 29; 30; 31; 15) However, children continued to experience difficulties accessing education due to school fees, an absence of teachers, security concerns, destruction or looting of school materials and buildings by armed groups, and unavailability of schools, especially in rural areas or IDP camps. (15; 19; 32; 33; 34; 35; 36; 16; 26) Although many schools have reopened, some were temporarily closed due to attacks or occupation by armed groups, occupation by peacekeeping troops or internally displaced persons, or the close proximity of armed groups. (34; 35; 37; 38; 32; 36; 17; 3; 4; 12) The UN estimates that 25 percent of school-age children are not in school and at least 500,000 children have had their education disrupted. (26)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

CAR has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

In 2017, the government ratified the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict. (39)

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in CAR’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Central African Republic

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	14	Article 259 of the Labor Code (40)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 263 of the Labor Code (40)

State Voluntary	Yes	18	Decree N° 85.432; Declaration to the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict (39)
Non-state	Yes	18	Articles 262 and 393 of the Labor Code (40)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Ordinance N° 84/031 Orienting the Teaching System; Article 7 of the Constitution; Article 13 of Law N° 97/014 Orienting the Education System (43; 44)
Free Public Education	Yes		Ordinance N° 84/031; Article 9 of the Constitution (43; 44)

* No conscription (14; 43)

In 2017, the Ministry of Justice announced its intention to reinforce the Labor Code’s prohibition of the use of children in armed conflict by non-state armed groups through additional legislation. (28) A draft of the Child Protection Code is still pending adoption by the National Assembly. (31; 45) Despite a 2016 study on hazardous work, CAR has not determined by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. (40; 46; 47) Although the Labor Code prohibits work by children under age 14, the law does not apply to children outside of formal employment relationships, which does not conform to international standards that require all children be protected under the law establishing a minimum age for work. (40; 48)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Public Service, Modernization of Administration, Labor, Employment and Social Protection (MOL) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Public Service, Modernization of Administration, Labor, Employment and Social Protection (MOL)	Monitor and enforce laws related to child labor. (7)
Internal Security Forces Police and Gendarmes	Enforce all laws, including those related to the worst forms of child labor. (28)
Ministry of Justice	Protect the rights of the child through its Rapid Response for Child Protection team and combat the worst forms of child labor through its courts and tribunals. (31; 13)
Ministry of Social Affairs, Promotion of Gender, and Humanitarian Action (MSA)	Oversee child soldier issues and lead the government’s anti-trafficking policy efforts through the National Council on Child Protection. Refer victims of child trafficking to NGOs and maintain an orphanage for children at risk of child trafficking. (13)

Organization/Agency	Role
Special Criminal Court	Investigate serious human rights abuses committed since 2003, including the use of children in armed conflict. Hybrid court comprising international and national judges and prosecutors. (49; 25) In 2017, the President and Minister of Justice appointed a chief prosecutor, a deputy prosecutor, and five judges. (25)

Victims of child labor may be referred to the Ministry of the Promotion of Women, Family, and Protection of Children, which was created in 2017 to improve government coordination on relevant programs. (31) A total of 19 new magistrates were appointed throughout CAR; those who were unable to be deployed to the regions due to threats by armed groups or continued insecurity assisted with a backlog of cases in Bangui. (50; 4) However, judicial authorities lacked the staff and resources to conduct investigations, and government authority was largely absent outside Bangui. (10; 50; 15; 51; 26) The Special Criminal Court is funded for only the first 14 months of its 5-year mandate, and only the juvenile court in the capital is functional. (11; 25) Cases were widely resolved outside of formal legal proceedings due to a lack of public trust, access, or knowledge about the justice system. (52; 53; 54; 26)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in CAR took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MOL that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including adequate financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

* The government does not publish this information.

Research indicates that violations were common in all sectors of the economy, but government efforts to combat child labor were hindered by a lack of Labor Inspectorate capacity and inadequate financial and material resources, including transportation, office facilities and supplies, and computers. (57; 55; 48; 58; 31) Although child labor violations may be reported in person to the Labor Inspectorate in Bangui, there is no mechanism to report child labor violations in other parts of the country. (55) The MOL is supposed to work with other ministries and UNICEF to provide assistance to victims of child labor; however, due to a lack of resources, the government relies primarily on NGOs to provide social services to victims. (19; 56)

Central African Republic

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Although the exact number of inspectors is unknown, research indicates that the existing number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of CAR's workforce, which includes almost 2.2 million workers. (59) According to the ILO's technical advice ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, CAR should employ about 55 labor inspectors. (59; 60; 61)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in CAR took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including human resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Training for Investigators
Initial Training for New Employees	Unknown (7)	Unknown (31)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (7)	Unknown (31)
Refresher Courses Provided	No (52)	Yes (28)
Number of Investigations	39 (7; 29; 30)	Unknown (31)
Number of Violations Found	1,404 (62)	3,105 (28)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	0 (1)	Unknown (31)
Number of Convictions	0 (52)	Unknown (31)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (56)	Yes (63)

There is only 1 police officer for every 1,300 Central Africans, and government authority is largely absent outside the capital. (64; 28) However, with the support of MINUSCA, the Internal Security Forces began recruiting 500 police and gendarmes in 2017. This marks the first recruitment since 2010 and 2011, respectively. (64; 4) Government officials outside of the capital may lack the resources and knowledge to enforce the law, including lack of access to copies of relevant laws. (51) Research found evidence that law enforcement officers may subject children to violence during criminal investigations, which may amount to inhumane treatment. (19) Additionally, there is evidence that children released from non-state armed groups are detained, interrogated by state law enforcement agencies, and denied access to humanitarian assistance and social service providers. (50) Furthermore, juvenile criminal offenders are regularly imprisoned with adults despite a 2016 decree that prohibits this practice, as no separate juvenile cells or juvenile prisons exist. (19; 30; 2)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
Children Associated with Armed Forces or Groups (EAFGA)	Secure the release of children used in armed conflict and provide appropriate care with the support of UNICEF. (2; 31) As of June 2017, removed 2,456 children from armed groups. (65) Formerly listed as the Disarmament, Demobilization, Reinsertion, and Repatriation Committee. (31)
Mixed Unit for Rapid Intervention and Repression of Sexual Violence (UMIRR)*	Combat sexual violence against women and children. Comprises representatives from the MSA, Ministry of Justice, and law enforcement. (31) Operate a 24-hour hotline. (28)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

Although the Inter-ministerial Committee to Combat Human Trafficking still exists, it is no longer functional due to a lack of resources. (19; 13)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including coverage of all forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Bangui Forum Agreement	Formal agreement signed by 10 armed groups and the Transitional Government on May 5, 2015, to end the recruitment and use of children in armed combat and to facilitate the separation of children from the ranks of armed groups. (10; 66; 67; 4) In 2017, convened the fourth meeting of the Consultative Follow-up Committee on Disarmament, Demobilization, Reintegration and Repatriation with representatives from 14 armed groups, who agreed to participate in a pilot disarmament, demobilization, and reintegration project involving 560 participants. (4; 12)
Child Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration Policy	Based on the Bangui Forum Agreement, MSA policy that aims to facilitate initiatives to disarm, demobilize, and reintegrate child soldiers in cooperation with UN agencies, other ministries, and armed groups. (7; 54; 68; 14; 30) Through its National Strategy for Community Reinsertion of Children Formerly Associated with Armed Groups, provides temporary care to children separated from armed groups and establishes child protection networks (RECOPE) throughout the country. (68; 69; 29) In 2017, UNICEF provided support to 420 children released from armed groups, and MINUSCA conducted a weeklong campaign to raise awareness about the impact of armed conflict on children. (4)
National Recovery and Peacebuilding Plan (RCPCA) (2017–2021)	Aims to re-establish peace and security, and support reconciliation by disarming and reintegrating children associated with armed groups, promoting legal reform, seeking justice for victims, and improving access to education. Aims to construct 218 schools and 1,200 school canteens, to train 1,000 teachers, and to distribute 150,000 school kits. (14; 15) In 2017, with the assistance of UNDP, convened the first meeting of the advisory board and established two local peace and reconciliation committees. (4)
National Strategy for the Community-Based Reintegration of Children Associated with Armed Groups in CAR	Aims to coordinate the reintegration of ex-combatant children into communities as civilians and prevent re-recruitment by armed groups. (70) In 2017, participated in Bangui Forum Agreement’s pilot program and worked with UNICEF to combat child labor. (13)

Although the Government of CAR has adopted the Bangui Forum Agreement, which seeks to address child soldiering, the Child Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration Policy has yet to be fully implemented due to a lack of funding and ongoing instability. (71; 3) In addition, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor, and a draft of a national policy addressing the elimination of child labor has yet to be adopted. (48; 13) Furthermore, the government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the National Strategy for the Education Sector (2008–2020). (72)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Awareness Raising Programs†	MOL program that aims to raise awareness of child labor and international conventions. (7; 29; 30) In 2017, participated in an awareness-raising campaign on trafficking in persons, organized by IOM. (28)
Shelters for Unaccompanied Children†	MSA- and UNICEF-supported centers that provide immediate care, food, and psychosocial support to vulnerable children and former child soldiers. (2) In 2017, continued to provide services to children. (13)
Education Programs	Programs to restore educational infrastructure. Includes: $23.4 million EU-funded Education Program to rehabilitate and equip more than 300 schools in 4 prefectures and the capital; Bangui Ministry of Mines and Ministry of National Education and Scientific Research program to construct schools in mining zones; and UN Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs’ Education Clusters led by UNICEF and in collaboration with the Ministry of Education (MOE) to provide access to education in conflict-affected areas. (29; 30; 33; 73; 74; 75; 31; 27) In 2017, UNICEF worked with the MOE to hold end-of-year exams for over 10,000 internally displaced children. (27) MINUSCA supported the government in deploying 410 civil servants throughout the country, the majority of whom were from the MOE. (4)
Birth Registration Campaign†	In support of the 2014 decree mandating free birth registration to children born during the 2012–2014 conflict, re-opens civil registration centers in areas affected by conflict and provides registration to children. (30) Although the program remains ongoing, no new registrations took place in 2017 due to administrative issues. (13)

† Program is funded by the Government of CAR.

Although the government participates in a program that assists former child soldiers, coordination with non-government actors is weak and the scope of this program is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem. (54; 11; 69; 31) The absence of resources and government authority through much of the country significantly hindered the government's ability to combat child labor, and research found no evidence that the government has programs to assist children engaged in other worst forms of child labor. (31)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in CAR (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that all children are protected by law, including children working outside of formal employment relationships.	2017
	Determine the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, in consultation with employers' and workers' organizations, and ensure that the types of hazardous work prohibited for children are comprehensive.	2013 – 2017
	Publish the legal source that establishes a minimum age for voluntary military service.	2015 – 2017
Enforcement	Ensure that courts are allocated sufficient resources to be fully operational and that citizens can report violations and access formal judicial processes throughout the country.	2016 – 2017
	Publish information on the Labor Inspectorate's funding level, number of labor inspectors, type of training provided to inspectors and investigators, and data related to enforcement efforts, including the number and type of investigations conducted, violations found, penalties imposed and collected, prosecutions initiated, convictions obtained, and whether routine and unannounced inspections were conducted.	2014 – 2017
	Ensure that enforcement agencies have sufficient staff, resources, and funding to enforce laws related to child labor and provide services to victims throughout the country.	2009 – 2017
	Significantly increase the number of labor inspectors in accordance with the ILO's technical advice and ensure enforcement officers have the resources necessary to fulfill their mandate.	2009 – 2017
	Ensure that children are not subject to violence during criminal investigations, are not kept in detention centers with adults, and are granted access to social services providers and humanitarian assistance when released from armed groups.	2016 – 2017
Coordination	Ensure that coordinating mechanisms are functional and combat all forms of child labor, including its worst forms.	2011 – 2017
Government Policies	Implement established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms.	2013 – 2017
	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor.	2014 – 2017
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the National Strategy for the Education Sector.	2009 – 2017
Social Programs	Ensure that children affected by conflict are not subject to the worst forms of child labor by peacekeeping forces.	2016 – 2017
	Improve access to education by eliminating school-related fees, making additional efforts to provide all children with birth registration, establishing an adequate number of teachers and classrooms throughout the country, and ensuring that schools are safe spaces and free from armed groups.	2009 – 2017
	Expand programs to assist former child combatants and children associated with armed groups and improve coordination among relevant actors.	2013 – 2017
	Allocate sufficient resources and implement programs to address the worst forms of child labor throughout the country.	2009 – 2017

In 2017, Chad made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The President promulgated a new Penal Code in May 2017 that brings criminal prohibitions against child trafficking in line with international standards. However, children in Chad engage in the worst forms of child labor, including forced labor in cattle herding and domestic work. The country's legal framework does not contain criminal penalties for the use of children in illicit activities, and austerity measures imposed in 2016 continue to limit government funding for efforts to combat child labor. The Ministry of Justice dissolved the Inter-Ministerial Committee on Trafficking in Persons, and the government has no active policies for relevant sectors of child labor, such as commercial sexual exploitation, and forced labor in domestic work and herding cattle.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Chad engage in the worst forms of child labor, including forced labor in cattle herding and domestic work. (1; 2; 3; 4; 5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Chad.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	48.8
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	49.5
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	28.4
Primary Completion Rate (%)		37.9

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2013, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (6)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Demographic and Health Survey, 2014–2015. (7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Cultivating and harvesting crops, including rice and corn (8)
	Collecting and chopping wood (3; 4)
	Production of charcoal (9)
	Herding cattle (10; 9)
	Fishing, including catching, smoking, and selling fish (9)
Industry	Building walls (4)
	Carpentry (9)
	Gold mining† (9)
	Working in auto repair shops (9)
	Making bricks (4)
Services	Domestic work (8; 1; 2; 3; 4)
	Working in restaurants as barmaids and servers (9)
	Street work, including vending, garbage scavenging, and carrying heavy loads† (4; 10; 11; 9)
	Begging (1; 9)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2; 3; 4; 5)
	Recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict, including as suicide bombers (5; 12)
	Forced labor in cattle herding, domestic work, fishing, begging, street vending, and agriculture, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1; 2; 3; 5; 9)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Chad

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Child trafficking occurs primarily within Chad for the purposes of forced labor in cattle herding, domestic work, and commercial sexual exploitation. In isolated incidents, boys may be forced to herd cattle for military or government officials. (2; 5; 9) Domestically, boys known as mahadjirine may be sent to Koranic schools to receive an education, but they are forced to beg and then surrender the money they receive to their teachers. (1; 2; 5)

The Constitution and the Law Orienting the Education System mandate free and compulsory education in Chad. (13; 14) However, there is a lack of schools, classrooms, and teachers throughout the country. (15; 9; 16) Some schools do not offer all grade levels, parents are often required to pay for school-related fees, and some schools near Lake Chad were occupied or attacked by Boko Haram elements. (15; 16; 9) In addition, the 2016–2017 school year was truncated due to prolonged teacher strikes in 2016, re-entry after the strikes concluded was slow, and the amended school calendar extended into the beginning of rainy season when many children are expected to assist their parents with agricultural duties rather than attend classes. (17) Furthermore, birth certificates are often required for enrollment in school, but only 12 percent of children nationwide are registered at birth, with some areas experiencing birth registration rates as low as 5 percent. (18; 9) Children in refugee camps may have a particularly hard time accessing education due to a lack of qualified teachers, poor infrastructure, and teacher strikes. (19)

Government resources for addressing social issues continued to be limited during the reporting period due to Chad’s continuing economic crisis, large refugee population, and security spending. (20)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Chad has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Chad’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the use of children in illicit activities.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Article 52 of the Labor Code; Article 1 of the Decree Relating to Child Labor (21; 22)

Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 335 and 336.a of the Penal Code; Articles 81–85 of the Law on Cyber Security and Fight Against Cyber Criminality; Articles 5, 16, and 22 of the President's Ordinance on Trafficking in Persons; Articles 362 and 364 of the Penal Code (24; 25; 23; 24)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Prohibition of Military Recruitment
State Compulsory	Yes	20	Article 32 of the Law on the Organization of the Armed Forces; Article 22 of the African Charter on the Rights and Welfare of the Child; Article 5, 18, and 22 of the President's Ordinance on Trafficking in Persons; Articles 10, 286 (cc), 288 (g), and 370 of the Penal Code (26; 27; 23; 24)
State Voluntary	Yes	18	Article 32 of the Law on the Organization of the Armed Forces; Article 1 of the Ordinance Prohibiting the Use of Children in Armed Conflict; Article 52 of Military Statute N° 006/PR/06; Article 5 of the President's Ordinance on Trafficking in Persons; Articles 10, 286 (cc), 288 (g), and 370 of the Penal Code (26; 28; 29; 23; 24)
Non-state	Yes	18	Article 1 of the Ordinance Prohibiting the Use of Children in Armed Conflict; Articles 5, 18, and 22 of the President's Ordinance on Trafficking in Persons; Articles 10, 286 (cc), 288 (g), and 370 of the Penal Code (28; 23; 24)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16‡	Articles 21, 23, 25, and 28 of the Law Orienting the Education System; Article 35 of the Constitution (13; 14)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 9 of the Law Orienting the Education System; Article 35 of the Constitution (13; 14)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (13)

President Idriss Déby promulgated a new Penal Code in May 2017 and issued a Presidential Ordinance on Combating Trafficking in Persons that brings criminal prohibitions against child trafficking in line with international standards. (30; 31; 32) Several laws are awaiting approval by the National Assembly, including the Child Protection Code, Labor Code, and Family Code, which contain additional provisions criminalizing child trafficking and extending protection to children working in the informal sector. (1; 33; 34; 35; 36; 37; 9)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Public Service, Employment, and Social Dialogue (MOPS) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Public Service, Employment, and Social Dialogue (MOPS)	Implement and enforce child labor laws. (15) Includes a directorate and specific point of contact to assist in coordinating child protection and human trafficking issues. (9)
Ministry of Justice, Human Rights, and Guardian of the Seal (MOJ)	Draft and enforce laws and coordinate efforts to protect human rights. Through its Directorate for Protection and Legal Monitoring of Children, enforce child labor laws. (9)

Chad

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Women, Family and National Solidarity (MWFNS)	Protect children's rights, provide temporary shelter to victims, and assist with reintegration when appropriate. Through its Child Protection Directorate, lead government efforts on child protection, including from child labor, and liaise with the Child Protection Directorate at the MOJ. (9)
National Police Child Protection Brigade	Enforce and investigate criminal laws against child labor, including child trafficking, and refer them to other ministries as appropriate. (5; 9) Role expanded in 2017 to include the enforcement of laws related to the commercial sexual exploitation of children, use of children in illicit activities, and prevention of the recruitment of children by armed groups. The MWFNS, MOJ, and MOPS maintain detachments at the Child Protection Brigade to facilitate collaboration. (9; 38)

Research indicates that the Child Protection Brigade within the National Police is not well-known by the public, thus limiting its effectiveness. (9)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Chad took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the MOPS that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the authority to assess penalties.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2016	2017

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (8)	Yes (9)

* The government does not publish this information.

In addition to 30 inspectors, the government employs 50 labor controllers who assist labor inspectors. (9) The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Chad's workforce, which includes approximately 5.5 million workers. (41) According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Chad should employ roughly 136 labor inspectors. (41; 42; 43) Continued austerity measures limited funding and affected inspectors' ability to conduct inspections. (9) Inspectors lack sufficient resources, including transportation, to conduct investigations outside the city where they are based. (15; 9) Research indicates that the informal sector, in which the majority of children work, is largely unmonitored, and some establishments in the formal sector may go years without receiving an inspection. (1; 15; 40)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Chad took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Training for Investigators
Initial Training for New Employees	Unknown (8)	Yes (44; 45)

Number of Violations Found	235 (46)	Unknown* (9)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	0 (8)	Unknown* (9)
Number of Convictions	0 (8)	Unknown* (9)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (8)	Yes (9)

* The government does not publish this information.

Continued austerity measures limited the ability of criminal law enforcement agencies to investigate the worst forms of child labor during the reporting period. The judicial system has experienced prolonged strikes and closures since November 2016. (47) In addition, comprehensive statistics on criminal law enforcement are unavailable as the government maintains hand-written records of criminal cases at local courts and regional tribunals, rather than in a centralized electronic system. (9)

Civil society organizations typically assist with providing temporary shelter, legal assistance, and family reintegration services; they also track prosecutions and convictions. (44; 48) An underdeveloped judicial system, inadequate deterrents, and under-enforcement of existing penalties also pose barriers to prosecution. (15; 48) A police commissioner who was arrested in 2016 following allegations of complicity in a child trafficking network was released in 2017; the investigation remains ongoing but research was unable to determine if it is being actively investigated. (5)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including funding and efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
Working Group on the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Coordinate government efforts on child trafficking, including providing training, conducting awareness-raising activities, and strengthening the network of government organizations that address human trafficking. Chaired by the MWFNS Child Protection Directorate and includes representatives from four other ministries, including MOPS. (9)
MWFNS's Regional Child Protection Committees	Coordinate regional government efforts to address the worst forms of child labor and refer victims as appropriate. (5; 47) Includes representatives from relevant ministries, police, and civil society. (9; 47)

In 2017, the government's inability to pay many officials and turnover at the MOJ contributed to the dissolution of the Inter-Ministerial Committee on Trafficking in Persons. (38) Furthermore, the Regional Child Protection Committees lacked the resources to investigate every case they received, and the Working Group on the Worst Forms of Child Labor failed to meet during the reporting period. (5; 38)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including funding and implementation.

Chad

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor‡

Policy	Description
Five-Year Plan for Development (2016–2020)	Ministry of Economy and Development Planning policy which aims to conduct a survey on child labor every 3 years, increase the rate of birth registration, increase educational opportunities, and strengthen the human and financial capacity of MOPS's directorate charged with combating the worst forms of child labor. (49)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (50; 51)

Since the Inter-Ministerial Committee on Trafficking in Persons was dissolved by the government, the National Action Plan on Human Trafficking was never completed. (9) Research found no evidence of a policy on relevant forms of child labor, such as commercial sexual exploitation, and forced labor in domestic work and herding cattle.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including funding and adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor‡

Program	Description
Transition Centers†	Run by the Ministry of Defense; provides family reunification and reintegration assistance to former child soldiers. MWFNS, in collaboration with UNICEF, assists in demobilizing and reinserting child soldiers into community life. (33; 52)
Reception Centers†	Run by MWFNS with the assistance of UNICEF and local NGOs; centers located throughout the country provide temporary assistance to victims of child trafficking, including food, education, medical and psychological care, and reintegration services. (5; 47) The National Solidarity Fund, maintained by the Prime Minister's Office, funds temporary shelter or reunification assistance for victims. (47) Child Protection Directorates at various ministries work together to provide support and reintegration services to victims of exploitation. (53) In 2017, UNICEF funded the construction of a new reception center just south of the capitol in Koundoul, which includes a shelter for victims of exploitation and abuse as well as office space for social workers. (9; 47)
Safety Nets Project (2016–2020)*	$10 million World Bank-funded project that aims to provide cash transfers and cash-for-work disbursements to 15,000 vulnerable families. (54)
UNDAF (2017–2021)*	Aims to provide access to quality education for children who are school age, refugee, and vulnerable, and to improve social protection and promote good governance. (55)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Chad.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (52; 56; 50; 57)

The government's funding to social programs continued to be limited due to austerity measures during the reporting period, hampering the country's capacity to provide adequate care and reintegration support for victims of child labor. (5; 9) Although Chad has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to adequately address the extent of the problem, particularly the use of forced child labor in herding cattle, domestic work, and commercial sexual exploitation. (10)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Chad (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that laws specifically prohibit children from being used, offered, or procured for illicit activities.	2011 – 2017
Enforcement	Ensure that law enforcement agencies receive sufficient resources to carry out their mandate and that their role is understood by the public.	2016 – 2017
	Strengthen the Labor Inspectorate by authorizing inspectors to assess penalties, ensuring inspectors are authorized to conduct unannounced inspections, and by providing sufficient resources to conduct inspections in both the formal and informal sectors and prosecute offenders.	2014 – 2017

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Institutionalize training for labor inspectors and criminal law investigators, including at the beginning of labor inspectors' employment, and ensure both labor inspectors and criminal investigators receive regular refresher courses, as well as training on new laws related to child labor.	2014 – 2017
	Systematically collect data on law enforcement efforts and publish information about labor inspectorate funding, the number and type of inspections conducted, whether violations were found, penalties imposed and fees collected, as well as the number of criminal investigations conducted, violations found, prosecutions initiated, and convictions obtained.	2014 – 2017
	Significantly increase the number of labor inspectors in accordance with the ILO's technical advice.	2012 – 2017
	Ensure that penalties are severe enough to deter offenders and are enforced according to the law.	2015 – 2017
Coordination	Ensure that coordinating committees receive adequate resources to meet and carry out their mandates to coordinate efforts and respond to child labor issues.	2014 – 2017
Government Policies	Adopt a policy to combat all relevant worst forms of child labor in Chad, including commercial sexual exploitation, and forced labor in domestic work and herding cattle.	2009 – 2017
Social Programs	Ensure access to education for all children by eliminating school-related fees; ensure that schools are safe spaces; make additional efforts to provide all children with birth certificates; and increase the number of schools, classrooms, and teachers throughout the country, including for children in refugee camps.	2014 – 2017
	Ensure that existing programs receive adequate funding and can support victims of child labor.	2016 – 2017
	Establish or expand programs to provide services to children engaged in the worst forms of child labor, such as the use of forced child labor in herding cattle, domestic work, and commercial sexual exploitation.	2009 – 2017

In 2017, Chile made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. In 2017, the government updated its list of hazardous occupations prohibited for children and trained labor inspectors on the updated list; developed a labor inspection manual that includes specific instructions on how to conduct child labor inspections; and released a National Action Plan on Business and Human Rights to address human rights issues in supply chains. However, children in Chile engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Although the government made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period, prohibitions related to forced labor do not meet international standards. In addition, there is a lack of publicly available enforcement information, including the number of criminal violations and prosecutions related to the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Chile engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1; 2; 3; 4; 5; 6; 7; 8; 9) The results of the 2012 National Survey on Activities of Children and Adolescents (Encuesta de Actividades de Niños, Niñas y Adolescentes) indicate that 70.6 percent of working children ages 5 to 17 are engaged in work classified as dangerous. (6; 8) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Chile.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	3.8 (94,025)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	99.5
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	4.5
Primary Completion Rate (%)		92.8

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (10)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Encuesta de Actividades de Niños, Niñas y Adolescentes Survey, 2012. (11)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

	Forced labor in agriculture, mining, construction, street vending, domestic work, and garment and hospitality sectors (24; 3; 21; 18; 9)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4; 5; 6; 18; 22; 14; 9)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

In Chile, children are subjected to human trafficking for commercial sexual exploitation and domestic work. (9) Children, some of whom may be trafficking victims, are also used to steal, or to produce, sell, and transport drugs near the border with Peru and Bolivia. (25; 21; 9) In 2017, the National Minors’ Service (SENAME) identified 415 victims of the worst forms of child labor, including 242 engaged in illicit activities and 65 in commercial sexual exploitation. (23)

Indigenous children and adolescents from Otavalo, Ecuador, are especially vulnerable to human trafficking for labor exploitation in Chile. (2; 18) Children are also involved in street work, especially in Santiago, including selling handicrafts, clothes, or other goods. (26; 27; 28) In Coquimbo, children sell products in street markets, and work as jugglers. (13)

Education is compulsory in Chile through secondary school. (29)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Chile has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Chile’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of forced labor.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 13 of the Labor Code (30)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 13–14, and 18 of the Labor Code (30)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 14–18 of the Labor Code; Supreme Decree 2; Article 1 of Law No. 20.539 (30; 31; 32)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	No		Article 19 of the Constitution; Article 2 of the Labor Code, Article 411 of the Penal Code; Law 20.507 (33; 34; 30; 35)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 411 of the Penal Code (34)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 367 and 411 of the Penal Code; Law No. 20.594; Law No. 20.526 (34; 36; 37)

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Paragraph 1, Article 5 and Paragraph 2, Article 19 of Law No. 20.000; Law No. 20.084 (38; 39)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment
State Compulsory	Yes	18	Chapter 1, Article 13 of the Armed Forces Recruitment and Mobilization Law No. 2.306 (40)
State Voluntary	Yes	18	Chapter 1, Article 13 of the Armed Forces Recruitment and Mobilization Law No. 2.306 (40)
Non-state	Yes		Article 26 of Law No. 20.357 (41)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	18‡	Articles 4, 25, and 27 of the General Education Law No. 20.370 (29)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 4 of the General Education Law No. 20.370 (29)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (29)

In 2017, the government updated its list of hazardous occupations prohibited for children and provided special protections for adolescent workers and, in early 2018, passed a law creating the Children's Rights Defender's Office. (32; 42) However, Chilean laws related to forced labor are not sufficient because they do not criminally prohibit forced labor except when it results from human trafficking. (34)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the National Labor Directorate that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MINTRAB)	Design and implement national strategy on child labor and generate public awareness of child labor and commercial sexual exploitation. (6; 43) The National Labor Directorate, functioning in parallel with the MINTRAB, enforces child labor laws. (18)
National Minors' Service (SENAME)	Coordinate the provision of services to vulnerable children in collaboration with Rights Protection Offices. (44; 45) Operates under the Ministry of Justice. (18)
National Investigations Police (PDI)	Investigate and prevent the worst forms of child labor by conducting community outreach activities, including trainings and information sessions. (46) Operates under the Ministry of the Interior. (18) Within the PDI, sex crime brigades specifically look for the commercial sexual exploitation of children (CSEC). (47)
National Uniformed Police ( Carabineros )	Investigate, prevent, and detect crimes, including child labor violations, by conducting community policing and specialized investigations. The Directorate for Family Protection provides specialized orientation on policies and operating plans for detection and prevention of domestic violence and child abuse, including sexual exploitation of children. (22) Operates under the Ministry of the Interior. (18)
National Prosecutor's Office ( Fiscalía Nacional )	Investigate and prosecute crimes, including those involving commercial sexual exploitation and trafficking of children. Train and coordinate with interagency partners, including the PDI and Carabineros , and regional and local prosecutor's offices. (48; 49)
Rights Protection Offices ( Oficinas de Protección de Derechos )	Refer cases of children whose rights have been violated to appropriate social services, and monitor and raise awareness of the worst forms of child labor. Located in municipalities throughout the country and part of a social protection network overseen by the SENAME. (7)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Chile took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operation of the National Labor Directorate that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the number of vehicles to conduct labor inspections.

Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (18)	Yes (14)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (18)	Yes (14)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (18)	Yes (14)

In 2017, the government conducted a national training for labor inspectors on topics including children's rights, child labor, protection of adolescent workers, and worst forms of child labor. The government also trained 70 female labor union-affiliated employees on child labor and protection of adolescent workers. (14)

The government conducted training for 25 regional labor inspectors on the updated hazardous work list, and committed funds to continue this training in 2018. (14) MINTRAB published an updated inspections procedure manual that included guidance for conducting child labor inspections. (14; 51) However, the number of vehicles available to labor inspectors is insufficient, especially in regional areas where distances between regional officers and employers can be great.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Chile took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including penalties for promoting or facilitating the commercial sexual exploitation of children.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Training for Investigators
Initial Training for New Employees	Yes (18)	Yes (52)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A	N/A
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (18; 50)	Yes (14)
Number of Investigations	23 (18)	32 (14)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown	415 (23)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	23 (50)	32 (14)
Number of Convictions	21 (22)	23 (14)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (18)	Yes (14)

The government also initiated 32 investigations for worst forms of child labor and secured 23 convictions, primarily for commercial sexual exploitation of children. (14) However, the penalties for promoting or facilitating the commercial sexual exploitation of children, ranging from 3 to 5 years imprisonment, are not commensurate with those for other serious crimes such as rape. (21; 9)

Additionally, judges frequently suspend or commute sentences of individuals convicted of commercial sexual exploitation of children. (9)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
National Advisory Committee to Eradicate Child Labor	Oversee implementation of the “National Strategy for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of Adolescent Workers (2015–2025),” formulated with the Social Observatory to Eradicate Child Labor. (22) Led by the MINTRAB, includes representatives from the Ministries of Agriculture, Education, and Justice; the National Statistics Institute; the National Tourism Service; the SENAME; the PDI and the Carabineros . (53) In 2017, met regularly, bringing together civil society organizations and government agencies to raise awareness, provide services to victims, and protect victims’ rights. (14)
Regional Advisory Committees for the Eradication of Child Labor and the Protection of Adolescent Workers	Replicate the functioning of the National Advisory Committee at the regional level. (18) Led by the Regional Secretary of Labor, committees bring together local government agencies, civil society organizations, and the business community to address child labor. In 2017, continued to be strengthened in all 15 regions of the country. (14)
Worst Forms of Child Labor (WFCL) Task Force	Oversee the WFCL Registry, which tracks incidents of the worst forms of child labor and provides information on programs designed to assist child workers. Compile data in the WFCL Registry and present it to the National Advisory Committee to Eradicate Child Labor and other government stakeholders. (22)
Social Observatory to Eradicate Child Labor	Established by Decree No. 131 to coordinate the study of child and adolescent labor issues among working groups, foundations, educational study centers, and institutions. Conduct technical studies on child and adolescent labor issues and evaluate current policies to eliminate child labor. (1; 54)
National Council for Children	Integrate efforts across government agencies to uphold the rights of the child. Implement policies, strategic plans, and programs at national, regional, and local levels. (17) Managed by the Ministry General Secretariat of the Presidency. (17)
Interagency Task Force on Trafficking in Persons	Coordinate the government’s anti-human trafficking efforts. Led by the Ministry of the Interior, comprises law enforcement agencies, the Ministry of Foreign Relations, the Ministry of Justice, the National Prosecutor’s Office, the SENAME, and others. (55) Met twice in 2017 and presented procedures for the identification of trafficking in persons victims. (23)

In 2017, the government created a Technical Secretariat to design and implement the Third Action Plan against the Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents for the 2017-2019 period. (14) The government also published a guide to coordinate interagency efforts to address trafficking in persons, including conducting inspections and detecting and referring trafficking victims. (23)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor‡

Policy	Description
National Strategy for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of Adolescent Workers (2015–2025)	Establishes a strategy to eradicate child labor by (1) combining efforts across national and regional agencies and private and public entities and (2) requiring regions to establish a strategy adapted to issues particular to the area to effectively eradicate child labor. (56) The MINTRAB oversees the implementation of regional strategies, including the design and implementation of regional operating plans. (22) In 2017, the government conducted a qualitative study on child labor and migrants as part of this strategy. (14)
National Policy for Childhood and Adolescence (2015–2025)	Creates an Integrated System of Guarantee of Rights and an Inter-Agency Task Force, which is developing a plan of action for childhood and adolescence. MINTRAB participates and provides information and guidance regarding child labor. (57; 58) In 2017, under this policy, the government created the Children’s Rights Defender’s Office. (52)
Third Action Plan against the Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents (2017-2019)†	Released in 2017. Creates cooperation mechanisms for private and public institutions to collaborate on preventing and detecting commercial sexual exploitation of children and providing social services and rights restitution to victims. (59). Under this plan, the government funded a qualitative study to deepen understanding of commercial sexual exploitation of children in Chile. (60)

Policy	Description
Anti-Trafficking National Action Plan (2015–2018)	Acts to prevent and combat human trafficking, with a focus on women and children. Encompasses four strategic areas: (1) prevention and awareness raising, (2) control (prosecution), (3) victims' assistance and protection, and (4) inter-institutional cooperation and coordination. (61) In 2017, the government for the first time included a specific line item budget to fund the implementation of this Plan. (23)
Inter-Agency Protocol on Assistance for Trafficking-in-Persons Victims	Creates a system to register, monitor, and assist victims of trafficking. Provides safe housing; health and psychological services; and legal, employment, and immigration assistance. (50) Coordinated by the Under Secretariat for Crime Prevention and Citizen Security at the Ministry of the Interior. (50) In 2017, provided safe housing, health and psychological services, legal assistance and representation, employment assistance, and regularization of migratory status to victims. (23) In July 2017, published a new guide for the Interagency Control and Monitoring of TIP. (23)
Chilean Ministry of the Interior and Public Security and U.S. Department of Homeland Security Joint Statement on Trafficking in Persons	Seeks to enhance collaboration and information exchanges between enforcement agencies on combating human trafficking and protecting vulnerable populations. Signed in 2015 by Chile and the United States. (62) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.
National Action Plan on Business and Human Rights†	Released on August 21, 2017. Fosters respect of human rights in business, prevents potential negative impacts of business on human rights, promotes human rights due diligence within business operations and supply chains, strengthens remedial mechanisms, and contributes to the fulfillment of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development. (63)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (64; 65)

In 2017, at the IV Global Conference on the Sustained Eradication of Child Labor in Buenos Aires, Argentina, the government pledged to update data from EANNA, continue to collaborate in initiatives that further social dialogue with other Latin American countries, and actively continue with its process of submission of Protocol 29 relating to the ILO Convention on Forced Labor to its legislature. (66)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, which cover the main sectors where child labor has been identified in the country (Table 10).

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor‡

Program	Description
Walking Together for the Eradication of Child Labor (2017-2018)*†	Contribute to the employability of family members of children and adolescents who are at-risk for child labor. Includes job training and assistance with job search. (67) Led by the MINTRAB in collaboration with the Catholic Church and implemented in Maipu, Quilicura and Quinta Normal, in the Metropolitan Region of Santiago. (67) In October 2017, the government trained and granted trade certification to fifty parents of children engaged in or at risk of engaging in child labor. (68)
Regional Action Group for the Americas†	Conduct prevention and awareness-raising campaigns to combat the commercial sexual exploitation of children in Latin America. (69) Administered in Chile by the National Tourism Service, conducts child labor prevention and awareness-raising campaigns in the tourism sector. (6) In 2017, trained 41 tour operators and travel agencies and 133 hotels and lodging providers. (52)
SENAME Programs for Children at Risk of or Engaged in the Worst Forms of Child Labor†	Approximately 132 programs serving disadvantaged youth and children at risk of or engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation. Includes projects implemented along with municipal governments and involves local branches of the Office for the Protection of Children's Rights (OPCR). (1; 7; 50; 44) In 2017, added 105 local branches of the OPCR bringing the total to 231 branches. (52)
Here I am and I act ( Aquí Estoy y Actúo )	Led by Fundacion Telefonica and the MINTRAB under the fifth principle of the UN Global Pact to help businesses contribute to the eradication of child labor in supply chains. Adopted by 17 businesses, this program feeds into the National Strategy for the Eradication of Child Labor. (70; 71) In 2017, trained employers in Maule and Metropolitan regions on child labor and adolescent work and conducted a working group to apply a child labor diagnostic tool to government contractors. (72)
Programs on Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children (CSEC)†	Administered by the SENAME, includes 18 programs, one of which was opened in 2017, and 1 residential center to serve victims of CSEC. (50) The Child Labor Survey on CSEC is a collaboration of the government and ILO to collect data on CSEC from police and other governmental agencies. (5; 6) In 2017, assisted 1,350 victims, opened an additional program for child and adolescents in Punta Arenas, and continued its social media campaign "There is No Excuse." (52)

Program	Description
Indigenous Language Sector Program ( Sector de la Lengua Indígena )†	Ministry of Education program that seeks to increase the quality of education available to indigenous children. (73) In 2017, the Ministry of Education finalized seventh and eighth grade study programs for the indigenous languages Aymara , Quechua , Rapa Nui , and Mapuzugun and developed a plan with UNESCO to revitalize Rapa Nui language and culture. (52)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Chile.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (7; 44; 74; 75; 76; 77)

In 2017, the government funded a study in collaboration with the ILO to collect data on child labor among migrant communities in Arica and Parinacota, Tarapacá, Antofagasta, and Santiago. (14) This study explored cultural attitudes towards child labor and their influence on the early incorporation of children into the labor market. (12)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Chile (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Criminally prohibit forced labor.	2016 – 2017
Enforcement	Ensure that inspectors receive adequate resources, such as vehicles, to carry out their duties.	2016 – 2017
	Strengthen the Labor Inspectorate by initiating targeted inspections based on analysis of data related to risk-prone sectors and patterns of serious incidents.	2015 – 2017
	Publish information on the number of child labor violations for which penalties were collected.	2015 – 2017
	Ensure that penalties for promoting or facilitating the commercial sexual exploitation of children are commensurate with those for other serious crimes.	2016 – 2017

Colombia

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

In 2017, Colombia made a significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government approved the National Policy to Prevent and Eliminate Child Labor and Protect the Young Worker and a roadmap to prevent and eliminate child labor in mining. The government also updated its list of hazardous occupations for children, piloted the Model for Identification of Child Labor Risks, and devoted additional resources to its Labor Inspectorate. Under the peace accord signed with the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia, the government reintegrated over 130 recovered child soldiers in 2017. In addition, the government raised awareness of commercial sexual exploitation of children among indigenous communities and issued guidance to labor inspectors, including by providing strategies and protocols related to child labor prevention and detection. However, children in Colombia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and illicit activities, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Additionally, the government does not employ a sufficient number of labor inspectors.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Colombia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and illicit activities, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1; 2) The government publishes annual statistics on children's work from its National Household Survey. (3) However, activities and ages are not sufficiently specified in this data to determine child labor rates. (3; 4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Colombia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	4.2 (356,867)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	94.4
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	4.5
Primary Completion Rate (%)		101.4

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (5)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Gran Encuesta Integrada de Hogares, Módulo de Trabajo Infantil (GEIH-MTI), 2016. (6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of coffee,† sugarcane,† and unrefined brown sugar (panela)† (7; 8; 9)
	Animal husbandry,† hunting,† and fishing,† activities unknown (10; 11; 9)
Industry	Mining coal,† emeralds,† gold,† tungsten,† coltan,† and clay† (12; 13; 14; 15; 9)
	Producing bricks† (15)
	Construction,† activities unknown (16)
	Cutting and transporting lumber,† and creating artisanal woodwork such as handicrafts and decorative items (17; 11)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Street work,† including vending and helping shoppers carry bags in urban markets,† begging,† guarding or washing cars and motorcycles,† and selling massages and hair-braiding to tourists in beach areas (1; 7; 18; 19; 20; 21; 22; 23; 18; 22)
	Recycling† and garbage scavenging† (1; 24; 21)
	Domestic work,† including caring for children,† cooking, gardening, and shopping for the home (7; 14; 25; 9)
	Working in retail establishments, hotels, and restaurants, activities unknown (10; 3; 9)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (7; 18; 26; 27; 28; 29; 30)
	Use in the production of pornography (1; 7; 26)
	Recruitment of children by illegal armed groups for use in armed conflict to perform intelligence and logistical activities, store and transport weapons, and engage in commercial sexual exploitation (7; 31)
	Use in illicit activities, including in forced begging, by illegal armed groups and criminal organizations to commit homicides and traffic drugs, and in the production of marijuana, poppies, and coca (stimulant plant), sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1; 7; 19; 32; 33; 2; 9)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Commercial sexual exploitation of children occurs more often in private homes rented online than in commercial establishments. (9) In Bucaramanga, child victims of commercial sexual exploitation are allegedly recruited in schools by other students. (34) In mining areas, trafficking of children for forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation is widespread. (35) In Cartagena, children are forced by illegal armed groups and criminal organizations to commit homicides. (36)

The government reports that the recruitment and use of children by illegal armed groups has declined by 60 percent since the government and the FARC signed a peace accord in 2016. However, the National Liberation Army, Popular Liberation Army, and non-ideological criminal organizations such as the Gulf Clan continued to recruit children in 2017. (9)

In Colombia, impassable routes, long distances between children’s homes and schools in rural areas, and continued violence and insecurity in parts of the country hinder access to education. (9) Indigenous and Afro-Colombian children in particular face difficulties in accessing education and experience higher school dropout rates. (7; 37; 38) In several communities, classes were interrupted, sometimes for weeks at a time, because of illegal armed group activity in those areas. (38) Between April and June of 2017, at least 1,900 children were affected by violent attacks on schools. (39) The government’s National Education Policy provides for access to the education system for all children residing in Colombia; however, some children of Venezuelan migrants faced challenges accessing education, although the extent of the problem was unknown. (4) In 2017, the Ministry of Education and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs’ agency for migration jointly issued a circular to facilitate these children’s enrollment in school, regardless of their residency or citizenship status. (9; 40) However, it is unknown whether this circular is being properly carried out in practice. (9)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Colombia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

The government's laws and regulations are in line with relevant international standards (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 35 of the Code on Childhood and Adolescence (41)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 117 of the Code on Childhood and Adolescence (41)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 3, Resolution 1796 (42)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 17 of the Constitution; Articles 141 and 188A of the Penal Code; Article 5 of Resolution 3597 (43; 44; 45)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 17 of the Constitution; Articles 188A–188C of the Penal Code; Article 5 of Resolution 3597 (43; 44; 45)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 213–219B of the Penal Code (45)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 162, 188D, and 384 of the Penal Code; Article 2 of Resolution 3597 (43; 45)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment
State Compulsory	Yes	18	Article 13 of Law 418; Article 2 of Law 548 (46; 47)
State Voluntary	Yes	18	Article 13 of Law 418; Article 2 of Law 548 (46; 47)
Non-state	Yes	18	Article 162 of Law 599; Article 20 of Law 1098; Article 14 of Law 418 (41; 45; 46)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	18	Decision C-376/10 of the Colombian Constitutional Court (48)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 1 of Decree 4807 (49)

In 2018, the Ministry of Labor (MOL) issued a Resolution updating its list of hazardous occupations prohibited for children, including by capping domestic work by children in the child's own home at 15 hours a week. (42) Colombian law also provides that children ages 15 to 17 may work if they have official authorization. The Resolution states that authorization for these children to work may be revoked if minimum guarantees protecting health, social security, education, and acceptable work conditions are not met. (42)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor's (MOL) Inspection, Monitoring, Control, and Territorial Management Department	Receive complaints of labor law violations and conduct labor inspections, including inspections to verify labor conditions for adolescent workers and compliance with other child labor provisions. Oversee the Internal Working Group on Child Labor Eradication. (50) Operate the Integrated Registration and Information System for Child Labor (SIRITI), a child labor monitoring system that identifies children engaged in or at risk of child labor. (1; 51) In 2017, the government provided training on SIRITI, reaching 10 departments, 122 municipalities, and 342 trainees. (52)
National Police	Investigate cases of commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking. (51)
Attorney General's Office	Investigate and prosecute cases of child recruitment for armed conflict, commercial sexual exploitation, forced labor, and human trafficking. (1; 41) Oversee the Articulation Group for Combating Trafficking in Persons, which includes four prosecutors that focus on investigating and prosecuting cross-border human trafficking and other related crimes. (53)
National Training Service (SENA)	Collect fines imposed by the MOL for labor law violations. (54)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Colombia took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MOL that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including human resource allocation and labor inspector training.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

† Data are from January 2016 to October 2016.

‡ Data are from January 2017 to October 2017.

In 2018, the Governments of the United States and Colombia signed an agreement to each contribute $2 million or its equivalent to strengthen the capacity of the Colombian MOL to address labor informality and enforce labor laws. (57) In 2017, the MOL increased its training budget for labor inspectors and implemented an electronic case management system in all its 35 offices, including 33 regional offices and 2 special administrative offices. (56) The MOL also issued a proposed inspection plan that focuses on sectors in which children are vulnerable to child labor and includes child labor prevention strategies. (9)

While the government reported it had sufficient resources and supplies to conduct its work, reports indicate that resource allocation for labor law enforcement in rural areas such as Amazonas and Vichada was insufficient. (7; 55) In some cases, inspectors carried out inspections in only a small geographic area of the department due to a lack of transportation to reach areas that may be accessible only by boats or small planes. (1) Because certain legal restrictions are placed on conducting unannounced inspections, this type of inspection may be conducted infrequently in practice. (9) Because inspectors must obtain prior approval from the Attorney General's Office and be accompanied by judicial police officers to inspect certain kinds of private property, conducting inspections in private homes, farms, and brothels is sometimes difficult. (55) Out of the 247 child labor violations found in 2017, it is unknown how many resulted from labor inspections and how many children received social services. (9)

According to the ILO technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Colombia should employ about 1,645 inspectors. (7; 58) In 2017, high turnover of labor inspectors continued to be a problem due, in part, to the provisional nature of the appointments by which many labor inspectors hold their positions. In Colombia, labor inspectors are not considered full civil servants until they are hired through a state-provided civil service exam, which occurs infrequently. (9) In early 2018, the government administered the civil service exam with the aim of converting non-career labor inspector positions to career civil servant positions. (56)

Colombia

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Despite the requirement that children between the ages of 15 and 17 obtain official authorization to work, many adolescents work without such authorization. (59) In 2017, as a result of 2,111 inspections of worksites where children had been legally authorized to work, the government revoked 121 such authorizations, resulting in the removal of 121 children from the worksites. (9)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Colombia took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including resource allocation.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Training for Investigators
Initial Training for New Employees	Unknown	Unknown
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A	Yes (9)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (7)	Yes (9)
Number of Investigations	2,240 (7)	Unknown
Number of Violations Found	Unknown	Unknown
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	374 (7)	359 (9)
Number of Convictions	258 (7)	206 (55)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (7)	Yes (9)

In 2017, the Attorney General's Office received 2,697 complaints concerning the worst forms of child labor, mostly related to commercial sexual exploitation and illicit activities, although it is unknown how many of them were investigated or resulted in violations. (9) The National Police and the Colombian Institute for Family Well-Being (ICBF) conducted an awareness-raising campaign in indigenous communities, including in Mocagua, Amazonas, to combat commercial sexual exploitation of children. (60) Between January and November, ICBF provided social services to 281 child victims of commercial sexual exploitation and sexual violence through its Administrative Process for Reestablishing Rights (PARD). (9)

ICBF removed 60 children from situations of commercial sexual exploitation in the course of four criminal law enforcement operations in designated areas where prostitution is legal in La Guajira, Atlantico, and Bogota. (9) Despite these efforts, the government noted that insufficient resources hampered its capacity to enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (7)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the activities of the Inter-sectorial Commission for the Prevention of the Recruitment and Use of Children by Illegal Armed Groups and the Work Group to Assess Acceptable Activities for Adolescent Work in Coffee, Cotton, Sugar, and Rice.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
Interagency Committee for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (CIETI)	Coordinate efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor. Chaired by the MOL, includes 13 government agencies and representatives from trade unions, business associations, and civil society organizations. (7) Oversee 32 department-level CIETIs throughout the country, each comprising municipal-level committees. (61) In 2017, the government took actions to reform the CIETI's structure by updating the entities and sectors that should be represented in the committees, detailing their roles and responsibilities, and defining the guidelines for operation at national and local levels. (62)

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
Colombian Institute for Family Well-Being (ICBF)	Operate 40 mobile units to coordinate government actions to protect children's rights, including child labor. Support demobilized child soldiers by strengthening family networks and increasing access to health services, food, education, and shelter. (17) Serve as Administrator of the Fund Against Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents. (63) Process child labor complaints, operate hotlines to report child labor cases, and provide social services to children engaged in or at risk of child labor. (1; 64; 65) Between January and August 2017, provided services to 209 children registered as victims of commercial sexual exploitation. (66)
ICBF's National System of Family Well-Being	Promote interagency coordination to protect children's rights, including rights related to child labor. (7) Design, implement, monitor, and evaluate policies that affect children from early childhood to adolescence. Comprises the offices of the President and Vice President, 15 government ministries, and other government agencies. In 2017, reviewed the first draft of the Childhood and Adolescence Policy and provided capacity-building activities to 531 government officials. (62; 9)
National Interagency Committee for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Commercial Sexual Exploitation	Coordinate and implement efforts to combat the commercial sexual exploitation of children. Led by the MOL, comprises 15 government agencies. (7) In 2017, met to discuss the formulation of the Public Policy for the Prevention and Eradication of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents. (55)
Interagency Committee to Combat Trafficking in Persons ( Comité Interinstitucional de Lucha Contra la Trata de Personas )	Lead and coordinate efforts among government agencies to combat human trafficking. Created by Law 985 and chaired by the Ministry of the Interior, comprises 16 government entities and 6 permanent invitees, including private sector and international organizations. (1) In 2017, conducted 45 technical advisory meetings with departmental, municipal, and district committees to improve coordination, make recommendations to prepare territorial action plans, and follow up on any reported cases of human trafficking. (4)
Inter-sectorial Commission for the Prevention of the Recruitment and Use of Children by Illegal Armed Groups (CIPRUNA)	Coordinate efforts to prevent child recruitment by illegal armed groups, including for the purposes of commercial sexual exploitation. Created by Law 552 and led by the High Commissioner for Post-Conflict, Human Rights and Security, comprises 23 entities, with the Attorney General's Office and the MOL as permanent members. (67; 68) Whether this Committee met in 2017 is unknown.
Work Group to Assess Acceptable Activities for Adolescent Work in Coffee, Cotton, Sugar, and Rice	Coordinate with universities to research and assess the types of activities that adolescents may be authorized to perform in the coffee, cotton, sugar, and rice sectors. Created in 2014, comprises the UN Food and Agriculture Organization, the ILO, Department of National Planning, National Department of Statistics, Ministry of Agriculture, Ministry of Health, and the MOL. (61) Whether this Work Group met in 2017 is unknown.
National Reintegration Council	Supervise the reintegration of FARC members, including children, and the preparation of a socioeconomic survey of former FARC combatants. (69) Established on December 20, 2016, pursuant to the Peace Accord. (70) In 2017, met almost weekly and established working groups on gender, health, land, and productive projects. (69)

To address child labor in the mining sector, the Ministry of Mines and ICBF signed a cooperative agreement and the government developed a Roadmap for the Prevention and Elimination of Child Labor in Mining. (71; 72) Under this agreement, the government assisted 106 families, including 210 children at risk of child labor. (9) In addition, under the Regional Initiative Latin America and the Caribbean Free of Child Labor, the MOL Municipality of Cali and Government of Valle del Cauca Department held an event convening 120 participants from universities, the private sector, civil society, and labor unions to discuss the role of the private sector in preventing child labor. (9)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor‡

Policy	Description
National Policy to Prevent and Eliminate Child Labor and Protect the Young Worker (2017–2027)†	Aims to focus agricultural policy on child labor eradication, develop child labor prevention strategies, improve the quality and coverage of social mobility and child protection services for vulnerable children, protect adolescent workers from hazardous work, create strategies to address child labor in domestic work, strengthen institutions to improve attention on children at risk for child labor, and establish evaluation and monitoring mechanisms to assess progress of public policies. (73)

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Policy	Description
Child Labor Pact (2014–2018)	Aims to revise policies on the prevention and eradication of child labor and include them in national strategies; improve coordination among the MOL and other government agencies, the ILO, and industry associations; raise awareness of child labor issues in capital cities and tourist destinations; and train department-level officials on laws related to child labor and services available to victims. (61) In 2017, carried out a national campaign against child labor in mining. (74)
National Strategy for the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons (2016–2018)	Aims to prevent human trafficking by raising awareness to detect potential victims, provide immediate assistance to victims, promote inter-institutional collaboration, strengthen and develop international cooperation mechanisms, and develop a data-gathering mechanism. (75) Established by Decree No. 1036 in 2016 and led by the Interagency Committee to Combat Trafficking in Persons. (76) In 2017, in partnership with the UNODC, conducted nine regional workshops to strengthen the investigation and prosecution of human trafficking crimes, training 125 prosecutors and judicial police officers. (9) Prosecutors and delegates related to the departmental or municipal Committees to Combat Trafficking in Persons received training on human trafficking in Arauca, Bogota, Caldas, and Barranquilla. (9)
Final Agreement to End the Armed Conflict and Build a Stable and Lasting Peace	Establishes the National Reincorporation Council to oversee the demobilization and release of minors from the FARC's ranks. The government and FARC agreed to conduct a child labor eradication campaign, take immediate measures to eliminate the worst forms of child labor, strengthen on-site labor inspections, create a mobile inspection unit to reach rural areas, and increase access to education. (7; 76). In 2017, reintegrated 130 former child soldiers and the mobile inspection unit conducted six outreach fairs in rural areas. (4)
Roadmap for the Prevention and Elimination of Child Labor in Mining†	Aims to reduce and eliminate child labor in mining through the following activities: (1) create municipal diagnostics, (2) define criteria to determine risks of child labor, (3) create mechanisms to focus municipal governments on addressing child labor, (4) create protocols and questionnaires to report child labor cases, (5) design strategies to strengthen coordination of child labor monitoring at the municipal level, and (6) design strategies to prevent and remove children from child labor. (72)
National Policy to Prevent the Recruitment of Children and Adolescents by Illegal Armed Groups	Directs actions to prevent the recruitment and use of children by illegal armed groups. Aims to address violence against children, including the worst forms of child labor, and improve interagency coordination. (77)
National Development Plan ( Todos por un Nuevo País ) (2014–2018)	Outlines Colombia's strategy to promote inclusive economic growth and national development. Seeks to improve access to quality education, lengthen the school day to 7 hours, and provide preschool for children under age 5. (78)
Cooperative Agreement Between the Ministry of Mining and Energy and the ICBF to Prevent Child Labor in Mining†	Aims to strengthen and implement policies and directives to prevent and eradicate child labor in mining. (71; 79)
Roadmap for the Restoration of Rights, Assistance, and Reparation for Children and Adolescent Victims of the Armed Conflict	Establishes the protocols for assisting child victims of the armed conflict. Approved in 2016 and implemented through inter-institutional mechanisms and technical assistance in various departments in 2017. (9; 80)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (7; 61; 81; 82; 83)

In 2017, the ICBF presented a draft of the National Policy for Children and Adolescents to relevant government entities working on child protection issues and established nine working groups to gather information to develop the Public Policy for the Prevention and Eradication of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents. (62; 55) At the IV Global Conference on the Sustained Eradication of Child Labor held in Buenos Aires, Argentina, the government pledged to develop local-level strategies to address the needs of children vulnerable to child labor within the framework of the National Policy to Prevent and Eliminate Child Labor and Protect the Young Worker. (84)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, which cover the main sectors where child labor has been identified in the country (Table 10).

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor†

Program	Description
Child Labor in Mining Prevention Program ( Prevenir es Mejor )†	Secretariat of Mining and Office of Infancy, Adolescence, and Youth program in Antioquia that provided 438 children with life skills training, legal and psychological support, and recreational activities to prevent and eradicate child labor in the mining sector. (85)
Projects Addressing Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children†	Eyes Everywhere ( Ojos en Todas Partes ), a public awareness campaign, aims to prevent the commercial sexual exploitation of children in the tourism sector. Led by the Ministry of Commerce, Industry, and Tourism, and implemented in coordination with the ICBF and the National Tourism Fund. (1; 86) Sexual Violence – The Importance of the First 72 Hours campaign to train psychosocial teams and other service providers on how to conduct investigations into the commercial sexual exploitation of children and provide assistance to victims. In 2017, the government launched “We Protect,” a web-based tool to collect, monitor, and address complaints of commercial sexual exploitation of children. (87) The government, private sector, and civil society also organized an event to promote the treatment of “child pornography” as “sexual exploitation of children.” (88; 87; 89) In 2017, the project I Am the Wall! ( La Muralla Soy Yo! ) created an award to recognize efforts in combatting the commercial sexual exploitation of children in tourism. (90; 91)
Model for Identification of Child Labor Risks*	Pilot project led by the ILO’s Regional Initiative: Latin America and the Caribbean Free of Child Labor. Aims to design a system that classifies territories according to their probability of risk for child labor and identifies the principal factors associated with this risk based on existing databases in participating countries. (92) Participating countries include Argentina, Brazil, Colombia, Costa Rica, Jamaica, Mexico, and Peru. (92)
Projects Addressing Trafficking in Persons	Eye on Trafficking† aims to increase awareness of human trafficking among high school students; School Environments in Coexistence and Peace† focuses on identifying potential trafficking victims; and The Butterflies, a comic book released by Women’s Link Worldwide, Renacer Foundation, and UNODC, aims to raise awareness about human trafficking among children and adolescents. (7) In 2017, the city of Bogota launched a campaign to raise awareness of trafficking. (93) The Ministry of Foreign Affairs implemented the campaign Do not Ignore Trafficking ( #AnteLaTrataNoSeHaga ), directed at border populations with limited access to digital platforms. (94)
Development for Social Prosperity Programs†	More Families in Action ( Más Familias en Acción ) uses a conditional cash transfer program seeking to combat poverty and build human capital; United Network (Red Unidos), coordinates actions to reduce inequality and end extreme poverty; Healthy Generations ( Generaciones con Bienestar ) operates a children’s rights program offering cultural and recreational activities for children ages 6 to 17 identified as vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor; and Youth in Action ( Jóvenes en Acción ) provides technical job training and conditional cash transfer for vulnerable urban youth ages 16 to 24. (95; 96; 97; 98; 99; 100; 101)
Mobile Teams for Comprehensive Protection – Child Labor (EMPI)†	Led by ICBF, assists families with children vulnerable to child labor by linking them to the National System of Family Well-Being. (7) Under this program, ICBF has 21 operators offering specialized attention and 39 mobile teams that include 114 psychosocial professional staff to promote the restitution of rights to vulnerable children. (102) In 2017, provided specialized care to 3,444 children engaged in or at risk of child labor through 117 professionals. (9)
Public-Private Partnerships†	Colombia Network Against Child Labor ( Red Colombia Contra el Trabajo Infantil ), a public-private partnership that builds on the UN Global Pact Initiative to create collaboration between Colombian businesses and the MOL to eliminate child labor. (103; 104; 105) In 2017, taught a seminar to create awareness of child labor to 216 participants. (52) Collaborative Agreements ( Acuerdos de Colaboración ), an agreement between the Governments of Colombia and Guatemala to share initiatives and set a common agenda to eradicate child labor. In 2017, produced a virtual training on SIRITI to train Guatemalan delegates. (52)
INGRUMA Indigenous Training Center	Funded by USAID to provide specialized services to indigenous youth who have been victims of child soldiering. (106; 107)
Differential Path to Life Program	Office of Presidential Counselor for Human Rights and the ICBF managed program, with support from USAID and other international organizations, that establishes a reintegration process for disengaged FARC minors. Successfully reintegrated over 130 former child soldiers in 2017. (108; 69)
I Stay at School, Protecting My Dreams†	Ministry of Education led program, provides strategies for teachers to prevent school desertion due to the worst forms of child labor, including forced recruitment, the use of children to conduct illicit activities, and other forms of child exploitation by illegal non-state armed groups. In 2017, trained more than 200 teachers. (9)

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Program	Description
USDOL-Funded projects	Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement (MAP 16) Project on Child Labor and Forced Labor addresses knowledge gaps on child labor, forced labor, and human trafficking through research and development of survey methodologies, improving awareness of these issues by using data-driven techniques, strengthening policies and capacities of governments and other stakeholders to combat these issues, and supporting coordinated action to eradicate child labor, forced labor, and human trafficking; Promoting Compliance with International Labor Standards strengthens the institutional capacity of the MOL to adequately enforce Colombian labor laws and promote social dialogue among organizations and their stakeholders; and We Are a Treasure (Somos Tesoro), $9 million USDOL-funded, 4 year project to combat child labor and promote safe work in the mining sector. Implemented by PACT, Inc., in partnership with the Alliance for Responsible Mining, Mi Sangre Foundation, and the Fund for Environmental Action and Childhood. (109; 110; 111) In 2017, in partnership with the government piloted the Comprehensive Route of Territorial Management for the Prevention and Elimination of Child Labor in Mining in eight municipalities. (112) (62; 113) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
Campaigns Against Child Labor†	ICBF-led campaigns to implement protocols to increase coordination among the ICBF, Child Protection Police, the MOL, and municipal authorities on child labor issues, and promote education about the risks of hazardous work. (55) In 2017, implemented 249 campaigns in capital cities nationwide, reaching 1,403 children and 1,285 families. (9; 55)
Campaigns to Address Child Labor in Street Work and Recycling	Government-led campaigns that during the first three months of 2017 served 1,371 children who were engaged in street work and recycling in Kennedy, Ciudad, Bolivar, Suba, Bosa and Engativa. (21; 7) In 2017, the Secretariat of Social Inclusion, National Police, and ICBF removed children working on the streets of Medellin. (114)
Anti-trafficking hotline	Ministry of Interior-led hotline that reports and tracks cases of human trafficking and facilitates access to social services for victims. (115)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Colombia.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (116; 117; 118; 119; 120; 121; 9)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Colombia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure that all labor inspectors have sufficient resources to perform inspections.	2009 – 2017
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2009 – 2017
	Publish information on labor law enforcement efforts, including the total number of labor inspectors and penalties imposed that were collected for child labor violations.	2009 – 2017
	Ensure that all adolescents who work in allowed sectors have received official authorization.	2015 – 2017
	Publish information on the number of violations found related to the worst forms of child labor and initial training for new labor inspectors and criminal investigators.	2014 – 2017
	Provide sufficient resources to criminal law enforcement officials to enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor.	2014 – 2017
Coordination	Ensure that information is exchanged among coordinating bodies at the national and regional levels.	2012 – 2017
Social Programs	Ensure that children are protected from armed conflict while at school.	2013 – 2017
	Expand efforts to improve access to education for all children, particularly for indigenous and Afro-Colombian children, including by improving transportation infrastructure, and building more schools in rural areas.	2013 – 2017
	Collect data on work activities and ages of workers as part of National Household Survey questionnaires to allow for a determination of child labor rates.	2017

Comoros

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2017, Comoros made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government amended the Strategy for Accelerated Growth and Sustainable Development to include activities to combat child labor, including updating the draft National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor and conducting a quantitative survey on child labor. However, children in Comoros engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. A gap between the minimum age for work and the age for compulsory education leaves children ages 13 to 15 vulnerable to child labor. In addition, social programs to combat child labor are insufficient to adequately address the extent of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Comoros engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (1; 2; 3; 4; 5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Comoros.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	23.0 (42,145)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	81.5
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	20.8
Primary Completion Rate (%)		77.7

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2014, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (6)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Demographic and Health Survey (DHS), 2012. (7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of manioc,† beans,† vanilla,† cloves,† and ylang-ylang† (8)
	Animal husbandry† (4)
	Fishing† (3; 9; 4; 10)
Industry	Construction,† including in carpentry† (4)
	Extracting and selling marine sand† (8)
Services	Domestic work† (1; 2; 9; 11; 12; 4)
	Street vending (13; 3; 4)
	Repairing cars† and bicycles,† including tire vulcanization† and battery charging† (4)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in domestic work, street vending, baking, fishing, and agriculture (8; 14; 10; 5)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2; 5)

† Determined hazardous by national law or regulation.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Some parents who are unable to care for their children send them to wealthier families that are expected to provide food, shelter, and schooling to the children in exchange for housework. In practice, some of these children receive care and an education, while many become domestic workers and are victims of labor exploitation and abuse. (3; 8; 4; 15; 5) In Comoros, it is a traditional practice to send children to Koranic teachers to receive an education. Some Koranic teachers, however, force their students to work; girls usually perform domestic work and boys perform agricultural labor. (8; 10; 15; 4; 5) In nearby Mayotte, which is administered by France, reports indicate that there are over 3,000 unaccompanied children from Comoros, some of whom are exploited in the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation and forced domestic work. (16; 5)

Although the Constitution guarantees free compulsory primary education, this provision is not adequately enforced, and many children, especially girls, do not attend school. (8) Also, the lack of school infrastructure and the limited availability of teachers impede access to education, which may increase the vulnerability of children to the worst forms of child labor. (1; 8; 9; 12)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Comoros has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Comoros' legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including with the minimum age for work and the compulsory education age.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	15	Article 129 of the Labor Code (17)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

The government has drafted a Penal Code and a Code of Criminal Procedures that increase the penalties for human trafficking crimes and has submitted a proposal to ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons; however, neither of these legislative proposals were enacted during the reporting period. (25; 16; 26)

The Labor Code allows children under the minimum age to perform light work in domestic work or agriculture as long as it does not interfere with education or physical or moral development. (17) The Labor Code, however, does not specify the conditions under which light work may be conducted or limit the number of hours for light work, as defined by international standards on child labor. (27) In addition, the Labor Code applies only to workers who perform work under a formal employment agreement, which does not conform to international standards that require all children to be protected under the law establishing a minimum age for work. (3; 27)

Children in Comoros are required to attend school only up to age 12. This standard makes children ages 13 through 15 vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor because they are not required to attend school but are not legally permitted to work. (28)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established relevant institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Enforce child labor laws, investigate allegations of child labor, and refer cases of the worst forms of child labor for criminal investigation. (8; 4; 5)
Police Morals and Minors Brigade	Investigate allegations of child abuse, including child trafficking, and refer cases for prosecution. (4; 5; 29) Operates nationwide covering the islands of Grande Comore, Anjouan, and Mohéli. (29)
Ministry of Justice (MOJ)	Prosecute criminal cases, including those related to child trafficking. (16; 4)
National Commission for Human Rights and Freedoms (CNDHL)	Receive complaints of the worst forms of child labor, investigate violations, and refer cases to the MOJ for prosecution. (13; 30)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Comoros took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including with financial and human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown	Unknown

Unannounced Inspections Conducted	No (14)	No (14; 4)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (31)	Yes (31)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Unknown	Unknown

In 2017, the Ministry of Labor employed four labor inspectors: two in Grand Comore, one for Anjouan, and one for Mohéli. (13; 4) The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Comoros' workforce, which includes approximately 278,500 workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Comoros would employ about 7 inspectors. (14; 32; 33; 34) Reports indicate there is a lack of training, equipment, transportation, and funding available to conduct child labor inspections and legal proceedings. (8; 4; 35; 5; 25)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Comoros took actions to combat child labor (Table 7).

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Training for Investigators
Initial Training for New Employees	No (13)	No (4)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A	N/A (4)
Refresher Courses Provided	No (13)	No (4)
Number of Investigations	0 (13; 16)	Unknown (4)
Number of Violations Found	0 (13)	Unknown (4)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	0 (13; 16)	Unknown (4)
Number of Convictions	0 (13; 16)	Unknown (4)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	No (3)	No (4)

Reports indicate that a lack of trained staff, equipment, transportation, and funding inhibit criminal law enforcement efforts on the worst forms of child labor. (1; 3; 5; 4; 29) Police are unable to open an investigation unless the victim self-reports the alleged crime at the police station and can pay the expenses associated with the investigation, including fuel and telephone fees; therefore, investigations are reactive and depend on the victim's wealth and knowledge of the criminal justice system, making investigations of cases involving victimized children unlikely. (3; 25)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including with efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
National Committee against Child Labor	Coordinate government efforts on child labor. Chaired by the Ministry of Labor. (12; 27; 4)
Monitoring Group for the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons	Coordinate actions against human trafficking and implement the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Action Plan. Headed by the Secretary General of the Government and includes representatives from the MOL, MOJ, CNDHL, and police. (3; 4; 5; 29)

The National Committee against Child Labor and the Monitoring Group for the Fight against Trafficking in Persons were inactive and did not receive funding during the reporting period. (4; 31; 25)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including with funding and implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Policy for the Protection of Children (2016–2021)	Aims to improve child protection in Comoros; includes components to combat the worst forms of child labor, with a focus on child trafficking. Led by the Ministry of Health, Solidarity, Social Cohesion and Gender. (4; 5; 12) In 2017, distributed copies of child protection laws to judicial authorities and trained police authorities on child protection. (36)
Strategy for Accelerated Growth and Sustainable Development (2015–2019)	Aims to reduce poverty, promote sustainable development, and increase access to social services. Integrates strategies that target child labor. (26; 37) In December 2017, the Strategy was amended to include activities to combat child labor, including updating the draft National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor and conducting a quantitative survey on child labor. (4)

In 2017, the government did not adopt the draft National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor. (4)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including funding and adequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Child Protection Units†	Government program that provides social and reintegration services to vulnerable and sexually abused children. Comprises three government-operated units on the islands of Anjouan, Grande Comore, and Mohéli. (3; 26)
Decent Work Country Program (2015–2019)	Program that aims to guarantee labor rights and extend social protection programs for vulnerable populations, including by improving the operational environment for the elimination of child labor and its worst forms. (11) Overseen by the MOL and supported by the ILO. In 2017, provided vocational services to improve decent work for 50 youth. (38)
UNICEF Country Program (2015–2019)	$20,885 UNICEF-funded program that supports the government’s efforts to strengthen children’s rights to survival, development, education, protection, and social inclusion. (1; 26) In 2017, continued to fund shelters for victims of the worst forms of child labor operated by the Service d’Ecoute . (4; 25)

† Program is funded by the Government of Comoros.

Although the government has programs that target child labor in place, their scope is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, particularly in agriculture, domestic work, and commercial sexual exploitation of children. (16; 5; 29; 25) Comoros also lacks a specific program to assist children exploited by religious instructors.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Comoros (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2014 – 2017
	Ensure that the law’s light work provisions prescribe the number of hours per week that light work may be undertaken, and specify the conditions under which light work may be conducted, as defined by international standards on child labor.	2012 – 2017
	Ensure that the law’s minimum age provisions and protections apply to children in unpaid or non-contractual work.	2015 – 2017
	Raise the compulsory education age to 15 to be equivalent to the minimum age for work.	2009 – 2017

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Carry out criminal investigations to enforce compliance with the laws that address child labor.	2009 – 2017
	Increase the resources, training, available transportation and equipment, and number of criminal law investigators and labor inspectors responsible for enforcing laws on child labor to provide adequate coverage of the workforce.	2009 – 2017
	Publish information on the Labor Inspectorate's funding, the number of criminal law investigations, violations found, prosecutions initiated, and convictions related to cases of the worst forms of child labor.	2009 – 2017
	Strengthen the Labor Inspectorate by initiating routine inspections rather than performing inspections based solely on complaints received, and by conducting unannounced inspections.	2017
	Establish referral mechanisms between labor and criminal law enforcement agencies and social welfare entities.	2014 – 2017
Coordination	Ensure that the National Committee Against Child Labor and the Monitoring Group for the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons are active and receive adequate funding to fulfill their mission.	2014 – 2017
Government Policies	Adopt the draft National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor.	2016 – 2017
Social Programs	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children, including girls, by increasing school infrastructure and teacher availability.	2014 – 2017
	Expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem, particularly in agriculture, domestic work, and commercial sexual exploitation.	2009 – 2017
	Implement a program to assist children exploited by religious instructors.	2016 – 2017

Congo, Democratic Republic of the

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2017, the Democratic Republic of the Congo made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the year, the government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo adopted a revised Mining Code which includes penalties for employing child laborers or selling ore mined with child labor. The government also separated as many as 2,360 children from armed groups, and the Armed Forces of the Democratic Republic of the Congo was removed from the UN's list of state armed forces that use child soldiers. However, the Democratic Republic of the Congo is receiving this assessment because it continued a practice that delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor. For at least the second year in a row, labor inspectors failed to conduct any worksite inspections. Labor inspections are a key tool for identifying child labor violations, and their absence makes children more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. Furthermore, there were numerous reports of ongoing collaboration between members of the Armed Forces of the Democratic Republic of the Congo and non-state armed groups known for recruiting children, and the Armed Forces carried out extrajudicial killings of civilians, including children, due to their perceived support or affiliation with non-state armed groups. Children in the Democratic Republic of the Congo engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in the forced mining of gold, tin ore (cassiterite), tantalum ore (coltan), and tungsten ore (wolframite), and are used in armed conflict, sometimes as a result of forcible recruitment or abduction by non-state armed groups. Other gaps remain, including a lack of trained enforcement personnel, financial resources, poor coordination of government efforts to combat child labor, and laws mandating free primary education are not enforced.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in the forced mining of gold, tin ore (cassiterite), tantalum ore (coltan), and tungsten ore (wolframite), and are used in armed conflict, sometimes as a result of forcible recruitment or abduction by non-state armed groups. (1; 2; 3; 4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in the DRC.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Herding and raising livestock such as chickens, goats, and pigs, including feeding, cleaning cages or stalls, and disposing of waste (8; 13; 10) Hunting (7; 13)
Industry	Mining, † including carrying heavy loads, † cleaning, digging, sifting, sorting, transporting, using explosives, washing, and working underground † in the production of diamonds, copper, cobalt ore (heterogenite), gold, tin ore (cassiterite), tantalum ore (coltan), and tungsten ore (wolframite) (1; 2; 7; 14; 15; 16; 11; 17; 18; 19) Working as auto mechanics and in carpentry and craft workshops (7) Working on construction sites and road construction (7)
Services	Domestic work (7; 11) Driving motorcycle taxis (9) Street work, including vending, garbage scavenging, and carrying heavy loads (7; 8; 20)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor ‡	Forced mining of gold, cassiterite, coltan, and wolframite, sometimes as a result of debt bondage (1; 21; 19; 4) Forced domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1; 7; 22; 15; 18; 23; 19; 24; 4; 25) Use in illicit activities, including for spying, carrying stolen goods, and smuggling minerals (15; 26; 27; 4) Forced recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict, including as checkpoint monitors, combatants, concubines, domestic workers, field hands, human shields, looters, porters, spies, and tax collectors at mining sites (23; 27; 19; 28; 29; 30; 31; 32; 33)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

In 2017, the Armed Forces of the Democratic Republic of the Congo (FARDC) were removed from the UN’s list of state armed forces that use child soldiers. (34) However, the UN Mission for the Stabilization of the Democratic Republic of Congo (MONUSCO) estimates that there are as many as 125 indigenous and foreign non-state armed groups operating within the DRC. (33) Some of these armed groups—including Forces Démocratiques de Libération du Rwanda (FDLR), Force de Résistance Patriotique en Ituri (FRPI), Kamuina Nsapu Mayi Mayi groups, Nduma Défense du Congo (NDC/Renove), Nyatura, Raia Mutomboki, and other armed groups—continued to abduct and recruit children for use in armed conflict. (27; 29; 35; 31; 3) UNICEF and other international organizations estimate that 40 percent to 70 percent of the militias in central DRC include children, some as young as age 5. (27) Research indicates that there was ongoing collaboration between members of the FARDC and non-state armed groups known for recruiting children, including coordinating operations or selling arms and munitions. (4; 36; 37; 38; 33; 39) Children may sometimes join armed groups or engage in child labor in artisanal mines hoping to earn money for school-related expenses. (2; 16; 17; 40; 27; 41; 42; 19) Although there is strong evidence of children engaged in armed conflict, commercial sexual exploitation, and forced labor in mining, there is a lack of information on the overall nature of child labor because a comprehensive, stand-alone, child labor survey has never been conducted in the DRC. (10)

The government has mandated free primary education, but these laws were not implemented throughout the country, and some families are required to pay for school uniforms, tuition, and additional fees, which may be prohibitive. (2; 7; 8; 10; 16; 43; 44; 45; 46; 41) Schools throughout the DRC are overcrowded, understaffed, structurally damaged by conflicts, occupied by internally displaced persons, or require students to travel long distances. (2; 27; 23; 47; 46; 28; 31; 3) Children and teachers also face difficulty in accessing education due to their large-scale internal displacement and fear of violence, being forcibly recruited, or sexually assaulted at or on their way to school. (48; 23; 43; 49; 27; 47; 46; 50; 31) Since September 2016, non-state armed groups carried out at least 646 attacks against schools, and the FARDC was responsible for attacking at least 4 schools and using 4 other schools as army bases. (29; 51; 38) Because of ongoing conflicts, some children were unable to take the end-of-year exams required to advance to the next grade. (27; 47)

During the reporting period, the government’s focus was on widespread conflict in the central and eastern regions and unrest related to the delayed presidential elections, which may have impeded its efforts to combat child labor. (27; 29; 35; 33) As a result, DRC has nearly doubled its number of internally displaced persons in 2017, from 2.5 million to almost 4.5 million, of whom 2.7 million are children. (27; 29; 35; 52) UNICEF estimates that only 14 percent of children under age 5 have birth certificates. Low rates of birth registration leave many children vulnerable to child labor because it makes age verification difficult during the FARDC recruitment campaigns and hinders efforts to identify and separate children associated with armed groups. (8; 46; 19; 43; 33)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The DRC has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in the DRC's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including its compulsory education age.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 6 of the Labor Code; Article 50 of the Child Protection Code (53; 54; 55)

In December 2017, the National Assembly and Senate adopted a revised Mining Code which explicitly punishes individuals for using child labor in mining or selling ore mined with child labor, and the President passed it into law in March 2018. (60; 65)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, the absence of worksite inspections conducted at the national level in the DRC impeded the enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Employment, Labor, and Social Welfare (MOL)	Investigate cases related to child labor, including its worst forms. (8; 43) Refer cases of child labor to the MOJ for prosecution. (67)
Ministry of Justice and Human Rights (MOJ)	Enforce criminal laws related to child labor. (8; 48) Oversee five juvenile courts in Kinshasa and assist the International Criminal Court in conducting investigations and prosecutions against individuals who allegedly used children in armed conflict. (67; 46; 68; 33; 69) In 2017, 10,933 child protection cases were initiated in child protection courts; however, it is not known how many were related to the worst forms of child labor. (33)
Ministry of the Interior's Police Unit for Child Protection and Combating Sexual Violence (PEVS)	Combat conflict-related sexual and gender-based violence against women and children, protect children and women who are victims of physical abuse, and ensure the demobilization of children. Ministry of the Interior refers all cases to the MOJ for prosecution and assists victims in seeking justice. (70; 71; 72; 68)
Office of the President's Personal Representative on Sexual Violence and Child Recruitment	Support and coordinate the efforts of government officials and international bodies to combat sexual violence and the use of children in armed conflict. (73) In 2017, improved access to a hotline for victims by making the number shorter and negotiating with telecommunications companies to make calls toll-free. Released data on sexual violence disaggregated by military and civil courts; of the 519 victims involved in 547 cases filed in military courts, 399 were minors. (33)
Ministry of Gender and Family (MOGF)	Oversee and investigate cases related to the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (68)
Ministry of Defense (MOD)	Investigate and prosecute military officials suspected of recruiting and using child soldiers in military courts, and lead the implementation of the Action Plan to End the Recruitment and Use of Child Soldiers. Through its Department of Child Protection (DISPE), coordinate actions with UNICEF. (68)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, the absence of worksite inspections conducted at the national level in the DRC impeded the enforcement of child labor laws (Table 6).

Although the DRC has documented cases of child labor, for the second year in a row no labor inspections were conducted during the reporting period due to an absence of funding and transportation. The Labor Inspectorate received insufficient funding for labor inspector salaries, which meant that not all of the 200 labor inspectors were active during the reporting period. (68) The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of the DRC's workforce, which includes more than 30 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, the DRC should employ about 758 labor inspectors. (74; 75; 76) In July 2017, the government lifted the suspension on civil servant applications and the Ministry of Employment, Labor, and Social Welfare (MOL) anticipates that some of these new candidates will be allocated to the Labor Inspectorate to replace those nearing retirement. (68) Although the Prime Minister initially approved a request from the MOL's Inspector General to hire additional labor inspectors in 2017, the approval was later suspended. (68) The MOL has not hired new inspectors for the past 4 years and approximately 75 percent of existing inspectors are based in Kinshasa. (33)

Lastly, implementing decrees for the Child Protection Code have not been adopted, and the penalties for criminal violations for the worst forms of child labor, which are one to three years of imprisonment and fines as high as $123, were insufficient to serve as deterrents. (23; 24; 66; 55; 56; 43)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in the DRC took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2017, Ntabo Ntaberi Cheka, founder of Nduma Defense of Congo, surrendered to authorities and is awaiting prosecution for crimes against humanity, including the recruitment of children for armed conflict. A warrant for his arrest was first issued in 2011 and the UN has documented at least 154 children who were recruited by Nduma Defense of Congo. (77) In December 2017, a

Congo, Democratic Republic of the sitting parliamentarian in South Kivu who led an armed group was also convicted for raping 40 young girls and murdering civilians; he and 10 of his combatants were sentenced to life imprisonment and ordered to pay $5,000 in reparations to each victim. (78; 79)

A lack of coordination among ministries in conducting investigations, collecting data, and providing services to victims hinders the government’s ability to adequately combat the worst forms of child labor. (33) Research indicates that the justice system lacks the independence, knowledge, capacity, and resources to investigate and prosecute child labor violations. (24; 80; 19; 81; 33) The UN has expressed its concern that investigations into former members of the FARDC accused of child recruitment in armed conflict have been stalled due to a lack of funding. (82; 33) The UN has also noted that the government appears to be preventing the leader of the Bakata Katanga armed group from returning to prison after his escape in 2011 and subsequent surrender in 2016, although he was convicted in 2009 for using child soldiers. (33)

In 2017, the FARDC and the police arrested 302 children, many for their alleged association with armed groups. (33) These children were detained for periods of one day to one year, held in cells with adults, interrogated, and beaten. (27; 46; 83; 31; 3; 32; 4; 33) Members of both the national police and government-backed non-state armed groups carried out extrajudicial killings of civilians in central DRC, including children, due to their perceived support or affiliation with non-state armed groups. (29; 84; 36; 35; 85; 32; 38; 39)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including lack of coordination among agencies.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
National Committee to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor (NCCL)	Oversee the National Action Plan to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor and monitor its implementation. (86; 87) Led by the MOL and includes representatives from 12 other ministries, local NGOs, and civil society. (88; 86; 87; 68) Although the NCCL did not formally convene during the reporting period due to a lack of funding, it participated in ad hoc activities, including the creation of the National Sectoral Strategy to Combat Child Labor in Artisanal Mines and Artisanal Mining Sites (2017–2025). (33)
Ministry of Social Affairs, Solidarity, and Humanitarian Action (MINASA)	Monitor humanitarian programs and coordinate with key actors to promote social services to vulnerable groups, including street children, trafficking victims, and child soldiers. (88; 89; 68)
Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration Commission (UEPN-DDR)	Coordinate the identification, verification, and release of children associated with armed groups, and refer them to social services providers for family reunification and reinsertion by collaborating with the MOGF, MONUSCO, UNICEF, and NGOs. (90; 68; 33) Led by the MOD’s Children Associated with Armed Forces and Armed Groups unit. (90; 33) In 2017, continued to work with NGOs and international groups to identify and separate children from armed groups. (4; 68)
Joint Technical Working Group (JTWG)	Coordinate the implementation of the Child Soldiers Action Plan and, through its provincial JTWGs, coordinate implementation at the provincial level in North Kivu, South Kivu, and Orientale provinces. Led by the MOGF and includes representatives from four other ministries and the UN. (80; 68) In 2017, developed and adopted age verification procedures and held numerous workshops to train the FARDC and the police, which prevented at least 85 boys from being recruited into the FARDC. Also opened provincial offices in Kasai and North Kivu and created a 2018 roadmap for monitoring and preventing grave violations against children by state agents. (33)
Working Group on Trafficking in Persons	Analyze human trafficking trends and discuss strategies to develop comprehensive trafficking legislation and an inter-ministerial coordinating body. Led by the IOM and the U.S. Embassy; includes representatives from relevant ministries, civil society organizations, law enforcement officials, and other DRC government officials. (68) Met several times in 2017. (33)
Inter-ministerial Commission (IMC) Responsible for Addressing the Issue of Child Labor in Mines and on Mine Sites in DRC*	Coordinate government efforts to eradicate child labor in the DRC’s mining sector, serve as an advisor to other ministries combating child labor in mining, and liaise with international bodies such as the OECD, UNICEF, and ILO. (50) In 2017, held a workshop to validate the National Sectoral Strategy to Combat Child Labor in Artisanal Mines and Artisanal Mining Sites (2017–2025). (91)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

In 2017, both the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the Ministry of the Interior sought to establish an inter-ministerial committee to coordinate government efforts against human trafficking, draft a national action plan, and strengthen enforcement efforts. (92) The overlapping objectives and duplication of efforts, combined with a lack of resources and trained personnel, have impeded the government’s efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor. (48; 92) The UEPN-DDR is meant to take the lead on child soldier issues; however, research indicates that this did not always happen in practice. (33)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor‡

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2012–2020)	Developed by the NCCL in consultation with UNICEF to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in the DRC by 2020. (7; 93) Promotes the enforcement of legislation on the worst forms of child labor, awareness raising, and empowering communities to stop child labor practices; universal primary education; prevention and reintegration services; improved monitoring and evaluation efforts; and improved coordination of stakeholders. (7; 93) In 2017, at the IV Global Conference on the Sustained Eradication of Child Labor, the government pledged to mobilize the resources necessary to implement this plan, and indicated its intention to conduct awareness-raising campaigns in 2018 and 2019 regarding the hazards of child labor in agriculture, mining, and armed conflict. (94)
Action Plan to End the Recruitment and Use of Child Soldiers (Child Soldiers Action Plan)	UN-backed plan that aims to prevent and end the use of children in armed forces, provide support and reintegration services, pursue accountability for perpetrators, and create a partnership framework for the UN and the government. (95; 96) Includes standard operating procedures for age verification to help the FARDC avoid underage recruitment. (3; 4) In 2017, MONUSCO and the FARDC worked with military prosecutors to bring charges against elements who use children in armed conflict; following these efforts, MONUSCO screened and secured the release of more than 100 children from detention. (84) Also during the reporting period, provided training on child protection and age verification to more than 1,240 FARDC and police officers. (33)
UEPN-DDR's National Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration Plan (PNDDR) DDR III	Aims to provide rehabilitation and reintegration services to demobilized combatants, including children. (97; 98; 99; 4) Implemented with the support of the UN and international partners in support of the 2013 Framework Agreement for Peace, Security and Cooperation for the DRC and the Great Lakes Region. (98; 100; 101) Requires children separated from armed groups to be immediately transferred to UNICEF. (33) In 2017, separated as many as 2,360 children from armed groups. (4; 68)
National Sectoral Strategy to Combat Child Labor in Artisanal Mines and Artisanal Mining Sites (2017–2025)†	Ministry of Mines policy that aims to eradicate child labor in artisanal mines by 2025 through strengthening the regulatory framework, improving data collection on the prevalence of child labor in the mining sector, promoting responsible sourcing regulations, improving child protection, and building stakeholder capacity. (102) In 2017, the government and IOM validated 93 new artisanal mining sites in the eastern DRC as free of conflict and child labor, raising the total number of certified mining sites to 417. (33)
IMC's Triennial Action Plan (2017–2020)†	Aims to eradicate child labor in mining by 2020, particularly in the tin, tantalum, tungsten, cobalt, and copper sectors by monitoring existing policies and strengthening measures to remove children from mining sites. (103)
National Action Plan Against Sexual Violence in Conflict	MOGF policy in support of UN Resolution 1325 on women, peace, and security that aims to combat sexual violence against girls associated with armed groups and ensure prosecution of perpetrators. (104) In 2017, the President's Special Advisor on Sexual Violence and Child Recruitment worked with Child Soldiers International to publish a practical guide for child protection actors to facilitate the demobilization and reintegration of girls associated with armed groups. (105)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (15; 24; 106; 107)

The government did not integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the UN Development Assistance Framework (2013–2017). The National Action Plan to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor has yet to be approved by the National Labor Council, so its implementation has been severely constrained by a lack of dedicated funding. (108; 33)

VII. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem and in all relevant sectors.

Congo, Democratic Republic of the

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor‡

Program	Description
Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement Project on Child Labor and Forced Labor (MAP 16)*	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO to conduct research and develop new survey methodologies, improve awareness, and strengthen policies and government capacity to combat child labor and forced labor in 10 countries. (109) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
World Bank-Funded Projects	Projects in support of re-establishing peace and stability. Includes Reinsertion and Reintegration Project (2015–2019), a $21 million project that aims to assist with social reintegration for the child combatants identified as part of DDR III; Support to Basic Education Program (2013–2017), a $100 million project implemented by the Ministry of Primary, Secondary, and Vocational Education that aimed to increase access to education; Human Development Systems Strengthening (2016–2020), a $41.1 million project that aims to increase birth registration and improve school infrastructure; and Education Quality Improvement Project (2017–2021),* a $100 million project that aims to improve the quality of primary school education. (101; 110; 111; 112)
Programs to Support Vulnerable Children†	Government and donor-supported projects that aim to improve child protection. Includes a $4 million government of Japan-funded program that aims to provide education, vocational training, reintegration kits, and school feeding programs to 13,000 children and construct a training center for youth in North Kivu Province; a $97 million government of Canada-funded program that aims to assist 95,000 at-risk youth living near mining sites; and a 2017 MSA and NGO program to reintegrate children removed from the street into communities and reunify children formerly associated with armed groups with their families. (113; 114; 33; 4)
Back to School Campaign*	Ministry of Education program in collaboration with UNICEF that aims to improve access to education for students in areas affected by conflict by distributing school kits and establishing temporary learning spaces. In 2017, provided 55,951 children with school kits. (115)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (68)

The scope of existing child disarmament, demobilization, and reintegration programs is insufficient; the entire process is slow, funding is inadequate, and collaboration between partners is weak. (24; 116; 40; 46; 50; 41) Children separated from armed groups remain vulnerable to re-recruitment and stigmatization, and girls, who make up an estimated 30 to 40 percent of children associated with armed groups, need to be specifically targeted in the DDR process. (40; 46; 41; 30; 42) Research also indicates that the government needs to strengthen its efforts to assist street children, integrate child labor issues into existing agricultural programs, and implement programs specifically designed to assist children engaged in forced labor in domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation. (23; 25; 24; 46; 19)

VI. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in the DRC (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Establish by law a compulsory education age that extends to the minimum age for employment.	2013 – 2017
Enforcement	Strengthen the Labor Inspectorate by conducting routine and unannounced inspections and ensure that inspectors have adequate resources and transportation to conduct inspections throughout the country.	2015 – 2017
	Significantly increase the number of labor inspectors in accordance with the ILO's technical advice and ensure that they receive adequate training and funding to carry out their duties.	2011 – 2017
	Increase penalties for the worst forms of child labor so they are sufficiently stringent to serve as a deterrent.	2013 – 2017
	Issue appropriate decrees to ensure that enacted laws are implemented, including those that provide for free education throughout the country and require demobilized children to be handed over to child protection actors for social services and reintegration assistance.	2009 – 2017

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure that judges, prosecutors, and investigators receive adequate training and resources to investigate and prosecute child labor issues.	2011 – 2017
	Cease the practice of subjecting children to physical violence and/or detention for their alleged association with armed groups, and ensure that enforcement officials do not carry out extrajudicial killings.	2015 – 2017
	Ensure that the FARDC does not support non-state armed groups that perpetuate the worst forms of child labor, including child soldiering.	2017
Coordination	Improve coordination among relevant ministries to avoid duplication of efforts and ensure that they receive adequate resources and trained personnel to combat the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking.	2015 – 2017
	Ensure that the UEPN-DDR is able to coordinate the government's DDR III program as intended.	2015 – 2017
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into existing policies and ensure the implementation of relevant policies.	2011 – 2017
Social Programs	Conduct a stand-alone child labor survey.	2013 – 2017
	Improve access to education for all children by regulating classroom size, training additional teachers, building additional schools, and ensuring that schools are safe and students are not subjected to sexual abuse or forcible recruitment while at or on their way to school. Make additional efforts to prevent schools from being attacked and occupied by armed groups.	2012 – 2017
	Ensure that all children are registered at birth or have identification documents.	2012 – 2017
	Expand efforts to address the needs of demobilized children and incorporate stigmatization, gender, and re-recruitment concerns into programs to reintegrate such children.	2009 – 2017
	Ensure that existing social programs are implemented as intended and establish or expand efforts to address exploitative forced child labor in domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation.	2009 – 2017

In 2017, the Republic of the Congo made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. In May 2017, a court in Pointe-Noire sentenced a Beninese woman in absentia to 30 years of forced labor and a $25,000 fine for transporting a 10-year-old boy from Benin to the Republic of the Congo with falsified documents for the purpose of forced labor in domestic work. This is the country's first conviction for a trafficking-related offense. However, children in the Republic of the Congo engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Children also perform dangerous tasks in domestic work. The government has yet to accede to the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons and there is no mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor at the national level, including all its worst forms. The government failed to allocate funding to the National Action Plan to Fight Against Trafficking in Persons (2014–2017) and did not fund any social services during the reporting period to address trafficking in persons. In addition, information on children's work is extremely limited because there has never been a national child labor survey or similar research conducted in the Republic of the Congo.

I, PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in the Republic of the Congo (ROC) engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Children also perform dangerous tasks in domestic work. (1; 2; 3; 4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in ROC.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	27.9 (286,137)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	90.2
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	29.9
Primary Completion Rate (%)		70.3

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (5)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Deuxième Enquête Démographique et de Santé du Congo (EDSC-II) Survey, 2011–2012. (6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including in the production of manioc, peanuts, corn, plantains, potatoes, and sugar cane (1; 2; 7; 8; 4)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor †	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1; 7; 9; 10; 11; 3)
	Forced labor in farming, including in the production of cocoa, and in domestic work, working in stone quarries, fishing, and market vending, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1; 12; 3; 7; 4)
	Forced labor of indigenous Baka children in farming, including in the production of manioc, and in fishing, hunting, and domestic work (7; 4; 13)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Within ROC, internal child trafficking brings children from rural areas to urban centers for forced labor in domestic work. The majority of foreign children subject to forced domestic work or commercial sexual exploitation in ROC originate from Benin and the Democratic Republic of the Congo, as well as other West African nations. (1; 14; 15; 16; 3; 13) A 2015 report funded by the UN Office on Drugs and Crime found that most victims of commercial sexual exploitation as a result of child trafficking were between the ages of 9 and 11 years old. (13) However, information on children’s work is limited because there has never been a national child labor survey or similar research conducted in ROC. (4)

The Constitution stipulates that education is free until age 16; however, some parents are required to pay for books, uniforms, and school fees, which may limit access to education for some children. (17; 4; 18) Over-enrollment, the absence of sanitation facilities, poor administration of the education sector, a lack of teachers, and sexual abuse in schools also pose barriers to education for some children, particularly in refugee or internally displaced persons camps and non-urban areas. (17; 19; 20; 4) Indigenous children throughout the country may experience discrimination, linguistic barriers, prohibitive school fees, and long distances to schools. (21; 18; 22) In November 2017, 37 indigenous children were prohibited from attending school due to their inability to pay a monthly school fee. (4)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

ROC has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in ROC’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for voluntary recruitment into the state’s armed forces.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 116 of the Labor Code; Article 68 of the Child Protection Code (23; 24)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 4, 5, 8, and 9 of Order 2224 of 1953; Article 68 of the Child Protection Code (24; 25)

Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Articles 1 and 3 of the Education Law; Article 29 of the Constitution (26; 28)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 1 of the Education Law; Article 29 of the Constitution (26; 28)

* No conscription (29)

A draft revision to the Hazardous Work List of 1953 has been pending since 2012, and a draft anti-trafficking law that includes more severe penalties for offenders has been awaiting adoption by the Parliamentary Committee since 2013. (15; 30; 31; 4; 13) In addition, the law does not set a minimum age for voluntary recruitment into the armed forces. (22; 24; 3)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MOL) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MOL)	Enforce child labor laws. (1; 18) Conduct initial inspections before referring cases to the MOJ for prosecution. (4)
Ministry of Justice and Human Rights (MOJ)	Enforce criminal laws against the worst forms of child labor. (1; 4) Dedicate two judges—one judge in Brazzaville and one in Pointe-Noire—to child protection cases. (4)
Ministry of the Interior's National Police	Enforce criminal laws against the worst forms of child labor and conduct initial investigations in cases of forced labor, human trafficking, and the use of children in illicit activities. (1; 4)
Ministry of Social Affairs, Humanitarian Action and Solidarity (MSA)	Promote the rights of vulnerable groups and contribute to anti-trafficking efforts by providing social welfare assistance to victims. (4; 18) May conduct initial inspections before referring cases to the MOJ for prosecution. (4) Through its Director General of Social Affairs, oversee government strategy to combat human trafficking. (13) Through its Task Force, lead efforts to combat human trafficking in Pointe-Noire, designate foster families to receive victims, and assist in repatriating or reintegrating victims. (1; 4)
Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Cooperation	Coordinate with the MSA in repatriating victims of child trafficking and monitor bilateral and multilateral agreements with neighboring countries to combat human trafficking. (1)

Although there is a line item in the Ministry of Social Affairs, Humanitarian Action and Solidarity's (MSA) budget for activities to combat human trafficking, it is disbursed irregularly or not at all. (13)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in ROC took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MOL that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including a functional complaint mechanism.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

* The government does not publish this information.

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of the ROC's workforce, which includes more than 2 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, ROC should employ roughly 137 labor inspectors. (33; 34; 35) Training opportunities for labor inspectors are very limited due to a lack of resources, particularly for lower level staff. (13) Due to a lack of staff, labor inspections were not conducted in some parts of the country. (36; 4) In addition, inspectors do not have access to government vehicles and rely on the employers being inspected to provide transportation. (36) Furthermore, existing penalties for the worst forms of child labor may not be severe enough to serve as deterrents because they are not commensurate with penalties for other serious crimes. (24)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in ROC took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including human resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Training for Investigators
Initial Training for New Employees	No (22)	No (4)

In May 2017, a court in Pointe-Noire sentenced a Beninese woman in absentia to 30 years of forced labor and a $25,000 fine for trafficking a 10-year-old boy from Benin to ROC with falsified documents for the forced labor in domestic work. (39; 40) The MSA Task Force reported investigating 1 case of human trafficking during the reporting period, although a local NGO reported 21 cases of trafficking, which resulted in 3 investigations by local authorities. (13; 38) In general, the MSA and the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights (MOJ) experienced difficulties in prosecuting offenders due to a weak judicial system, poor record keeping, a large backlog of cases in the high court, courts that convene infrequently and irregularly, and criminal law enforcement officials' and judges' unequal knowledge of anti-trafficking legislation and the Child Protection Code. (1; 3; 13) Rather than prosecuting child trafficking cases, the MSA Task Force may summon the accused, often resulting in restitution for the victims, but failing to deter the perpetrators from trafficking. (22) Of the 21 cases reported by the local NGO, 18 were resolved outside of court. (13)

The MSA, the MOL, and the MOJ, and the National Police work together to enforce criminal laws against child trafficking; however, their efforts were limited to Brazzaville and Pointe-Noire, and the National Police require payment to assist in operations to rescue victims of child trafficking. (4; 13) In addition, a senior government official within the MSA, tasked with combatting child trafficking, was accused of complicity in a child trafficking ring that allegedly sold infants to adults outside of ROC; the investigation is ongoing as of March 2018. (13)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including inclusion of all relevant agencies.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
Anti-Trafficking Coordinating Committee for Pointe-Noire (MSA Task Force)	Coordinate all efforts to combat West African child trafficking in Pointe-Noire with UNICEF's support. Composed of government representatives and civil society organizations. (1; 3; 4) Prevent and prosecute cases of human trafficking and provide support to victims through placement with foster families. (41) The MSA Task Force convened twice in 2017 to conduct internal meetings with the Director General of Social Affairs and other officials from the MSA. (13; 41)

An absence of funding has limited the MSA Task Force's activities since 2016, and it owes a total of approximately $805 to foster families for victim care provided in prior years. In addition, a local NGO that initiates investigations has started referring cases to the Beninese consulate rather than the MSA Task Force because the majority of victims are Beninese and the MSA Task Force is unable to provide the NGO with financial support for its work. (3; 13) Furthermore, the MSA Task Force has three vacant seats on the committee, and there is no coordinating body to oversee efforts to combat child trafficking or child labor at the national level. (3; 4; 41)

Although ministries should work together to address cases of child labor, budget constraints and weak inter-ministerial coordination continue to challenge the government's ability to coordinate its efforts to address human trafficking. (1; 3; 4) In addition, the cabinet has been reshuffled twice since 2016, resulting in staff shifting throughout the government and leaving some high-ranking officials without in-depth knowledge of human trafficking issues within the country. (13)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including funding.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor‡

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Fight Against Trafficking in Persons (2014–2017)	Aimed to establish a National Commission to Fight Against Trafficking in Persons, develop systems for monitoring and evaluation, strengthen the legal framework, and provide social services to victims of human trafficking. (42) Included public awareness campaigns, training for law enforcement officials, and improvement of enforcement activities related to child trafficking. (4)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (16; 13)

Congo, Republic of the

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

The government failed to allocate resources to the National Action Plan, thus the Plan was not implemented during the reporting period. (13) The government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the Education Sector Policy (2015–2025), and research found no evidence of a general policy on child labor. (43)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor†

Program	Description
Safety Net Program (LISUNGI) and Additional Financing (2014–2019)	$27 million World Bank-funded project that grants improved access to health and education services to poor families in Brazzaville, Cuvette, and Pointe-Noire. (44; 45) Includes a cash transfer program for households conditioned upon regular health visits and that all children maintain an 80 percent school attendance rate each month. (45) In 2017, the government ceased funding for LISUNGI, but the World Bank supported 17,652 project participants and 90 percent of the children participating in the program met the attendance requirement. (46; 4)
School Feeding Programs	Programs throughout the country that aim to reduce dropout rates and encourage school attendance. (22) WFP and the International Partnership for Human Development provide school meals with the support of the U.S. Government’s McGovern-Dole International Food for Education and Child Nutrition Program. (22; 47)
Observe, Reflect, Act Schools†	Ministry of Education program supported by UNICEF, the EU, and the WFP to improve access to education for indigenous children through a 2- or 3-year preparatory program. (15; 21; 48) Identifies children who should be added to the civil register, provides school supplies to students, and raises awareness among indigenous families about the importance of education. (15; 49)

† Program is funded by the Government of the Republic of the Congo.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (50)

The government was unable to disburse funding to agencies that provide social services during the reporting period due to resource constraints resulting from an economic crisis. (4; 13) In addition, existing government programs are not sufficient to address the scope of child labor or all relevant sectors, such as domestic work or commercial sexual exploitation, in ROC. (4)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in ROC (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2015 – 2017
	Ensure that the minimum age for voluntary military service is no lower than age 16, and that safeguards exist to protect children ages 16 and 17 in the armed forces.	2015 – 2017
Enforcement	Publish information related to enforcement statistics, including the funding level for the Labor Inspectorate, the number and type of labor inspections conducted, violations found, and penalties imposed and collected for child labor violations.	2014 – 2017
	Institutionalize training for labor inspectors, investigators, and law enforcement, including at the beginning of their employment and through periodic refresher courses.	2014 – 2017
	Strengthen the Labor Inspectorate by ensuring that inspectors have adequate resources to conduct routine inspections throughout the country, and ensure that penalties are applied in accordance with the law.	2015 – 2017
	Establish a complaint mechanism and reciprocal referral mechanism between labor authorities and social services.	2017
	Significantly increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO’s technical advice and ensure that they receive adequate resources to adequately enforce labor laws throughout the country.	2010 – 2017
Enforcement	Remove barriers to enforcement and prosecution by strengthening the judicial system, conducting an adequate number of investigations to protect victims throughout the country, training prosecutors on existing laws, ensuring that police participation in rescue operations do not require additional payment, and allocating resources to enforcement agencies and the judges responsible for child protection cases.	2014 – 2017
	Ensure that no ROC officials are complicit in perpetuating the worst forms of child labor.	2014 – 2017

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Coordination	Ensure that coordinating bodies include all relevant ministries and receive adequate resources to function as intended.	2014 – 2017
	Establish a coordinating mechanism to combat child labor at the national level, including all its worst forms.	2009 – 2017
	Improve inter-ministerial coordination to effectively combat child labor and human trafficking issues.	2014 – 2017
Government Policies	Ensure that all policies receive adequate funding to carry out activities as intended.	2016 – 2017
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into existing policies.	2009 – 2017
	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant forms of child labor, such as domestic work, and the worst forms of child labor, such as commercial sexual exploitation.	2013 – 2017
Social Programs	Conduct a national child labor survey or similar research to determine the activities carried out by working children to inform policies and programs.	2013 – 2017
	Improve access to education for all children, regardless of status or ethnicity, by eliminating all school-related fees, regulating classroom size, building additional schools, training additional teachers, and ensuring that students are not subject to sexual abuse.	2009 – 2017
	Allocate funding to social programs that address child labor, including its worst forms.	2012 – 2017
	Ensure that social programs are implemented as intended and institute programs to address all relevant sectors of child labor, including forced labor in domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation.	2009 – 2017

In 2017, Costa Rica made a significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government published analysis of child labor data from the 2016 National Household Survey, approved a national plan against the commercial sexual exploitation of children, and increased funding for the Labor Inspectorate. In addition, the Ministry of Labor and Social Security participated in an exchange with the Governments of Chile and El Salvador on efforts and experiences related to the prevention and eradication of child labor through monitoring systems, interagency coordination, and business partnership. However, children in Costa Rica engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Existing social programs are insufficient to reach all child laborers, and resources for the government's child labor law enforcement agencies remain inadequate.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Costa Rica engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (1; 2; 3; 4; 5; 6) During the reporting period, the government published an analysis of the 2016 child labor survey indicating that the number of working children below Costa Rica's minimum age for employment (age 15) fell nearly 43 percent between 2011 and 2016. The survey also noted that the highest percentages of working children in Costa Rica are concentrated in the following activities: cultivating vegetables, raising cattle for the production of milk, constructing buildings, repairing motor vehicles, selling fruits and vegetables, working in grocery stores, restaurants, and beauty salons, and performing domestic work. (7; 8) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Costa Rica.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	1.1 (8,071)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	96.8
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	1.1
Primary Completion Rate (%)		96.4

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (9)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Módulo de Trabajo Infantil (ENHAO-MTI), 2016. (10)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Cultivating bananas, pineapple, vegetables, roots, and tubers (7; 11)
	Picking coffee (1; 2; 12; 11; 13; 14; 15; 16)
	Weeding, clearing land, and watering seeds (3; 17)
	Cattle raising, including for the production of milk (1; 12; 17; 7)
	Fishing,† including shellfish extraction (18; 12; 19; 20)

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Sector/Industry	Activity
Industry	Construction, including of buildings (18; 1; 20; 17; 7)
	Mining† gold informally (17)
	Manufacturing, activities unknown (18; 1)
Services	Selling fruits and vegetables and working in grocery stores, restaurants, beauty salons, shops, and hotels (18; 1; 20; 21; 7)
	Street vending,† car washing, and repairing motor vehicles (1; 12; 19; 20; 22; 17; 7)
	Domestic work (18; 1; 19; 20; 17; 7; 23)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (12; 24; 4; 5; 6)
	Use in the production of pornography (25; 24; 26; 17)
	Forced labor in the agriculture, construction, fishing, street vending, and commercial sectors (24; 6)
	Domestic servitude (24; 6)
	Use in transporting or selling drugs (17; 6)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in Costa Rica, including migrant children, are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, particularly in tourist destinations and border areas. (4; 5; 6)

Children in rural areas, adolescent mothers, and children from indigenous and Afro-descendant communities face challenges accessing and completing their education. (27; 28; 4; 29) However, research indicates that Ngäbe Buglé indigenous children in Costa Rica who migrate with their families to work seasonally on coffee farms face additional challenges accessing social services due to long distances to service providers, language barriers, and complications in obtaining required documents from government institutions. (2; 13; 14; 15)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Costa Rica has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Costa Rica’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of non-state military recruitment of children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Articles 78 and 92 of the Childhood and Adolescence Code (30)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 1 and 5 of Law 8922; Article 87 of the Labor Code (31; 32)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established relevant institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority and operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MTSS) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MTSS)	Investigate reports of child labor, including hazardous and forced child labor, and enforce child labor laws. (40; 20) Protect adolescent labor rights by conducting school and workplace visits, providing referrals to government services, and writing socio-labor studies and technical reports. (21; 30)
Attorney General's Office	Enforce criminal laws protecting children, including laws prohibiting forced child labor, human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation of children, and the use of children in illicit activities. Coordinate with the Judicial Investigative Police, the Immigration Police, the Uniformed Police, and municipal police forces. Administer the following investigative and prosecutorial units: the Specialized Prosecutorial Unit against Trafficking in Persons, the Organized Crime Unit, the Specialized Prosecutorial Unit for Gender Issues, and the Juvenile Justice Unit. (17; 41)
Judicial Investigative Police	Conduct investigations of child labor violations, including child trafficking, child commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities. (40; 20)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Costa Rica took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority and operations of the MTSS that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including sufficient allocation of financial resources.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Although the government increased the Labor Inspection Office's 2017 budget, enforcement of child labor laws, particularly in rural areas, remained challenging due to insufficient funds for travel. (17) Government monitoring and enforcement of child labor laws was also limited in the informal sector, in which most child labor, especially hazardous adolescent work, occurs. (1; 12; 25; 44; 45) Informal work is more common in agriculture than in other sectors in Costa Rica. (1)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Costa Rica's workforce, which includes over 2 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Costa Rica would employ roughly 149 inspectors. (46; 47; 48) While the Labor Inspection Office created and filled 29 new labor inspector positions in 2017, the total number of labor inspectors for 2017 was lower than for 2016 due to attrition. (17; 41)

Although the Labor Inspectorate conducted fewer labor inspections in 2017 than in 2016, they were able to cover more workers in 2017 due to their revised inspection protocol. (41) However, the total number of labor inspections conducted suggests that each labor inspector conducted roughly 215 labor inspections; this is a high inspection ratio for each inspector, and it is unknown whether this affects the quality of labor inspections. (17)

The Labor Inspection Office referred 51 children found in child labor to the Office for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of the Adolescent Worker (OATIA), which received 434 cases of working children from various government agencies. (17) During 2017, the government collected roughly $2,000 in penalties for child labor violations found in previous years, and the labor courts received 7 child labor violation cases. By the end of the year, 4 of these cases remained pending but were likely to receive penalties. (41)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Costa Rica took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017

Number of Violations Found	128 (12)	23 (17)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	0 (49)	3 (41)
Number of Convictions	2 (12)	0 (41)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (12)	Yes (17)

In 2017, prosecutors and investigators received training related to the worst forms of child labor from international organizations and foreign police. Topics included trafficking in persons, commercial sexual exploitation of children, cybercrimes, and criminal intelligence. (17; 41) The Judicial Investigative Police reported that 9 investigators received training during the year, but the training was not sufficient because they did not receive training on enforcing new legislation or on investigating cases of children used in illicit activities or cases of human trafficking for labor exploitation. (17; 41)

In 2017, the government hired an additional 1,500 police and allocated funding to strengthen human trafficking investigations and prosecutions in rural areas and cities outside the central valley. In addition, the national fund against trafficking in persons provided 4 vehicles to the human trafficking unit of the Judicial Investigative Police to facilitate investigations. (17; 6) However, reports indicate the judiciary, prosecutors, and the police require additional staff, training, and resources to identify victims of human trafficking and refer them to appropriate social services. They also need additional resources to investigate, prosecute, and convict perpetrators of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. (4; 5)

During the year, the Attorney General's Office initiated prosecutions of 7 individuals for crimes involving the worst forms of child labor, including 2 cases of human trafficking for the commercial sexual exploitation of children and 1 case of human trafficking of a child for labor exploitation. The 7 individuals were convicted in 2018. (41)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including among agencies.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
MTSS Office for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of the Adolescent Worker (OATIA)	Coordinate government policies and programs to combat child labor. (1; 3; 19) Monitor implementation of the Roadmap Towards the Elimination of Child Labor in Costa Rica. Provide technical assistance to government ministries and design social programs to combat child labor. (50) Oversee the Inter-Institutional Coordinating Protocol for the Protection of Working Minors. (19; 51) In March 2017, OATIA participated in an exchange between the Governments of Costa Rica, Chile, and El Salvador on efforts and experiences related to the prevention and eradication of child labor through monitoring systems, interagency coordination, and business partnerships. (52)
National Committee for the Elimination of Child Labor and the Protection of Adolescent Work	Develop and promote policy and program initiatives focused on eliminating child labor and regulating adolescent work. Overseen by OATIA and includes a technical secretariat that comprises representatives from various sectors. (3; 19)
National Child Welfare Agency (PANI)	Ensure child labor victims receive interagency social services, including temporary shelter, legal advice, and victim counseling. Responsible for reintegrating child labor victims into the educational system. (40; 30)
National Coalition against Migrant Smuggling and Trafficking in Persons (CONATT)	Lead government efforts to combat human trafficking. Coordinate with OATIA and CONACOES to address the worst forms of child labor. (17; 5)
National Commission to Combat the Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents (CONACOES)	Prevent the commercial sexual exploitation of children and provide assistance and protection to victims. (17) Report to the National Council of Childhood and Adolescence with legal standing under PANI, the body's lead agency. (20; 42) Coordinate with OATIA and CONATT to address the worst forms of child labor. (17)

Costa Rica

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Reports indicate coordination is lacking between institutions responsible for investigating the worst forms of child labor and providing social services to victims. Challenges include high staff turnover and a need for additional training on the implementation of relevant manuals and protocols. (3; 5)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Roadmap against Child Labor and the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2010–2020)	Aims to eradicate all forms of child labor in Costa Rica by 2020 by strengthening anti-poverty, health, and educational programs and policies, and by raising awareness on child labor. (53; 54; 55) At the IV Global Conference on the Sustained Eradication of Child Labor, held in Buenos Aires, Argentina in November 2017, the Government of Costa Rica pledged to update the Roadmap, incorporate child labor questions into the national census, implement a child labor risk identification strategy, and focus efforts in high-risk areas. (56)
Inter-Institutional Coordinating Protocol for the Protection of Working Minors	Outlines service provision for child laborers through collaboration between the MTSS, PANI, Ministry of Education, and Joint Institute of Social Assistance (IMAS), as well as their regional and local agencies and the private sector. (1; 3; 57)
National Plan against the Sexual Commercial Exploitation of Minors (2017–2018)†	Designates responsible agencies and establishes actions and timelines to address commercial sexual exploitation of children. (17; 58)
National Plan for Development (2015–2018)	Incorporates efforts to decrease child labor into national education and poverty reduction strategies. (22; 59)
Bridge to Development (2015–2018)	Aims to reduce poverty and eliminate vulnerability, including child labor, by providing social services to families in poor communities. (3; 25; 55; 60)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

The Coordination Agreement on Labor Migration between the Ministries of Labor of Costa Rica and Panama aims to strengthen dialogue on labor migration between the two countries, with an emphasis on indigenous Panamanian migrant workers and their families; however, child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been fully integrated into this policy. (61)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
2016 National Household Survey†	National Institute of Statistics and Census survey, with child labor module, conducted in July 2016. (2; 12; 62) The government published analysis of the data in 2017. (7; 8)
Child Labor Awareness Campaign	MTSS and Ministry of Education public-private partnership supported by Fundación Telefónica to raise awareness of child labor through social media. (50)
Face of Justice Shelter†	NGO-run shelter for child victims of human trafficking that provides PANI-funded monthly subsidies to victims and care from full-time staff, including a trauma psychologist and health practitioner. (24)
Houses of Joy ( Casas de la Alegría )†	Public-private alliance that provides culturally sensitive daycare and meals to Ngäbe Buglé indigenous children whose parents work on coffee farms in Coto Brus. Aims to promote social inclusion and developmental opportunities for indigenous children and provide an alternative to child labor in the coffee harvest. (2; 25; 13; 63; 64; 65; 17; 66) IMAS funds meals, caregiver salaries, and training; farm owners provide the land and classrooms, with financial contributions from UNICEF for building and teaching materials. Began as a pilot in 2014 with 6 centers serving 175 children; in 2017, served 600 children in 17 centers. (25; 13; 42; 49; 63; 64; 65; 17) The program requires approval from the Ministry of Health to expand to other coffee growing regions in the country. (66)
Let's Get Ahead Program ( Avanceemos )†	IMAS program that provides monthly conditional cash transfers to low-income families to keep children in school and out of exploitative work. (1; 40; 20; 67; 68; 29) In 2017, OATIA helped 313 children obtain scholarships from the MTSS and IMAS program under Avanceemos that provides monthly education subsidies to families with children engaged in child labor. (69; 70; 17)

Program	Description
I Sign Up for Education ( Yo Me Apunto con la Educación )	Ministry of Education program to help at-risk high school students from vulnerable areas remain in school or to return to school. (17; 29)
Age Classroom ( Aula Edad )†	Ministry of Education program that targets children and adolescents who have never been to school or who dropped out, adolescent mothers and workers, and foreign migrant adolescents to help them complete primary school. (25; 71)
USDOL-funded Projects to Support Youth Apprenticeship	USDOL-funded, $3 million Youth Pathways to Leadership, Learning, and Livelihoods in Costa Rica (2016-2020) and $2.9 million Promoting Apprenticeship as a Path for Youth Employment in Argentina, Costa Rica, and Kenya through Global Apprenticeship Network (GAN) National Networks (2016–2019). For additional information, please see our website.

† Program is funded by the Government of Costa Rica.

OATIA reported that their office needs additional staff to better assist children engaged in child labor and their families. In addition, OATIA noted that their office shares one vehicle with two other MTSS units and that this limits their ability to provide oversight of their child labor programs. (41)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Costa Rica (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2017
Enforcement	Authorize the Labor Inspectorate to assess penalties.	2014 – 2017
	Ensure that labor inspectors receive yearly refresher training related to child labor.	2017
	Publish information on the number of child labor violations for which penalties were imposed and collected.	2017
	Allocate sufficient travel funds to allow labor inspectors to increase child labor inspections in rural areas and the informal sector, particularly in agriculture.	2015 – 2017
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet international standards and determine whether the inspection ratio for each labor inspector is appropriate to ensure the quality and scope of inspections.	2015 – 2017
	Ensure that the judiciary, prosecutors, and the police have sufficient staff, training, and resources to investigate, prosecute, and convict perpetrators of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children as well as identify victims of child trafficking and refer them to appropriate social services.	2017
Coordination	Strengthen coordination and information sharing between institutions responsible for investigating child labor and providing social services to victims, including by providing additional training on relevant manuals and protocols.	2015 – 2017
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the Coordination Agreement on Labor Migration between the Ministries of Labor of Costa Rica and Panama.	2015 – 2017
Social Programs	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children, including children from rural, indigenous, and Afro-descendant communities, and adolescent mothers, by expanding existing social programs to strengthen school retention and completion for children and adolescents, particularly at the secondary level.	2015 – 2017
	Increase access to education and other services for indigenous children in coffee growing areas to ensure they have alternatives to participating in the coffee harvest, including by building additional Houses of Joy centers and authorizing the program to expand beyond Coto Brus.	2015 – 2017
	Increase transportation and human resources for OATIA so the office can improve program oversight.	2017

Côte d'Ivoire

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

In 2017, Côte d'Ivoire made a significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government adopted a revised Hazardous Work List that includes prohibitions against children using sharp tools and work in mining, as well as new Regulations on Light Work. The child labor monitoring system SOSTECI was expanded into 19 new communities and the government launched SOSTECI (2018 – 2020), which aims to expand the system into 33 new departments. The First Lady of Côte d'Ivoire hosted a Conference of First Ladies in October 2017 which brought together First Ladies from 14 African countries to pledge support to their governments' efforts to prevent child labor, support victims, enhance regional cooperation, and mobilize resources. The Ministry of Justice worked with UNICEF to provide birth certificates to 1,165,325 primary school students. In addition, three World Bank projects trained 24,000 teachers, built or rehabilitated 1,272 classrooms, and provided cash transfers to 5,000 households. However, children in Côte d'Ivoire engage in the worst forms of child labor in the harvesting of cocoa and coffee, sometimes as result of human trafficking. Gaps remain in resources, personnel, and training for law enforcement, which resulted in victims being arrested for crimes they were forced to commit. Furthermore, the Labor Inspectorate is not authorized to assess penalties.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Côte d'Ivoire engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in the harvesting of cocoa and coffee, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1; 2; 3; 4) According to a multiple indicator cluster survey conducted in 2016, 21.5 percent of children ages 5–17 are engaged in hazardous work. (5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Côte d'Ivoire.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	31.5 (1,682,754)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	63.5
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	21.5
Primary Completion Rate (%)		65.9

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (6)

Source for all other data: Enquête Démographique et de Santé en Côte d'Ivoire (EDSCI-III) Survey, 2011–2012. (7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of cocoa, including burning† and clearing fields;† cutting down trees† to expand cocoa plantations; spraying pesticides;† harvesting, drying, and fermenting cocoa beans; using sharp tools to break pods;† and transporting heavy loads† of cocoa pods and water (1; 3; 8; 9; 10; 11; 12; 13)
	Production of cereals, pineapple, bananas, and coffee, including applying chemical fertilizers,† spraying pesticides,† cutting down trees,† and burning† and clearing fields† (1; 2; 14; 15)
	Production of palm oil, cashews, honey, and rubber (2; 3; 16)
	Fishing, including deep sea diving;† repairing and hauling nets; cleaning,† salting, drying, descaling, and selling fish (3; 14; 17)
	Livestock raising and slaughtering† (17)
	Production of charcoal† (1; 3; 13)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Industry	Mining, † including crushing and transporting stones, blasting rocks, digging, working underground, sieving, and extracting gold with mercury or cyanide (3; 14; 18; 19; 20; 12; 16)
	Manufacturing, including repairing automobiles (14; 16)
	Construction, † activities unknown (14)
Services	Domestic work (14; 21; 22; 12; 15; 5)
	Working in transportation and carrying goods † (1; 3; 14; 12; 16)
	Street vending and commerce (1; 14; 12; 16)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor ‡	Forced labor in mining, carpentry, construction, domestic work, street vending, restaurants, and agriculture, including in the production of cocoa, coffee, pineapple, cotton, and rubber, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1; 2; 9; 17; 22; 23; 24; 16; 4)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (22; 16; 4)
	Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking (15)
	Forced begging by Koranic teachers, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (19; 25; 15)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children from Côte d'Ivoire are subjected to human trafficking for forced labor in domestic work within the country and North Africa. Children are also brought from neighboring West African countries to Côte d'Ivoire for commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor, including in begging, cocoa production, and artisanal mining. (1; 10; 21; 16; 4; 15) IOM indicates that some parents send their boys to Tunisia so they can play soccer, but upon arrival, the boys' identity documents are confiscated and they are subject to forced labor until they can repay the cost of their plane ticket. (26)

Although the Law on Education provides for free education, students are often required to pay for textbooks, school fees, or uniforms, which may be prohibitive to some families. (17; 27; 28; 29; 30; 31; 15) Approximately 23 percent of primary school-aged children and 41 percent of secondary-school aged children in Côte d'Ivoire are not enrolled in school, with the highest rates of non-enrollment found in the North, Northwest, and West regions. (31; 5) Although the government recruited 5,000 teacher assistants in 2017, distributed school kits, and constructed 4,510 new classrooms between 2015 and 2017, a lack of teachers, transportation, sanitation facilities, and schools, particularly in rural areas, remains. (12; 32; 15; 33; 17; 20; 34) Research also suggests that some students are physically and sexually abused at school, which may deter some students from attending school. (31; 32)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Côte d'Ivoire has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

In 2017, the government also ratified the UN Protocol against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air, and the Ministry of Justice is drafting a related law. (35; 26)

The government's laws and regulations are in line with relevant international standards (Table 4).

Free Public Education	Yes		Article 2 of the Law on Education (45)

* No conscription (43; 46; 26)

In 2017, the government adopted new Regulations on Light Work and a revised Hazardous Work List which includes prohibitions against children using sharp tools and work in mining. (47; 38) A draft law providing greater protection to domestic workers is no longer being actively considered, although government officials have noted the need for such a law. (48) The government also adopted a decree on the function and composition of a new anti-trafficking committee in April 2017 in support of the 2016 Anti-Trafficking Law. (49; 50)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Employment and Social Protection (MEPS) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Employment and Social Protection (MEPS)	Develop, propose, and enforce all labor laws, including those related to child labor. (48) Collaborate with the Anti-Trafficking Unit (ATU) and Ministry of Women, Child Protection, and Social Affairs (MWCPA) to provide support to victims of child trafficking and other forms of child labor. (21; 32; 15) Implement the child labor monitoring system, Système d'Observation et de Suivi du Travail des Enfants en Côte d'Ivoire (SOSTECI), which enables communities to collect and analyze statistical data on the worst forms of child labor. (14; 12) In 2017, SOSTECI received a budget of approximately $307,000, which permitted its expansion to 19 new communities and the Direction of the Fight Against Child Labor received a 7 percent increase in its budget from the previous year. (12; 16)

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Interior and Security	Through its ATU, lead efforts to enforce criminal laws against child trafficking. (51; 4; 26) Through its Mondaine Brigades, combat commercial sexual exploitation, including exploitation of children. (4; 26) In 2017, investigated and prosecuted nine cases of commercial sexual exploitation believed to involve victims of child trafficking. (26) Through its Unit for Combatting Transnational Organized Crime (UCT),* supports the UNODC's West Africa Coast Initiative, which aims to improve cross-border cooperation to combat crimes, including human trafficking. (52; 26) In 2017, the UCT received a budget of almost $130,000, and participated in 8 operations against human trafficking, some of which resulted in arrests. Three investigations were ongoing as of 2018, and five were referred to the MOJ for prosecution. (26)
Ministry of Defense	Through its National Gendarmes Force, investigate child labor violations in rural areas without a police presence. (15)
Ministry of Justice (MOJ)	Investigate and prosecute crimes related to child labor, including its worst forms. Through its Directorate of Judicial Protection of Childhood and Youth (DPJEJ), assist with investigations and implement the ministry's child protection policy. (15)
Ministry of Women, Child Protection, and Social Affairs (MWCPSA)	Lead the government's efforts to combat human trafficking and implement a National Policy on Child Protection. (53; 4) Maintain the 116 Allo hotline for child labor issues, and respond to complaints. (15; 34) Respond and provide support to child labor victims in coordination with the MEPS. (54; 15)
National Commission of Human Rights (CNDHCI)	Maintain a hotline for reporting human rights abuses. (55)

* Agency responsible for child labor enforcement was created during the reporting period.

In 2017, the Ministry of Employment and Social Protection (MEPS) created 4 new Regional Labor Directorates and 1 new Departmental Labor Directorate, making 38 total offices throughout the country. The General Labor Directorate in Abidjan coordinates the regional offices and their efforts to combat child labor. (15; 56)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Côte d'Ivoire took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MEPS that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including human resource allocation and authority to assess penalties for violations.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Côte d'Ivoire

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

The government provided training to 30 labor and medical inspectors on the new hazardous and light work laws in August 2017. (56) No inspections were conducted in the informal sector during the reporting period, which is where the majority of child labor occurs. (15) In addition, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Côte d'Ivoire's workforce, which includes over 8.5 million workers. (60) According to the ILO technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Côte d'Ivoire should employ about 569 inspectors. (60; 61; 62) Labor inspectors are also tasked with dispute conciliation, which may detract from their primary duties of inspection. (63; 37)

The labor inspectorate suffers from a lack of resources, including insufficient staff, office facilities, and transportation. (17; 64; 63; 32; 15) As a result, inspectors primarily receive and resolve complaints, focusing on the formal sector. (63)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Côte d'Ivoire took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators and financial resource allocation.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Training for Investigators
Initial Training for New Employees	Yes (65)	Yes (15)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (57)	Yes (66)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (57)	No (15)
Number of Investigations	20 (55)	42 (56)
Number of Violations Found	64 (67)	42 (56)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	18 (55)	17 (56)
Number of Convictions	8 (55)	4 (26)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (57)	Yes (15; 54)

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Interior and Security worked with IOM to strengthen border control capacities along the frontier with Burkina Faso and the Anti-Trafficking Unit (ATU)'s 13 Abidjan-based investigators identified 25 victims of child trafficking and 16 cases of child economic exploitation. (15; 4)

However, the ATU lacks the resources and personnel to adequately enforce criminal child labor laws throughout the country and research indicates that criminal law enforcement officials may benefit from additional training on existing laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (10; 55; 68; 4) As a result, nine children were arrested for illicit activities involving drug distribution rather than being treated as victims. (15)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including coordination among agencies.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
National Monitoring Committee on Actions to Combat Trafficking, Exploitation, and Child Labor (CNS)	Supervise, monitor, and evaluate all government activities related to child labor and child trafficking, including making policy recommendations and harmonizing laws with international conventions. (69; 70) Chaired by the First Lady of Côte d'Ivoire and comprises 14 international and domestic partners. (21; 51; 69; 71) In 2017, launched an awareness raising campaign for the new Regulations on Light Work, published booklets and pictures explaining light work, and held a two-day work shop for labor inspectors. (15) Under the leadership of First Lady Dominique Ouattara, hosted a Conference of First Ladies in October 2017 which brought together First Ladies from 14 countries to demonstrate what they are doing to combat child labor and pledged to support their governments' efforts to prevent child labor, support victims, enhance regional cooperation, and mobilize resources (72; 73)

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
Interministerial Committee on the Fight Against Trafficking, Exploitation, and Child Labor (CIM)	Design, coordinate, and implement all government actions to combat the worst forms of child labor, and monitor relevant programs implemented by partner organizations. (69; 71; 74; 34) Chaired by MEPS, includes representatives from 13 other ministries. (21; 69; 71; 74)
National Committee for the Fight Against Trafficking (CNLTP)*	In support of the 2016 Anti-Trafficking Law, chaired by the Prime Minister and aims to fight human trafficking throughout Côte d'Ivoire. Oversees the implementation of the National Action Plan and Strategy Against Human Trafficking, validates programs, coordinates government efforts, and monitors implementation of all projects related to human trafficking. (50) Includes representation at the local level through dedicated units charged with implementing the National Action Plan and Strategy Against Human Trafficking. (49; 50) The MWCPA serves as the executive secretariat and the committee comprises 13 ministries. This committee replaces a previous committee by the same name, which was defunct. (15) As of February 2018, this committee had not convened since its establishment in April 2017, although it has worked together informally to resolve some cases of human trafficking. (26)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

Government ministries coordinated effectively during the reporting period, and platforms bring together government offices and civil society members at the departmental and regional level to address issues of child labor. However, coordination on data collection among ministries and between different regions remains a challenge. (15)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including funding and mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor‡

Policy	Description
2010 Declaration of Joint Action to Support the Implementation of the Harkin-Engel Protocol (2010 Declaration) and Its Accompanying Framework of Action	Joint declaration by the Governments of Ghana, Côte d'Ivoire, and the United States, and the International Cocoa and Chocolate Industry. (75; 76; 34) Provides resources and coordinates with key stakeholders on efforts to reduce the worst forms of child labor in cocoa-producing areas. (75; 76) Ensures that all project efforts implemented under the Declaration and Framework align with Côte d'Ivoire's national action plans to promote coherence and sustainability. (75; 76; 34) USDOL-funded projects and some industry-funded projects carried out activities that support the spirit of this policy during the reporting period. (34)
Partnership Agreement	Forms an agreement between the International Cocoa Initiative (ICI) and CNS in support of the National Action Plan for the Fight Against the Worst Forms of Child Labor. Aims to reinforce and expand SOSTECl and improve school infrastructure. (77; 78) In November 2017, ICI and CNS signed another agreement to revise the training and awareness-raising tool by ICI and coordinate child labor monitoring and remediation efforts in cocoa growing areas. (15; 56)
Joint Declarations Against Cross-Border Trafficking	Bilateral declarations or cooperative agreements between Côte d'Ivoire, Ghana, and Burkina Faso to combat child trafficking and the worst forms of child labor. (79; 80; 81; 82) In 2017, Côte d'Ivoire and Burkina Faso agreed to implement a previously signed agreement to create and operationalize a permanent commission to combat the cross-border trafficking of children. (83)
Child Protection Policies	Includes the National Policy on Child Protection (PNPE) (2014–2018), led by the MWCPA, which seeks to reduce the incidence of violence, abuse, and exploitation of children; and the National Policy of Judicial Protection of Childhood and Youth (PNPJEJ) (2016–2020), led by the MOJ, aims to provide judicial protection to child victims of forced labor, which has yet to be officially adopted by the Council of Ministers. (84; 85) In 2017, the MWCPA began drafting a decree to establish a monitoring and coordination committee for the policy's implementation. (15)
National Development Plan (2016–2020)	Aims to improve governance and accelerate human capital development, including by combatting child labor. Allocates almost $6.1 million over 5 years to conduct diagnostic studies on child labor and child trafficking; creates a unit to combat the worst forms of child labor in regional labor inspectorate offices; expands SOSTECl into 10 new departments; constructs 3 transit centers; and develops a national action plan to combat human trafficking, particularly of girls. (86) In 2017, launched SOSTECl (2018 – 2020)† which aims to expand SOSTECl into 33 new departments with a proposed budget of $4.3 million. (12; 56)

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Policy	Description
Compulsory Education Policy	In support of the Law on Education, aims to achieve 100 percent enrollment in primary school by 2020 and 100 percent enrollment in junior high by 2025. (29; 87) Allocates $1.34 billion to modernize the education system, including by building new classrooms, providing free textbooks to low-income families, and providing additional pedagogical training to teachers. (29) In 2017, the Ministry of Education constructed 8,166 primary school classrooms, 36 school cantinas, 74 latrines, and distributed 4.4 million school kits. The Cocoa and Coffee Council distributed a further 60,000 school kits and the MEPS distributed 100 school kits. (56)
Decent Work Country Program (2017–2020)†	In collaboration with the ILO, this program aims to improve working conditions, strengthen SOSTECI, and combat the worst forms of child labor. (66; 88) It is pending adoption by the Council of Ministers. (26)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (30; 31)

In 2017, the government pledged to intensify its efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor and protect its victims at the IV Global Conference on the Sustained Eradication of Child Labor. (89) However, the government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the World Bank's Country Partnership Framework. (90)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor‡

Program	Description
National Action Plan for the Fight Against the Worst Forms of Child Labor (NAP) (2015–2017)†	Coordinated by the CNS and the CIM, $24.4 million project aimed to significantly reduce the number of children engaged in the worst forms of child labor by improving the legal framework, sensitizing high-risk communities to the dangers of exploitative child labor, improving victim services, building the capacity of law enforcement, and improving educational infrastructure. (14; 71; 32) In 2017, received a budget of approximately $7.5 million. (56) At the IV Global Conference on the Sustained Eradication of Child Labor, the government pledged to develop a new National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking, Exploitation, and Child Labor. (89)
National Action Plan and Strategy Against Human Trafficking (2016–2020)†	With the support of UNODC and coordinated by CNLTP, $14.8 million project that aims to prevent human trafficking, expand social services for victims by improving physical infrastructure, provide training for law enforcement personnel and other stakeholders, promote coordination, and collect data on human trafficking. (65; 91) This plan will begin implementation after the CNLTP becomes functional. (26)
National Awareness Campaign Against Child Labor (2015–2017)†	CNS-led national awareness campaign against child labor which disseminated information to increase public awareness through television and radio broadcasts, billboards, and newspapers in French and local languages. Called on national actors to take a greater role in media campaigns to raise awareness about child labor. (91) In 2017, held two awareness campaigns and revised a 2013 agreement with the media to promote children's rights and combat child labor, which was signed by 191 media partners. (66; 92; 56)
USDOL-Funded Projects in Support of the 2010 Declaration	USDOL projects in cocoa-growing areas of Côte d'Ivoire and Ghana that aim to eliminate child labor through research, improved monitoring and enforcement, and implementation and expansion of SOSTECI. These projects include: Country Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce Child Labor (CLEAR) (2013–2017), $7.95 million project implemented in at least 10 countries by the ILO; Assessing Progress in Reducing Child Labor in Cocoa-Growing Areas of Côte d'Ivoire and Ghana (2015–2019), $3 million project implemented by NORC at the University of Chicago; and Eliminating Child Labor in Cocoa (2015–2019), $4.5 million project implemented by the International Cocoa Initiative. (93; 94; 95) For additional information, please see our website.
Industry-Funded Projects	Industry-funded projects to increase sustainability in the cocoa sector, improve farmer livelihoods and access to education, and combat the worst forms of child labor in cocoa-growing areas. Some projects support World Cocoa Foundation (WCF)'s CocoaAction (2014–2020) strategy and the spirit of the 2010 Declaration. (96; 34)
Centers for Vulnerable Children†	Operates approximately 90 MWCPA- and MEPS-funded social centers and 36 special education centers throughout the country that receive women and children who are victims of crime or violence, including children who are victims of the worst forms of child labor. (26) International NGOs also operate additional centers that provide meals and basic education. (91) In 2017, provided assistance to 167 victims of child trafficking or labor exploitation. (26)

Program	Description
Programs to Promote Education†	These programs aim to raise school attendance rates in rural areas, particularly among girls, by providing school meals, birth registration, and constructing community schools ( écoles de proximité ). Programs include: the Integrated Program for Sustainable School Feeding, a $42.5 million WFP-funded program; the Ministry of National Education School Feeding Program; and the McGovern-Dole School Feeding Program, a $31 million joint initiative between WFP and the U.S. Department of Agriculture, in coordination with the Ministry of National Education; and the Birth Registration Program, a MOJ and UNICEF program that aims to provide birth registration to 1 million children who are currently enrolled in primary school. (65; 97; 98; 16) In 2017, provided birth certificates to 1,165,325 primary school students. (56)
World Bank-funded Projects	Programs aim to improve access to education and provide poverty relief. Includes: Emergency Support Project for Basic Education (2012–2017), $41.4 million project to construct and rehabilitate classrooms and school latrines; Second Fiscal Management, Education, Energy and Cocoa Reforms Development Policy Operation (2017–2020), $125 million project to increase the number of primary school teachers; Productive Social Safety Net (2015–2020), $50 million cash transfer project to poor households in the Central, Northern, and Western regions of Côte d'Ivoire. (99; 100; 101) By the end of 2017, recruited or trained 24,000 teachers, built or rehabilitated 1,272 classrooms, provided cash transfers to 5,000 households, (102; 103)
Community Animation Program for Child Protection (2015–2020)†	$228,168 MWCPA program as part of the National Policy on Child Protection, implemented with technical assistance from UNICEF, provides a service package for behavior change and improving communication at the community level that can be tailored to meet local needs. (57; 104; 105) At the IV Global Conference on the Sustained Eradication of Child Labor, the government pledged to intensify social protection programs and continue support for the Community Animation Program. (89)
National Solidarity Fund†	$2.5 million fund that provides assistance to poor households, including victims of human trafficking. (55; 106) In 2017, provided funding to assist in the repatriation of human trafficking victims. (26)

† Program is funded by the Government of Côte d'Ivoire.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (107; 108; 109)

The government dedicated funding to SOSTECI for its expansion and disbursed funds to the National Action Plan for the Fight Against the Worst Forms of Child Labor (NAP), but the scope of existing programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, and not all relevant sectors are addressed. (15) In addition, the government primarily relies on NGOs to provide social services to victims of child labor and child trafficking and government services are under-resourced. (16; 110; 4)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Côte d'Ivoire (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Strengthen the Labor Inspectorate by authorizing the Inspectorate to assess penalties and ensure that criminal investigators receive periodic training so they can adequately enforce criminal laws related to child labor.	2014 – 2017
	Publish information about whether inspections are conducted at worksites, and if routine inspections target sectors where child labor is known to occur in Côte d'Ivoire.	2016 – 2017
	Ensure that labor inspectorates and criminal law enforcement agencies receive an adequate amount of funding to conduct inspections and investigations throughout the country, including in the informal sector.	2014 – 2017
	Increase the number of labor inspectors in accordance with the ILO's technical advice.	2009 – 2017
	Ensure that victims are not punished for the worst forms of child labor.	2017
Coordination	Ensure all coordinating bodies function as intended and are able to carry out their mandates.	2017
	Improve coordination on data collection among ministries and between different regions.	2012 – 2017
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into all existing policies.	2013 – 2017

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Social Programs	Improve access to education by eliminating all school-related fees, improving the accessibility of schools, ensuring that schools are free of physical and sexual abuse, and increasing the number of teachers, sanitation facilities, and schools, particularly in rural areas.	2011 – 2017
	Expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem in Côte d'Ivoire and institute programs to address child labor in all relevant sectors.	2009 – 2017
	Ensure that victims of the worst forms of child labor are able to access social services throughout the country.	2015 – 2017

In 2017, Djibouti made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the year, the Djibouti National Police worked with the International Organization for Migration to interview over 1,000 migrants for trafficking indicators, prioritizing cases of women and children. In addition, the government continued its support of the National Family Solidarity program and provided cash transfers to low-income migrant families. However, children in Djibouti engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Children also perform dangerous tasks in street work. Law enforcement efforts are inadequate to prevent and combat child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Djibouti engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1). Children also perform dangerous tasks in street work. (2; 3; 4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Djibouti.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	12.3 (23,693)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	67.4
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	10.2
Primary Completion Rate (%)		57.5

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2017, published by the UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (5)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's Analysis of Statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 3, 2006. (6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Caring for livestock, mostly goats (2; 7)
Services	Domestic work† (2; 8; 1)
	Street work, such as shining shoes, washing and guarding cars, cleaning storefronts, sorting merchandise, collecting garbage, begging, and selling items, including khat (2; 3; 8; 1; 9)
	Working in restaurants, small shops, and family businesses (2; 8; 1)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2; 10; 11; 12; 1; 13)
	Forced domestic work and begging, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2; 1)
	Use in illicit activities, including the selling of marijuana and recreational drugs (12; 1; 14; 7)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Limited evidence suggests that children, including undocumented migrant girls, are vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation in Djibouti City and the Ethiopia-Djibouti trucking corridor. (11; 15) Girls from poor Djiboutian families may also engage in commercial sexual exploitation. (2) Although primary and middle school are tuition-free, other school-related expenses or family pressures may prevent children from attending school. (16; 13) Enrollment rates are lower for children living in rural areas, and children living in poverty, especially girls, thus making these children more vulnerable to child labor. (17)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Djibouti has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Djibouti

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Djibouti's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including prohibition of commercial sexual exploitation of children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Article 5 of the Labor Code (18)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 108 and 110 of the Labor Code (18)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 110 of the Labor Code (18)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 2 and 290 of the Labor Code; Article 23 of the Law Regarding Terrorism and Other Serious Crimes (18; 19)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 1 of the Law on the Fight Against the Trafficking of Persons and the Illegal Smuggling of Migrants; Article 23 of the Law Regarding Terrorism and Other Serious Crimes (19; 20)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 462–463 of the Penal Code; Articles 1 and 8 of the Law on the Fight Against the Trafficking of Persons and the Illegal Smuggling of Migrants (20; 21)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 355–356 and 461 of the Penal Code (21)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment
State Compulsory	N/A*
State Voluntary	Yes	18	Article 1 of the National Army Amendment Decree (22)
Non-state	Yes	18	Articles 149–151 and 461 of the Penal Code (21)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 4 of the Law on the Orientation of the Education System (23)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 16 of the Law on the Orientation of the Education System (23)

* No conscription (24; 25)

Sources indicate that the Labor Code's minimum age provisions do not apply to children working outside of a formal employment contract. (18; 26; 27) The Labor Code applies only to children who perform work under a formal employment agreement, which does not conform to international standards requiring all children be protected under the law establishing a minimum age for work. In addition, although the Labor Code prohibits the employment of children between the ages of 16 and 18 in domestic work, hotels, and bars, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children do not include street work, an area in which there is evidence of work in an unhealthy environment. (18; 28; 27)

The law does not specifically criminalize the offering of a child for prostitution, the production of pornography, pornographic performances, or the use of a child for prostitution. (20; 21)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor (MOL) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Enforce all labor laws, including child labor laws and regulations. (3) Through its Inspectorate of Labor and Social Laws, regulate youth employment. (29)
National Police, including the Vice Squad	Enforce criminal laws and investigate crimes related to child labor. (30)
Ministry of Justice	Prosecute child labor cases referred by the MOL. (3)
National Commission on Human Rights	Receive complaints and investigate cases of human rights violations, including child labor. (31; 32) Assist victims in obtaining legal aid to prosecute violators. (31)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Djibouti took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including penalty assessment authorization.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

* The government does not publish this information.

The government's policy not to inspect the informal business sector inhibits the identification of child labor cases, which tend to occur in the informal sector. (13)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Djibouti took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including prosecution planning.

Djibouti

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Training for Investigators
Initial Training for New Employees	Yes (33)	Unknown* (13)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (33)	Unknown* (13)

Number of Convictions	Unknown (12)	Unknown* (13)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	No (12)	Unknown* (13)

* The government does not publish this information.

The Djibouti National Police (DNP) worked with the IOM to interview over 1,000 migrants for trafficking indicators, prioritizing cases of women and children. The DNP depends on the IOM to refer cases for prosecution. However, there were no referrals made in 2017. (34) Although the DNP may legally make the referrals for prosecution, it lacks the resources to do so which in turn leads many government agencies to rely on international organizations to handle such cases. (7)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
Anti-Trafficking Working Group	Coordinate efforts to combat human trafficking. Led by the Ministry of Justice and includes the MOL. (4; 33) In addition to creating a coordination and overall outreach strategy, the group hosted several information sessions open to the public to explain Trafficking in persons. (7)
National Council for Children (CNE)	Promote children's rights. Led by the Prime Minister and includes eight other agencies, representatives from NGOs, the private sector, and elected officials. (35) The CNE has advocated for 1) newborn refugees and migrants to receive birth certificates, 2) education under governmental programs for refugees and asylum seekers, and 3) family reunification for unaccompanied migrant minors. (7)

Although the government has established an Anti-Trafficking Working Group, research found no evidence that the government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address other forms of child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons (2014–2020)	Aims to strengthen the legislative framework to combat human trafficking, protect and assist human trafficking victims, and establish a national referral mechanism between law enforcement officials and social service providers. (36) Although the anti-trafficking working group met more than ten times during the year, the plan has yet to be operationalized. (1)
UNDAF (2013–2017)	Provides access to basic social services to protect children against all forms of violence and exploitation. Includes plans for equal and quality access to basic education in both rural and urban areas. (37) UNDAF focused primarily on programs that build capacity for victim recognition and protection. (7) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement UNDAF during the reporting period.

Research was unable to determine if the government included child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the National Strategy and the Education Sector Strategic Plan. (2; 38; 33).

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to the prevention or elimination child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor‡

Program	Description
Strengthening the National Criminal Justice System's Response to Trafficking in Persons in Djibouti	$500,000 USDOS-funded program, implemented by UNODC in partnership with the Government, that establishes a national referral mechanism for victims of human trafficking and a mechanism for data collection, raises awareness of human trafficking, and conducts law enforcement trainings. (25; 39) In 2017, it designed and implemented a process to broaden communication between the government, civil society, NGOs, and UN organizations. (7)
National Family Solidarity Program†	Government-funded program implemented by the State Secretariat for National Solidarity that establishes cash transfers to support Djiboutian households in extreme poverty. (40) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Family Solidarity Program during the reporting period.
UNICEF-Funded Projects	Humanitarian Action for Children Project and UNICEF Country Program (2013–2018) promote access to quality education for children, especially from rural and poor urban areas, increase birth registration, and provide support for orphans and vulnerable children. (38; 41; 42) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the UNICEF-funded projects during the reporting period.
World Bank-Funded Programs	Enhancing Income Opportunities in DJ (2015-2019) aims to provide at least 2,200 youth with basic life skills training, coaching in business plan development, and access to finance. Access to Quality Education Project, a Global Partnership for Education-funded program, seeks to improve the learning environment in the first three years of primary education, construct classrooms, rehabilitate and extend schools in rural areas, train teachers, and procure student learning materials. (17; 43; 44) In 2017, provided 584 youth with cash transfers and built or renovated 47 classrooms in 7 schools. (45; 46)
WFP-Funded Projects in Support of Food Security	Alleviate food insecurity and build resiliency. Support for the National School Feeding Program provides daily meals at schools for 17,900 children. Enhancing the Resilience of Chronically Vulnerable Rural, Urban and Refugee Populations and Reducing Undernutrition in Djibouti increases resiliency of rural food-insecure populations to external stressors such as natural disasters. (47; 48; 49) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the WFP-Funded Projects in Support of Food Security during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Djibouti.

‡ The government had other programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (12; 25; 39)

Although the Government of Djibouti has implemented programs that target migrant children, research found no evidence of programs to assist children involved in domestic work, street work, and commercial sexual exploitation. (34) There are no official government-run shelters to assist child victims. (7)

As part of the World Day against Trafficking, the government produced a three-part newspaper series on street children to raise awareness among the public about their vulnerability to trafficking. (34)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Djibouti (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children are comprehensive.	2009 – 2017
	Ensure that all children are afforded minimum age for work protections under the law, including children working outside formal employment relationships.	2015 – 2017
	Ensure that laws criminally prohibit using and offering a child for prostitution, production of pornography, and pornographic performances.	2012 – 2017
Enforcement	Publish data related to labor law and criminal law enforcement efforts associated to child labor.	2010 – 2017
	Strengthen the Labor Inspectorate by allowing the assessment of penalties.	2015 – 2017

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure that the Labor Inspectorate conducts inspections in informal business sectors.	2017
	Provide the necessary resources to the DNP to make referrals for prosecution of child labor related violations.	2017
Coordination	Establish coordinating mechanisms to combat child labor.	2009 – 2017
Government Policies	Implement the National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons by taking concrete steps to combat child trafficking.	2017
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into existing policies.	2014 – 2017
	Undertake activities to implement the UNDAF.	2016 – 2017
Social Programs	Conduct research to determine the activities carried out by children working in agriculture to inform policies and programs.	2013 – 2017
	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children, including girls, by removing school-related expenses.	2015 – 2017
	Implement programs to specifically address children involved in domestic work, street work, and commercial sexual exploitation.	2009 – 2017

Dominica

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2017, Dominica made a minimal advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. Following the devastation of Hurricane Maria, which damaged or destroyed most schools on the island, the government collaborated with UNICEF to provide temporary learning spaces for children. However, many schools remained closed, and the government lacked funding to rebuild schools. Children experienced long interruptions to their education and may be more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor due to the disaster. Although research is limited, there is some evidence that suggests that children in Dominica engage in the worst forms of child labor, including girls under age 16 who are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation. The government's ability to prevent children from becoming engaged in exploitative work is limited due to exceptions to the minimum age for hazardous work. The country also lacks prohibitions against the use of children in prostitution, pornography, or pornographic performances, and the use of children in illicit activities, including the production and trafficking of drugs.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Although research is limited, there is some evidence that children in Dominica engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Limited evidence suggests that girls under age 16 are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation in Dominica, with remuneration including rides, clothing, or cell phones. However, no current research on the child labor situation in Dominica is available. (1; 2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Dominica. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		117.9

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (3) Data were unavailable from Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis, 2016. (4)

In September 2017, Hurricane Maria devastated Dominica, damaging or destroying roads and most buildings on the island. The government estimated that 20,000 people fled the island and that, by the end of the year, an additional 20,000 remained homeless. (5; 6) The government converted some schools into emergency shelters and collaborated with UNICEF to provide temporary learning spaces for children. (5) Although some schools reopened in November, the government lacked funding to rebuild schools, and children experienced long interruptions to their education due to the destruction. Many children left Dominica to attend school in other Eastern Caribbean states. (6; 5; 7) Although there were no reports of increased commercial sexual exploitation of children after the hurricane, children in Dominica may be more vulnerable to child labor and the worst forms of child labor following the disaster. (8)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Dominica has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 2).

Table 2. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 3). However, gaps exist in Dominica's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 3. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Articles 2 and 46 of the Education Act 1997 (9)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 4 of the Constitution; Sections 2, 8, 10, and 13 of the Transnational Organized Crime (Prevention and Control) Act (10; 11)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Sections 2, 8, 10, and 13 of the Transnational Organized Crime (Prevention and Control) Act (11)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Sections 2, 10, and 13 of the Transnational Organized Crime (Prevention and Control) Act; Article 18 of the Sexual Offenses Act (11; 12)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Prohibition of Military Recruitment
State Compulsory	N/A†
State Voluntary	N/A†
Non-state	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 2 of the Education Act 1997 (9)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 15 of the Education Act 1997 (9)

† No standing military (13)

Article 46 of the Education Act prohibits the employment of children ages 5 to 16 during the school year, but allows students ages 14 and older to work during school vacations or in school-sponsored employment training programs without defining the conditions, specific activities, or number of hours permissible for light work. (9)

Article 7 of the Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act prohibits children under age 18 from working at night, unless they are working with members of their family, but the law does not otherwise prohibit the employment of children in work that is likely to jeopardize their health, safety, or morals. (14) The government has not enacted laws or regulations explicitly prohibiting the use of children in prostitution, pornography, pornographic performances, or illicit activities, including the production and trafficking of drugs. (15)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Justice, Immigration and National Security that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 4. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Labor Division, Ministry of Justice, Immigration and National Security	Conduct inspections and enforce laws related to child labor. Authorized to conduct unannounced inspections at any location with employees and to take legal action against employers violating child labor laws. (16; 17; 18) Report cases in which children are found in exploitative labor situations to police and social services. (16; 17; 18)
Ministry of Health and Social Services	Conduct inspections and enforce laws related to child labor. Report cases in which children are found in exploitative labor situations to police. (16; 17) Provide social services, including education, housing, counseling, and financial aid in child labor cases. (16; 18; 19)
Police Force	Enforce criminal laws, including those related to child labor. (17)

Labor Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether labor law enforcement agencies in Dominica took actions in 2017 to combat child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Justice, Immigration and National Security that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including penalty assessment authorization.

Table 5. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (1)	Unknown
Number of Labor Inspectors	4 (1)	Unknown
Inspectorate Authorized to Assess Penalties	No (1)	No (1)
Training for Labor Inspectors
Initial Training for New Employees	Unknown	Unknown
Training on New Laws Related to Child Labor	N/A	Unknown
Refresher Courses Provided	Unknown	Unknown
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted	480 (1)	Unknown
Number Conducted at Worksites	480 (1)	Unknown
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	0 (1)	Unknown
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties were Imposed	N/A	Unknown
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that were Collected	N/A	Unknown
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (1)	Unknown
Routine Inspections Targeted	No (1)	Unknown
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (1)	Yes (1)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (1)	Unknown
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (1)	Yes (1)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (1)	Yes (1)

In addition to the labor inspectors employed by the Ministry of Justice, Immigration and National Security, the Ministry of Health and Social Services employs health and safety inspectors and fire inspectors who also inspect for labor violations. (18) Government officials report that although the number of labor inspectors is sufficient to inspect labor violations, too few technical officers are available to adequately enforce labor laws. (18)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Dominica took actions in 2017 to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including financial resources.

Table 6. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Training for Investigators
Initial Training for New Employees	Unknown	Unknown
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A	Unknown
Refresher Courses Provided	Unknown	Unknown
Number of Investigations	0 (1)	Unknown
Number of Violations Found	0 (1)	Unknown
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	0 (1)	Unknown
Number of Convictions	0 (1)	Unknown
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (1)	Yes (1)

The Police Force budget is insufficient, and police lack the transportation and equipment needed to adequately enforce criminal laws. (1)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that the government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that the government has established policies to address child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

Although the Government of Dominica has implemented programs that may contribute to preventing or eliminating child labor (Table 7), research found no evidence that it has carried out programs specifically designed to assist children subjected to commercial sexual exploitation.

Table 7. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Basic Needs Trust Fund	Caribbean Development Bank-implemented program that aims to reduce poverty through livelihood services, improved infrastructure, capacity-building projects, and technical services. (20; 21)
Education Trust Fund†	Ministry of Education and Human Resource Development (MOE) program that provides financial assistance for textbooks, transportation, and registration and exam fees to students in secondary school who would otherwise be unable to complete their education. (17; 22)
School Textbook Provision Scheme†	MOE program that subsidizes the cost of textbooks for primary and secondary school students. (17; 23)
School Feeding Program†	MOE program that provides lunch to primary school students in targeted areas. (17; 24)
CHANCES†	Ministry of Health and Social Services program that supports an emergency residential shelter to provide short-term services to abused and neglected children. May accept victims of the worst forms of child labor. (16; 18; 25; 26)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, the following actions would advance the elimination of child labor in Dominica (Table 8).

Dominica

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Define the conditions, activities, and number of hours permissible for light work.	2014 – 2017
	Ensure that the minimum age for hazardous work is 18 for all children.	2015 – 2017
	Enact legislation to expressly prohibit child prostitution and the using, procuring, or offering of a child for the production of pornography or pornographic performances.	2011 – 2017
	Prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, including the production and trafficking of drugs.	2014 – 2017
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2017
Enforcement	Authorize the Labor Inspectorate to assess penalties.	2016 – 2017
	Make labor and criminal law enforcement data publicly available.	2014 – 2017
	Employ enough technical officers to provide sufficient labor law enforcement.	2015 – 2017
	Ensure that labor inspectors and criminal investigators receive training on the worst forms of child labor.	2015 – 2017
	Ensure that the police have sufficient funding to enforce criminal laws.	2016 – 2017
Coordination	Establish coordinating mechanisms to combat the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation.	2016 – 2017
Government Policies	Adopt policies to address the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation.	2016 – 2017
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2014 – 2017
	Institute programs to address commercial sexual exploitation of children.	2017
	Continue to reopen and rebuild schools, and ensure that disaster relief efforts include measures to prevent children from engaging in child labor and the worst forms of child labor.	2017

In 2017, the Dominican Republic made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. This year, the Dominican Republic is receiving an assessment of moderate advancement because, in contrast to previous years, research did not identify cases of children without identity documents being denied access to education and the government took new efforts to adequately address this unlawful practice, which mainly impacted children of Haitian descent. These efforts include designating a point of contact within the Ministry of Education to handle school denial cases for children without identity documents and reiterating a directive to public schools that all children must be allowed to attend school, regardless of their documentation. In addition, the Government of the Dominican Republic created 19 Local Vigilance Committees to combat child labor in high-risk municipalities. The government also continued to fund and participate in multiple programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including two new programs that will strengthen the capacity of the Ministry of Labor to enforce laws and regulations related to child and forced labor, particularly in the agricultural sector. However, children in the Dominican Republic engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Other gaps remain, including limited human and financial resources for the enforcement of child labor laws and inadequate assistance for victims of commercial sexual exploitation and harmful agricultural work.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in the Dominican Republic engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. (1; 2; 3) Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (4; 5; 6; 7; 8) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in the Dominican Republic.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in the Dominican Republic engage in commercial sexual exploitation, particularly in coastal, touristic locations. The porous border between Haiti and the Dominican Republic has allowed some children to be trafficked into the Dominican Republic, where they have been engaged in commercial sexual exploitation or forced to work in agriculture, domestic work, street vending, or begging. (24; 32; 1; 14; 2; 33; 3) Some children, including Haitian children and Dominican-born children of Haitian descent, work in sugarcane production often alongside their parents, and live in communities that often lack basic services, including schools. (6; 11; 34; 13; 12; 14; 15; 35)

Children of undocumented migrant parents, many of Haitian descent, are particularly vulnerable to labor exploitation because many lack birth or residency documents. (34; 36; 37; 1; 28; 2; 38; 39) During the reporting period, the government extended the benefits of the National Regularization Plan to offer an additional year of legal residency status to approximately 240,000 individuals with irregular immigration status and issued birth certificates through the Central Electoral Board to more than 21,000. (40; 15; 41; 42; 43). Despite these efforts, many Dominican-born persons of Haitian descent, including children, continue to remain in undocumented status as a result of the 2013 Constitutional Tribunal Judgment and were not able to obtain legal residency documents under Law 169-14 or the National Plan to Regularize Foreigners during the reporting year. (15; 44; 45; 46; 41; 47) In addition, Haitian children who remain in the Dominican Republic after their parents have been repatriated to Haiti due to their undocumented status are more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (34; 48; 49)

National law guarantees free public education, which requires that all children attend school until age 18, and prohibits the exclusion of children from the educational system based on a lack of identity documents. (48; 50; 51; 52; 53) However, the current Operations Manual of Public Education Centers of the Ministry of Education incorrectly requires school administrators to require children to present identity documents to enroll in school. (54; 55) Research did not identify cases of children without identity documents being denied access to education during the reporting period, or cases of schools requiring children to present identity documents to take the twelfth grade national exam to graduate from secondary school. (8; 56; 41; 40) During the reporting period, the Ministry of Education designated its Office of Community Participation as the point of contact to handle school denial cases for children without identity documents and reiterated a directive to all public schools that all children must be allowed to attend school, regardless of their documentation. (8; 56; 41; 57; 58; 40) Reports indicate that these efforts have improved access to education through secondary school for children without identity documents. (8; 56; 41; 40)

In general, many children continue to experience challenges in accessing education and high school dropout rates at the primary and secondary levels, in which there are shortages of teachers and a lack of school infrastructure. These issues particularly affect children living in rural areas and in communities predominantly of Haitian descent. Sources also indicate that some children of Haitian descent face discrimination by teachers and peers; travel long distances to schools; and are unable to afford school fees and supplies. (59; 60; 61; 15; 3) In addition, because the Ministry of Education requires that each student has a birth certificate on file to issue a high school diploma, children without identity documents are unable to document that they have completed high school. (43; 62)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The Dominican Republic has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in the Dominican Republic's legal framework to adequately protect children from child labor, including the prohibition of military recruitment by non-state groups.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

‡ Age calculated based on available information (51; 65)

In November 2017, during the IV Global Conference on the Sustained Eradication of Child Labor in Argentina, the Government of the Dominican Republic pledged to increase the minimum age for work to age 15. (69)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor (MT) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MT)	Lead efforts to eliminate child labor, conduct labor inspections, and direct the Child Labor Directorate (DTI) to investigate child labor. Refers children found in exploitative conditions to social services, mainly the National Council for Children and Adolescents (CONANI). (15; 70; 71; 72; 24)
National Council for Children and Adolescents (CONANI)	Develop and implement policies and programs to eradicate all forms of violence against children, including child labor, as well as improve the employability of young people. Coordinate with the MT to protect children against labor exploitation and enforce labor laws. (15; 70; 73; 74)
Office of the Attorney General (AG)	Prosecute crimes involving children, including criminal violations related to the commercial sexual exploitation of children and other worst forms of child labor. Oversee the Special Prosecutor for Migrant Smuggling and Human Trafficking, which receives notifications of alleged violations related to the worst forms of child labor through a hotline. (75; 74; 1; 14)
National Police's Trafficking in Persons Unit and the Directorate of Migration	Enforce criminal laws, including those prohibiting the worst forms of child labor, and coordinate with the AG in the prosecution of perpetrators. Under the Ministry of the Interior. (20; 75; 1; 14)
Specialized Corps for Tourist Safety (CESTUR)	Prevent child sex abuse and commercial sexual exploitation in touristic areas, rescue child victims, and arrest and bring to justice child sex offenders. Overseen by the Ministry of Defense. (73; 14)
Local Vigilance Committees*	Prevent child labor at the local level by alerting law enforcement of activities linked to child labor, directing victims of child labor to social services, and working closely with the National Steering Committee to Eliminate Child Labor (CDN) to raise awareness of child labor. (76; 22) In 2017, 19 Vigilance Committees were created in municipalities with a high presence of child labor. (22)

* Agency responsible for child labor enforcement was created during the reporting period.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in the Dominican Republic took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the MT that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including penalty assessment authorization.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (18; 20)	Yes (18; 8)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (23)	Yes (23; 8)

‡ Data are from January 1, 2017 to October 31, 2017. (8)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of the Dominican Republic’s workforce, which includes over 4.7 million workers. According to the ILO’s technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, the Dominican Republic should employ about 341 labor inspectors. (77; 78; 79) In 2017, the Child Labor Directorate received $32,330 from the MT and $389,578 from external donations to increase labor law enforcement actions to combat child labor and conduct awareness-raising activities, an increase from the $140,000 that was allocated in 2016. (20; 23; 20)

The MT’s process for labor inspections includes a preliminary visit, during which inspectors inform employers of violations and establish periods for remediation but do not issue fines. Upon expiration of the remediation periods, inspectors conduct re-inspections to determine whether the violations have been remedied. (63; 80) If re-inspections find that the identified violations persist, the MT files infraction reports with its local office, which then transfers the infraction reports to the relevant local court for adjudication. (63; 80) This two-tiered inspection process puts a strain on the MT’s limited human and financial resources and may not sufficiently deter employers from exploiting children in the workplace, particularly in remote rural areas where re-inspections are more difficult and less consistent. In addition, evidence suggests that some inspection reports do not set a timeframe for the remediation of the violations identified. (81) Furthermore, the lack of published information on the results of inspections prevents a complete understanding of how adequate this inspection system is in practice. (20)

Although the 2008 General Inspection Protocol and the 2011 Inspection Protocol for Agriculture instruct inspectors to assess child labor violations by reviewing workers’ identity documents and employers’ records, making observations, and conducting interviews, the widespread lack of identity documents impedes both inspectors and employers from verifying the ages of workers and guaranteeing that children under age 18 are not participating in dangerous or unhealthy work. (6; 16; 82; 80) The MT indicated that improvements could be made with respect to how inspectors conduct interviews, ask follow-up questions, and use inspection data to strengthen the inspection system. (16) Moreover, reports indicate that in some cases, Spanish-speaking inspectors working without translation assistance have been responsible for interviewing Creole-speaking workers with limited or no Spanish-language abilities, which has further hindered the efficacy of those inspections. (20)

From January through October 2017, the MT conducted 66,840 labor inspections, including 27 targeted child labor inspections in high-risk sectors, such as agriculture, construction, mining, and services in both rural and urban areas, mainly in Santo Domingo, La Romana, Sanchez Ramirez, and Santiago Provinces. (20; 23; 22; 8) During this period, each inspector conducted an average of 380 inspections; it is unknown whether the high number of inspections per inspector affected the quality of these inspections. (8) Some NGOs and labor unions have reported that inspections are not always conducted in a timely manner after requests are made. In addition, evidence suggests that inspection reports often contain errors and contradictions that undermine the credibility of these reports, including by limiting the sample size of worksites for inspection in large rural facilities. (27; 83; 81) Reports also indicate that substandard labor inspections have hindered the ability of the Office of the Attorney General (AG) to pursue prosecutions on criminal matters involving child labor issues. (83)

Dominican Republic

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

A formal referral mechanism is in place that allows the MT to refer child labor victims found during labor inspections to the National Council for Children and Adolescents (CONANI) for social services. During the reporting period, the MT reported that it removed 319 victims of child labor, mainly from the agriculture and services sectors, and transferred them to CONANI, where they received social and reintegration services. (23; 22; 8)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in the Dominican Republic took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the lack of publicly available enforcement information, coordination, and financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Training for Investigators
Initial Training for New Employees	Unknown	Unknown
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A	N/A
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (75)	Yes (75)
Number of Investigations	19 (84)	26 (8; 85)
Number of Violations Found	19 (84)	Unknown
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	21 (84)	Unknown
Number of Convictions	13 (84)	Unknown
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (27)	Yes (27; 8)

In 2017, the AG's Special Prosecutor for Migrant Smuggling and Human Trafficking employed 5 investigators and conducted 26 investigations regarding the worst forms of child labor, including on commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking. (8; 85) The National Police maintains a Trafficking in Persons Unit that conducted 83 investigations during the reporting period. It is unknown how many of these investigations involved crimes against children. (85) Despite these efforts, reports indicate that the capacity of both enforcement agencies to identify, investigate, and prosecute criminal cases related to the worst forms of child labor are limited due to a lack of human and financial resources. (20; 1; 85) In addition, reports indicate that coordination between the MT and the AG has been limited due mainly to a lack of adequate case tracking systems and that not all criminal violations identified by the MT have been referred to, and subsequently investigated and prosecuted adequately by the AG. (83; 56; 8)

In 2017, the AG reported that it removed 35 child victims of commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking and transferred them to CONANI, where they received social and reintegration services. (75; 8) Despite these efforts, reports indicate that CONANI does not have the resources, facilities, and institutional capacity to meet the demand for services nationwide. (2; 5; 85; 3)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including insufficient funding for key coordinating bodies to carry out their mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
National Steering Committee to Eliminate Child Labor (CDN)	Develop policies, approve programs, and coordinate, monitor, and evaluate efforts to combat child labor in the Dominican Republic. Overseen by the MT and composed of ministerial representatives, labor unions, private sector representatives, and NGOs. (15; 24; 70; 86; 72) In 2017, met several times to implement activities under national action plans, including awareness-raising campaigns in agricultural zones, trained government and non-governmental stakeholders on child labor laws, and built the institutional capacity of 25 of the 48 Local and Municipal Committees. In addition, coordinated the creation of 19 Local Vigilance Committees to combat child labor in high-risk municipalities. (22; 76)

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
Inter-Institutional Commission Against Child Abuse and Commercial Sexual Exploitation	Coordinate actions to combat commercial sexual exploitation and child abuse. Led by CONANI and the MT, and includes representatives from the Ministries of Tourism, Education, and CESTUR, local and international organizations, and the Hotel and Restaurant Association. (75; 73; 1; 3) In 2017, launched a national awareness-raising campaign to combat commercial sexual exploitation of children and developed an online platform to train school officials on safe Internet usage and exploitation risks associated with new technologies. (1; 87; 22)
Inter-Agency Commission Against Trafficking in Persons (CITIM)	Coordinate efforts to combat human trafficking and responsible for developing and implementing national plans. Led by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and comprises 14 government agencies, including the MT and law enforcement agencies. (88; 1) In 2017, met multiple times to draft a new national action plan on trafficking in persons and worked to develop a case management information system to improve tracking of human trafficking cases. (89; 85)
Social Policies Coordination Cabinet (GCPS)	Coordinate all social policies and conditional cash transfer programs, such as the Progressing with Solidarity Program (PROSOLI). Led by the Vice President. (20; 70) In 2017, implemented activities to expand access to PROSOLI by vulnerable groups, including by establishing a partnership with an international organization to provide reintegration services to child victims of commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking, as well as to children without identity documents. (90; 91)

Evidence suggest that the Local and Municipal Committees of the National Steering Committee to Eliminate Child Labor (CDN) face limitations in their coordination efforts due to a lack of financial resources to adequately carry out their mandates. (92)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including insufficient funding for implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Strategic Plan to Eradicate the Worst Forms of Child Labor (PEN) (2006–2020)	Identifies the roles and responsibilities of government agencies and municipal representatives in eradicating the worst forms of child labor. Prioritizes prevention, protection, assistance, and the progressive eradication of the worst forms of child labor. (20; 71; 93) In 2017, conducted training sessions on child labor laws and programs for 499 members of the system to prevent and eradicate child labor. (22)
Roadmap Towards the Elimination of Child Labor in the Dominican Republic (2016–2020)	Aims to eliminate child labor by 2020. Sets targets and indicators for poverty reduction, health, education, institutional coordination, awareness raising, and information sharing. (23; 70; 94; 72; 3) In 2017, established 19 Local Vigilance Committees to combat child labor in high-risk municipalities. (22)
Education Pact (2014–2030)	Seeks to improve the quality of, and access to, primary and secondary education by increasing attendance and graduation rates and enrolling more students in the Extended School Day Program. Includes strategies to combat child labor. (70; 95; 96) Implemented by the Ministry of Education and supported by World Bank. In 2017, focused on improving recruitment and training of school teachers and increasing primary and secondary graduation rates. (97)
National Development Strategy 2030 (END)	Aims to reduce poverty and inequality and includes programs that aim to combat child labor and provide universal education to all children. Includes strategies to expand access to secondary school, including for students without identity documents. (23; 70; 98) Implemented by the Ministry of Economy. (98) (59)

In 2017, the government drafted a new National Action Plan against Human Trafficking, but it was not approved during the reporting period. (85) Insufficient allocation of resources has slowed efforts to fully implement key policies related to child labor, including conducting planned activities in a timely manner. (99; 100; 2)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor‡

Program	Description
Project to Reduce Child Labor and Working Conditions in Agriculture in the Dominican Republic (2017-2021)*	$5 million USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO to support the efforts of the Government of the Dominican Republic to combat child labor and strengthen labor law enforcement while helping businesses prevent, detect, and eliminate labor abuses in the agriculture sector, in addition to enabling better educational and livelihood opportunities to families vulnerable to labor exploitation. (101) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
From Protocol to Practice: A Bridge to Global Action on Forced Labor (2015–2019)*	USDOL-funded global project implemented by the ILO to support global and national efforts to combat forced labor of adults and children under the 2014 ILO Protocol and supporting Recommendation to C.29 on Forced Labor. In the Dominican Republic, aims to build the capacity of the MT to enforce laws and regulations related to forced labor through improved data management systems and to work with labor inspectors. (102) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues Project	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries, including the Dominican Republic, to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by The Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to build the capacity of the national government, develop strategic policies to address the elimination of child labor in the Dominican Republic, and improve the evidence base on child labor through research. Additional information is available on the USDOL website. (103)
Progressing with Solidarity (PROSOLI)†	Government program that provides conditional cash transfers for low-income families to increase children's school attendance and reduce child labor. (70; 104; 90; 60; 3) The Vice President's Office reported that PROSOLI's School Attendance and School Subsidy Incentives in 2017 benefited 495,456 students, reducing school dropout rates among project participants by 3.8 percent and children's vulnerability to child labor. (90; 105)
Extended School Day Program ( Jornada Escolar Extendida )†	Ministry of Education program to extend school hours to a full day (8 a.m. to 4 p.m.) to improve educational achievement and reduce child labor. (106; 2; 107) As of October 2017, the program covers nearly 60 percent of the nation's school children and is aiming to provide coverage nationwide by the end of the 2018/2019 school year. (56; 8)
Regional Initiatives for the Elimination of Child Labor in Latin America and the Caribbean (2014–2018)	$2.2 million Government of Spain-funded, 4-year project implemented by the ILO that aims to strengthen public policies and government capacity to combat child labor in 19 countries in Latin America and the Caribbean, including the Dominican Republic. Seeks to develop information systems on the worst forms of child labor and increase youth employment in the Dominican Republic. (108)
Empowering and Supporting the Human Rights of Children and Youth (2012–2018)	$1.2 million Government of Canada-funded, 6-year project that aims to build the capacity of government agencies and civil society organizations that are responsible for protecting children, especially those of Haitian descent, from sexual and labor exploitation. (109)
Line 700 Hotline†	Office of the First Lady's free hotline to enable citizens to report cases of the worst forms of child labor. (73; 110)
Youth Alert Program (2012–2017)	USAID-funded project to protect at-risk youth from crime and promote access to education and vocational training programs, including for youth without identity documents. By the end of 2017, the program has benefited 140,204 youth, including by assisting 2,039 to obtain identity documents. (111; 112; 113)
UNICEF Country Program (2018–2022)*	$15.4 million UNICEF-funded program that supports the government's efforts to improve education, health, social inclusion, and protection for children in the Dominican Republic. Includes projects to increase birth registration rates and build the capacity of relevant government agencies to protect children, especially those without identity documents, from violence, sexual exploitation, and trafficking. (60; 114; 3)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of the Dominican Republic.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (18; 115; 116; 117; 118)

In an effort to improve the national education system, the government has allocated 4 percent of the national GDP in its budget for primary and secondary education for the fifth consecutive year. (23; 2; 8; 3) Although the Progressing with Solidarity (PROSOLI) program has been effective in reducing child labor and increasing school enrollment among its project participants, the program requires participants to present identification documents to access program benefits, which likely limits the participation of those individuals lacking such documentation, many of whom are particularly vulnerable to child labor. (16; 119) Although the Dominican Republic has programs that target the worst forms of child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, particularly to address commercial sexual exploitation of children and harmful work in agricultural areas. (32; 2; 3)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in the Dominican Republic (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Criminally prohibit the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2017
Enforcement	Authorize the Labor Inspectorate to assess penalties.	2015 – 2017
	Publish information on the number of child labor penalties imposed that were collected, the initial training for new criminal law enforcement officers, the number of criminal labor violations found, the number of prosecutions initiated, and the number of convictions secured.	2009 – 2017
	Increase the number of labor inspectors in accordance with the ILO's technical advice to provide adequate coverage of the workforce, especially in remote rural areas.	2009 – 2017
	Increase the human and financial resources, as well as training for criminal law investigators to ensure adequate criminal law enforcement related to child labor.	2009 – 2017
	Reform the two-tiered inspection system to ensure that labor inspectors are able to promptly follow up on violation remediation to improve enforcement of laws prohibiting child labor and discourage the use of child labor by employers.	2012 – 2017
	Establish a system to verify the age of young workers to better protect children without birth certificates or other legal documentation from exploitation.	2012 – 2017
	Improve training of inspectors to increase the quality of interviews with employers and workers, gather consistent documentation, conduct timely re-inspection to ensure compliance, and use inspection data to enable prosecution.	2012 – 2017
	Ensure that labor inspectors are able to communicate with Creole-speaking workers, including those who may be underage, to adequately conduct inspections for child labor violations.	2012 – 2017
	Determine whether the inspection ratio for each labor inspector is appropriate to ensure the quality and scope of inspections.	2016 – 2017
	Ensure that CONANI has sufficient resources and facilities to provide the necessary care for victims of child labor.	2015 – 2017
	Improve coordination and case tracking systems between the Ministry of Labor and the Office of the Attorney General to ensure violations are adequately investigated and prosecuted.	2013 – 2017
Coordination	Ensure that the National Steering Committee to Eliminate Child Labor's Local and Municipal Committees have sufficient resources to effectively coordinate efforts to address child labor.	2013 – 2017
Government Policies	Ensure that appropriate funding exists to effectively implement and coordinate policies related to child labor.	2009 – 2017
	Revise the Ministry of Education's Operations Manual of Public Education Centers to reflect Dominican law and policies that allow children without birth certificates or other identity documents to enroll in primary and secondary education and complete schooling.	2017
Social Programs	Increase efforts to issue identity documents to all children to reduce their vulnerability to labor exploitation.	2011 – 2017
	Increase school infrastructure and teacher availability, especially in rural areas, remove supply and school-related fees, and expand efforts to reduce discrimination in schools.	2011 – 2017
	Address the specific educational needs of vulnerable populations, including unaccompanied migrant children, children of parents who have been deported, and undocumented children.	2011 – 2017
	Conduct regular training for school administrators and public awareness campaigns on Dominican law and policies that allow children without birth certificates or other identity documents to enroll in primary and secondary education and complete schooling.	2011 – 2017
	Expand social protection programs, particularly for child victims of commercial sexual exploitation and harmful agricultural work.	2010 – 2017

In 2017, Ecuador made a significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government signed into law new protections for victims of trafficking and drafted legislation to protect girls who are victims of human trafficking. The government also created the Directorate for the Prevention of Trafficking in Persons and Migrant Smuggling within the Ministry of the Interior to lead all law enforcement and research operations related to human trafficking. In addition, the government adopted a new policy to support vulnerable populations, including through new welfare programs, and the Ministry of Tourism exchanged best practices with regional tourism ministries to prevent child sex tourism and human trafficking. However, children in Ecuador engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. In addition, Ecuador lacks effective coordinating mechanisms to combat child labor and programs providing adequate coverage of the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Ecuador engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (1; 2; 3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Ecuador.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	4.9 (168,530)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	97.3
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	5.6
Primary Completion Rate (%)		104.8

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2017, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (4)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's Analysis of Statistics from Encuesta Nacional de Empleo, Desempleo, y Subempleo, 2016. (5)

In 2017, the government conducted two national surveys capturing child labor data. (6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of bananas,† palm oil,† and flowers,† including the use of chemical products and machetes (2; 7; 8; 9; 6; 10) Fishing† (8; 9; 6)
Industry	Gold mining† and small-scale mining† (6) Production of bricks† (3; 11) Construction,† including loading construction materials, mixing materials to make concrete, and brickwork (3; 9; 11; 12; 6)
Services	Domestic work† (8; 6; 13) Street work, including begging, shoe shining, selling newspapers, and vending (7; 8; 9; 14; 15; 6; 10)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (14; 16; 17; 6) Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking and robbery (3; 17; 6; 18)

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced recruitment of children by Colombian non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict (12; 19; 20; 6)
	Use in the production of pornography (7)
	Forced labor in banana and palm plantations, floriculture, fishing, and in domestic work, street vending, and begging, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (21; 6; 22; 18)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Civil society and government contacts reported incidences of Peruvian children being recruited into forced labor under false promises of employment in illegal mines. (17; 6; 23) Migrant and refugee girls from Colombia, Peru, Dominican Republic, Haiti, and Venezuela are particularly vulnerable to labor trafficking in domestic servitude and forced begging. (6; 23) Indigenous children from the highlands between the ages 6 and 10 are trafficked for forced begging in Guayaquil, Quito, and Rumiñahui. (24; 10)

Migrant and refugee children from other Latin American countries, LGBTI children, girls from poor families, and indigenous and Afro-Ecuadorian girls are often used in commercial sexual exploitation, including in the provinces of Guayas and Manabí. Commercial sexual exploitation in Ecuador also occurs near illegal mining sites. (2; 3; 6; 18; 24; 25) Venezuelan girls are trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation in Ecuador. (18) Sex trafficking networks also recruit children in schools, and, increasingly, through social media platforms, encouraging children to recruit their friends and classmates. (6) On Ecuador’s northern border, children are forcibly recruited to engage in drug trafficking and robbery. (26)

Despite education being free in Ecuador, children face barriers to accessing education, including having to pay for uniforms and books, lack of space and teachers, and lack of transportation for children who must attend schools far from their homes. (27; 6) Many indigenous children abandon school early, both in rural and urban areas. (9; 16) Specifically, almost half of all indigenous children in rural areas, and 37 to 40 percent of those in urban areas, do not attend secondary school, which can make them more vulnerable to child labor. (28) The lack of schools in some areas specifically affects indigenous and refugee children, who must travel long distances to attend school. (6)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Ecuador has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government’s laws and regulations are in line with relevant international standards (Table 4).

In 2017, the government signed into law new protections for victims of trafficking. (34; 22) This law establishes a system to register and monitor victims of human trafficking and inform policy, action plans, and strategies to prevent trafficking. (34) The law also offers protections to families of trafficking victims and does not require testimony or a complaint to be filed to receive such services. (34) The Office of the President also issued regulations implementing this law. (36) The Ecuadorian legislature drafted legislation to prevent and eradicate violence against women and to protect girls who are victims of trafficking. (6) In collaboration with civil society, the private sector, and other government ministries, the Ministry of Labor (MOL) began drafting the Organic Integral Labor Code, which includes provisions on child labor and its worst forms and provides protections for adolescent workers. (18; 6)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MOL that may hinder adequate child labor enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Industrial Relations (MOL)	Monitor child labor, conduct labor inspections at worksites, and enforce child labor laws in the formal sector. Administer sanctions against companies found using child labor and collect fines. (2; 7) Using the Unified System of Registration of Child Labor (SURTl), collect information on child laborers and refer children to appropriate government services. (6)
Ministry of Economic and Social Inclusion (MIES), Office of Special Protection to Vulnerable Population	Provide remediation services to child laborers and their families. Assist victims of child labor found in the informal sector. (2; 37) Through its Office of Special Protection, maintain a national anti-child-labor program involving coordination with civil society organizations and local governments. (6) Run seven protection centers staffed by social workers, doctors, psychologists, and educators. (37)
Attorney General's Office	Enforce criminal laws against child labor, commercial sexual exploitation, and human trafficking. (12; 38)
Ministry of Interior	Oversee and evaluate all police actions, including the National Police Unit for Crimes against Children and Adolescents (DINAPEN). (23) DINAPEN investigates all crimes against children, including abuse, sexual exploitation, sex tourism, smuggling, kidnapping, exploitative child labor, and forced labor. (15; 39) DINAPEN's anti-trafficking unit also investigates child trafficking cases. (2)
Office of the Prosecutor	Try cases related to the worst forms of child labor. (7)
Ministry of Education	Help victims of child labor reintegrate into school through the Special Protection program. (40)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Ecuador took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MOL that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2016	2017

*The government does not publish this information.

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Ecuador's workforce, which includes more than 8 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Ecuador should employ about 534 labor inspectors. (2; 3; 41; 42) Furthermore, inspectors often lack the necessary resources, such as transportation, to fulfill their mandate. (2; 3; 38)

According to the ILO, one of the major obstacles in combating child labor in Ecuador is the absence of an adequate mechanism for receiving, routing, and addressing child labor charges and complaints. (3) While the government has created new mechanisms for identifying and referring child labor victims, it does not apply them consistently and uniformly. (3; 6) The absence of appropriate sanctions against employers also hinders efficient labor law enforcement. (6) Inspectors do not have sufficient knowledge of child labor laws. (6) Although Ecuadorian laws and regulations governing child labor are comprehensive, those regarding hazardous work are not enforced equally in rural areas and family-run businesses. (3)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Ecuador took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the National Police Unit for Crimes against Children and Adolescents (DINAPEN) that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including its referral mechanism.

Number of Convictions	Unknown* (3)	1 (6)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (3)	Yes (6)

*The government does not publish this information.

In 2017, the government created the Directorate for the Prevention of Trafficking in Persons and Migrant Smuggling within the Ministry of Interior to lead all law enforcement and research operations related to human trafficking. (6; 43) DINAPEN and Chile's Investigative Police conducted a binational operation against a criminal group that trafficked boys and girls for labor exploitation from the Imbabura province in Ecuador to Chile. (18) This investigation resulted in four arrests and the rescue of five Ecuadorian children. (18) In other operations, police also arrested 3 people for commercial sexual exploitation of children and rescued 11 girls who were engaged in commercial sexual exploitation, some as a result of human trafficking. (18) The government also provided victims' protection assistance to seven Ecuadorian children who were victims of labor trafficking and nine children who were victims of sex trafficking. (18)

During the reporting period, criminal investigators received training by the U.S. Department of Homeland Security on the use of Facebook for commercial sexual exploitation of children. (18) The National Police also hosted a training for 20 DINAPEN officers on trafficking and smuggling of persons, including children. (18; 23) However, DINAPEN officers lack sufficient human and material resources to adequately investigate the use of children in the trafficking of drugs. (2) Ecuador has only two shelters for victims of trafficking, and they serve only girls who have been victims of sex trafficking. There are no shelters for boys or girls who have been victims of trafficking unrelated to sex. (18) Although the 2016 introduction of the Unified System of Registration of Child Labor (SURT) has improved the referral mechanisms for victims removed from the worst forms of child labor, the process is ad hoc. (6) The lack of shelters in many provinces means law enforcement officers need to keep victims of the worst forms of child labor at police barracks until a space becomes available in a shelter in another province. (6)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including coordination among agencies.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
Inter-institutional Committee for the Eradication of Child Labor	Coordinate government efforts to combat child labor. (2) Includes participation from the MOL. (23) Last convened on December 5, 2017. (6)
Inter-Agency Committee against Trafficking in Persons	Coordinate government efforts to combat human trafficking, including child trafficking. Established as part of the National Plan to Combat Human Trafficking, Sexual and Labor Exploitation, and Other Forms of Exploitation. (38) Chaired by the Ministry of the Interior, involves several ministries and government agencies. (12) In 2017, held a binational fair at the Rumichaca International Bridge, the principal border crossing between Colombia and Ecuador, to raise awareness of human trafficking and the services available to trafficking victims. (18) Also held events to commemorate World Anti-Trafficking Day. (18)
Technical Secretariat for the Lifetime Plan*	Convene government ministries to discuss issues, including child labor. (2)
National Council for Intergenerational Equity (CNII)	Coordinate interagency efforts to protect vulnerable populations, including children. (2)
Local Autonomous Governments	Participate in coordinating mechanisms to combat child labor and implement the guidelines provided by CNII. (2) Mayors, who are held accountable to ensure that children do not work, can be fined if children are found working. (44)
Inter-Agency Table for the Eradication of Child Labor ( Mesa Interinstitucional de Erradicación del Trabajo Infantil )	Coordinate regional efforts to address child labor. (45) Participants include MIES; regional councils of Childhood and Adolescence; Ministries of Education, Labor, and Interior; Ministry of Social Development (MCDS); DINAPEN; and the Attorney General's Office. (45)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Weak coordination between ministries providing social services has caused difficulties in ensuring that children rescued from working in the informal sector receive adequate social assistance. (3) In 2017, the government used SURTI to collect data on child labor and better identify, assist, and monitor children in child labor; however, the government does not publish this information. (6) The ILO and MOL report that SURTI has assisted in efforts to improve coordination to address child labor. (6) However, research was unable to determine the extent of SURTI's success in improving coordination.

In 2017, Ecuador and Peru signed the Tumbes Declaration to jointly address trafficking in persons and better serve trafficking victims, including children. (18; 23) The Ministry of Tourism exchanged best practices with regional tourism ministries to prevent child sex tourism and human trafficking and trained hotel owners and employees of 120 hotels on identifying, responding to, and reporting suspected cases of child sex tourism and human trafficking. (18) The Ministry of Tourism also coordinated activities to prevent child sex tourism and trafficking in persons with ECU911 (Ecuador's national emergency phone line), the ministries of foreign affairs and labor, and local governments. (18)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Plan to Eradicate Child Labor (2015–2017)	Establish strategy to eradicate child labor in Ecuador by 2017. (2) The Plan, approved in 2016, is being implemented. (46)
Lifetime Plan ( Plan Toda Una Vida ) (2017–2021)†	Aims to support vulnerable populations from birth to advanced age through a series of social welfare programs. Aims to reduce child labor of children between ages 5 and 14 to 2.7 percent by 2021. (6; 47) Launched on November 28, 2017. (6) Led by the Technical Secretariat for the Lifetime Plan. (48)
National Plan to Combat Human Trafficking, Sexual and Labor Exploitation, and Other Forms of Exploitation	Establish processes to prevent, investigate, and impose legal sanctions against human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and other forms of abuse. Enacted by decree in 2006 to protect and restore the rights of victims. (17; 49; 50) In 2017, the government failed to approve the revised version of this plan and instead continued to operate under an older version. (22)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of efforts to address the worst forms of child labor.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor ‡

Program	Description
Project to Eradicate Child Labor (PETI) (2014–2017)	MOL project under the National Plan for Good Living to prevent hazardous child labor in agriculture, manufacturing, construction, and mining. (46; 9) In 2017, the MOL held an interagency event in recognition of the International Day Against Child Labor. (43) As of 2017, this program has educated almost 10,000 people about child labor in the provinces of Los Rios and Bolivar. (43)
Business Network for a Child Labor Free Ecuador	UN initiative, works to gain commitment from participating industries to promote the prevention and elimination of child labor in their supply chains, trains businesses on child labor prevention, and creates employment opportunities for the parents of children engaged in child labor. (51; 52) In 2017, the MOL held an event to promote the network in Cuenca among 20 local businesses. So far, 38 companies are members of the network, which raised child labor awareness by training 14,000 participants. (53)
National Program to Combat Child Begging†	Raises awareness about child begging; aims to facilitate social services for children begging in the streets. (54; 55) In 2017, raised awareness through the Give Dignity campaign. (43)
USDOL-funded initiatives	Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues (GAP), a $15.9 million project implemented by the Global March to End Child Labor. (56) Building Effective Policies Against Child Labor in Ecuador and Panama (2012–2016), a $4.3 million project implemented by the ILO in collaboration with Casa Esperanza, Comunidades y Desarrollo en Ecuador (COMUNIDEC), and Fundación Esquel. (57; 58) EducaFuturo Project (2012–2017), an $8.1 million project implemented by Partners of the Americas, in collaboration with Expoflores, COMUNIDEC, and Fundación de las Americas. Additional information is available on the USDOL website.

Program	Description
Prevention of Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents	Ministry of Tourism program that seeks to prevent commercial sexual exploitation by creating regulations and awareness campaigns in the tourism sector. (59) In 2017, trained staff from 120 hotels exchanged best practices in preventing child sex tourism and trafficking, and coordinated child sex tourism and trafficking prevention activities with ECU911, the Ministries of Foreign Affairs and Labor, and local governments. (6)
Eloy Alfaro Workers' Symphonic Orchestra ( Orquesta Sinfónica de los Trabajadores Eloy Alfaro )†	Orchestra that performs to raise awareness of child labor. (3) Established by MOL in 2016, comprises more than 200 former child laborers from Quito and Cuenca who take daily music lessons funded by MOL. (3) In 2017, played at the International Day Against Child Labor. (43)
Grants for Human Development	Conditional cash transfer program run by MIES that supplements household income for vulnerable families. (60; 56) In December 2017, the government increased the benefit for heads of household to $150 per month, depending on the number of children in the family. (43)
Mission Tenderness ( Misión Ternura )†*	Seeks to promote the development of children under age 5 by combating malnutrition, increasing the number of children participating in early childhood education programs, and increasing participation of children from poor and vulnerable families in public childhood development programs. (6)
Less Poverty, More Development ( Menos Pobreza, Más Desarrollo )†*	Aims to reduce extreme poverty from 8 percent to 3.5 percent by 2021, in part, through a conditional cash transfer for families living below the poverty line. (61; 6) In December 2017, the government increased the benefit from $50 to $150 for heads of household, depending on the number of children in the family. (6; 61)
Youth Impulse ( Impulso Joven )†*	Seeks to increase job training and higher education opportunities for at-risk youth, support youth entrepreneurship through preferential loans, and connect employers with at-risk youth. (6)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Ecuador.

‡ The government has other social programs which may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (3; 7; 62; 63; 64)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Ecuador (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Publish the number of labor inspections conducted, child labor violations found, penalties imposed and collected for child labor violations, as well as the number of criminal violations found.	2014 – 2017
	Ensure that laws and regulations governing child labor, and especially hazardous labor, are enforced consistently throughout the country, including in rural areas and family-run businesses.	2016 – 2017
	Increase the number of labor inspectors in accordance with the ILO technical advice.	2009 – 2017
	Ensure that inspectors receive sufficient resources, such as transportation, to adequately carry out their duties.	2014 – 2017
	Ensure that labor inspectors have sufficient knowledge of existing laws, penalties, and processes to conduct inspections and refer victims to social services.	2015 – 2017
	Ensure that police investigators receive sufficient resources to investigate cases of the worst forms of child labor.	2016 – 2017
Coordination	Strengthen coordinating mechanisms between ministries providing social services to victims of child labor, especially in the informal sector, and the mechanism for receiving, routing, and addressing child labor complaints.	2015 – 2017
Policies	Update the National Plan to Combat Human Trafficking, Sexual Exploitation and Labor Exploitation, and Other Forms of Exploitation.	2017
Social Programs	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education, particularly secondary education, accessible for all children, including indigenous and refugee children and children from rural areas, by removing school-related fees, increasing classroom space, and providing adequate transportation.	2014 – 2017

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2017, Egypt made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Ministry of Social Solidarity began operating 17 mobile units, providing services to over 4,000 street-based children. The National Coordination Committee on Preventing Illegal Migration and Combating Trafficking in Persons provided training to media professionals on reporting on human trafficking and victim protection. Social media messaging on irregular migration and human trafficking produced by the same Committee reached one million individuals. Moreover, the National Council for Childhood and Motherhood conducted 35 awareness-raising campaigns. However, children in Egypt engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in quarrying limestone. The government did not publish data on the enforcement of child labor laws. In addition, programs to combat child labor are insufficient to adequately address the extent of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Egypt engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in quarrying limestone. (1; 2; 3; 4; 5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Egypt.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	10 to 14	2.9 (246,179)
Attending School (%)	10 to 14	93.8
Combining Work and School (%)	10 to 14	1.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		93.9

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (6)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Survey of Young People in Egypt, 2009. (7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including the production of cotton (8; 9; 10; 5; 11)
	Caring for livestock (12; 5; 11)
	Fishing, activities unknown (13; 5)
Industry	Quarrying† limestone (1; 2; 3; 5)
	Making bricks (14; 15; 16; 5; 17)
	Working in carpentry workshops (18; 19; 5)
	Working in marble workshops (20; 21)
	Construction, activities unknown (22; 5; 11)
Services	Working in aluminum factories (23; 5)
	Domestic work (12; 9; 5)
	Driving tuktuks (24; 25)
	Repairing automobiles (13; 5)
	Street work, including selling goods, collecting garbage, and sweeping (8; 18; 26; 22; 27)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor †	Domestic work as a result of human trafficking (4; 5)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4; 5; 28)
	Forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (29; 4; 5)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Some girls are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation under the pretext of temporary marriage to wealthy foreign men, mostly from Persian Gulf countries. (4; 5; 28) Some Egyptian children are trafficked to Italy, and although the number of arrivals decreased significantly in 2017, Egyptian children continue to be used for bonded child labor, commercial sexual exploitation, and illicit activities in Italy. (30; 31; 32; 33; 34; 4; 11; 35)

According to the Ministry of Education, thousands of children dropped out of school in 2016 and 2017 because of school-related costs, such as transportation, clothing, and food. (10; 5) Girls face additional barriers to education, including long distances to school, harassment and violence at school and on the way to school, lack of sanitation facilities, and cultural barriers. (36; 5) Approximately 600,000 girls were out of school in 2017. (36) Despite a 2016 UN program aiming to enroll all Syrian refugee children in school, UNICEF reported that as of November 2017, 39,000 Syrian refugee children were out of school. (37; 38)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Egypt has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Egypt’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of commercial sexual exploitation of children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 64 of the Child Law (39)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 1 of Ministry of Manpower’s Decree 118 (40)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 1–2 of Ministry of Manpower’s Decree 118 (40)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 89 of the Constitution; Article 291 of the Penal Code; Articles 2–3 of the Law on Combating Human Trafficking (39; 41; 42)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 89 of the Constitution; Article 291 of the Penal Code; Articles 2–3 of the Law on Combating Human Trafficking (39; 41; 42)

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Article 116- bis (a) of the Child Law and Article 291 of the Penal Code; Articles 2–3 of the Law on Combating Human Trafficking; Articles 1–4 and 6 of the Law on the Combating of Prostitution (39; 42; 43)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 34 of the Law on Narcotics; Article 65 of the Child Law; Article 2.2 of Ministry of Manpower’s Decree 118 (39; 40; 44)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment
State Compulsory	Yes	18	Article 1 of the Law on Military and National Service (45)
State Voluntary	Yes	15	Ministry of Defense Guidelines on Youth Volunteers in the Armed Forces (46)
Non-state	Yes	18	Article 7- bis (b) of the Child Law (39)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15‡	Article 59(1) of the Child Law; Articles 80 and 238 of the Constitution (39; 41)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 54 of the Child Law (39)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (29)

Laws prohibiting the commercial sexual exploitation of children are not comprehensive because they do not criminally prohibit the use of a child in prostitution.

The law prohibits hazardous occupations and activities for children, including in quarrying, tanning, welding, spraying pesticides, and carrying heavy loads. (40) However, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children do not cover brick production, an area of work in which there is evidence of exposure to hazardous temperatures. (15; 14; 17)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Manpower that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Manpower	Enforce child labor laws and regulations, including receiving and investigating child labor complaints. Inspectors conduct routine labor inspections and report violations to the Ministry of the Interior, which then refers the case for prosecution. (5)
Ministry of the Interior	Enforce laws and regulations prohibiting human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children. (5)
Ministry of Justice, Prosecutor General’s Office	Prosecute violation of laws related to the worst forms of child labor and human trafficking. (5)
Ministry of Local Development	Provide administrative and logistical support for the enforcement of child labor laws. Administer the Child Protection Committees. (5)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Egypt took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Manpower that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including penalty assessment authorization.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

* The government does not publish this information.

In 2017, the Ministry of Manpower conducted a training for labor inspectors, in cooperation with the WFP, using a checklist on a mobile tablet application to increase efficiency. The Ministry of Manpower conducted 3,388 worksite inspections, issued formal warnings at 509 worksites, and filed police reports against 61 employers. (48)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Egypt took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder their capacity to enforce child labor laws, including disaggregation of human trafficking enforcement data on children.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Training for Investigators
Initial Training for New Employees	Unknown	Unknown (5)

In 2017, 20 Ministry of Interior's law enforcement officials received training on human trafficking, identifying victims, and investigating crime scenes, with particular focus on protecting children and women who are victims of human trafficking. (51) The Ministry also added a module on human trafficking to its curriculum that officials periodically complete. The Ministry of Justice held 11 trainings on human trafficking for 321 judges. (48) The Ministry of Defense provided training to all soldiers on identifying and interacting with victims of human trafficking. (48)

The Prosecutor General published and circulated a toolkit for officials who investigate cases of human trafficking. The toolkit includes guidelines on identifying cases of human trafficking, providing services to victims, and cooperating with international judicial actions. (48)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Interior opened 144 human trafficking cases and referred 41 cases to the Prosecutor General's Office. Five individuals were convicted of human trafficking crimes. (52) However, it is unknown how many of these cases may have involved child trafficking.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including among government agencies.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
National Council for Childhood and Motherhood (NCCM)	Coordinate enforcement of laws related to child labor, including its worst forms. Provide technical support and training about child labor for the Ministry of Manpower's inspectors. (5) Identify and monitor at-risk children. Manage two 24-hour hotlines and receive reports of child labor and child trafficking. (5) In 2017, the Council held 35 awareness-raising campaigns that reached 1,740 students, educators, migrants, and others. (48)
National Coordinating Committee to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Coordinate the efforts of the Ministries of Manpower, Justice, Social Solidarity, and the Interior; the Council for Human Rights, Childhood, and Motherhood; and the Council for Women in drafting a National Strategy to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor. (5) Research was unable to determine whether the National Coordinating Committee to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor was active during the reporting period.
National Coordination Committee on Preventing Illegal Migration and Combating Trafficking in Persons	Coordinate efforts to combat human trafficking. Led by an Ambassador appointed by the Prime Minister, comprises 18 government entities, including the Ministries of the Interior and Manpower. (5) In 2017, provided training for reporters on human trafficking, victim protection, and ethical considerations when covering human trafficking issues. (53) Reached over one million people through social media messaging on the dangers of irregular migration and human trafficking. (48) However, during the reporting period, there was a lack of coordination between arresting officers and prosecutors. In 2017, began revisions to improve the national referral mechanism. (48)
Child Protection Committees	Coordinate child protection efforts at the local level. Led by the Ministry of Social Solidarity and chaired by local governors in each governorate, with subcommittees at each police station. (5) Research was unable to determine whether the Child Protection Committees were active during the reporting period.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Plan of Action Against the Worst Forms of Child Labor and Supporting Families	Aims to eliminate the worst forms of child labor by 2025 and identify roles of government agencies responsible for assisting child laborers. (5) In 2017, government agencies, in cooperation with international organizations, concluded the main Action Plan elements, including expansion of the child labor knowledge base; capacity building of agencies providing support; social protection, with links to existing programs; enhanced education, including vocational education for children; and advocacy and awareness raising. (5)
Third National Plan of Action Against Human Trafficking (2016–2021)	Aims to maintain referral mechanisms, train law enforcement officials, and combat trafficking of street children. (5) During the reporting period, the National Coordination Committee on Preventing Illegal Migration and Combating Trafficking in Persons began to work on improving the national referral mechanism. Several government agencies provided human trafficking training to officials. (48) In 2017 and 2018, the Ministry of Social Solidarity provided services to thousands of street-based children. (48)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor‡

Program	Description
Enhancing Access of Children to Education and Fighting Child Labor (2014–2018)	$65 million, EU-funded, 4-year project implemented by the WFP to provide food security for up to 100,000 children at risk of child labor and financial assistance to 400,000 family members to compensate for wages that child labor would have otherwise generated, enabling children to attend school. Supports 50,000 households in income-generating activities to help keep their children in school. (54) In 2017, under the National School Feeding Program, in-kind and cash transfers continued for vulnerable families, but the exact number of these families was unavailable. (5)
Expanding Access to Education and Protection for at Risk Children in Egypt (2016–2021)	$32 million, EU-funded project implemented by UNICEF in cooperation with the Ministry of Education and the NCCM to expand access to education for 36,000 children, including 6,000 children with disabilities, and to support 15 Child Protection Committees in 15 governorates. (55) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement Expanding Access to Education and Protection for at Risk Children in Egypt during the reporting period.
Solidarity and Dignity Initiative of the Cash Transfer Program (2015–2017)†	Provided a monthly income supplement to poor families, conditional on keeping their children at school, or unconditional for the elderly and family members with disabilities. Aimed to reach 1.5 million households by 2017. (56) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Solidarity and Dignity Initiative of the Cash Transfer Program during the reporting period.
Positive Life Alternatives for Egyptian Youth at-Risk of Irregular Migration Program (2015–2017)	$3.2 million, USAID-funded, 2-year project implemented by the IOM to support activities that included the goal of eliminating the worst forms of child labor, specifically through raising awareness among children and youth on the dangers of irregular migration and human trafficking, and building technical capacity of service providers for at-risk children. (57; 58) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Positive Life Alternatives for Egyptian Youth at-Risk of Irregular Migration Program during the reporting period.
Children without Shelter†	The Ministry of Social Solidarity operated shelters for victims of human trafficking, child victims of trafficking and forced labor, and other vulnerable individuals. Dar as-Salam, operated by the NCCM and an NGO, Face, provides social services, including psychological counseling and health services. (50) In 2017, the Ministry of Solidarity began operating 17 mobile units, providing services to over 4,000 street children. (48) The Ministry also reintegrated almost 400 street children back into their families. (5)

† Program is funded by the Government of Egypt.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (5)

Although Egypt has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, particularly to address commercial sexual exploitation and in quarrying limestone.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Egypt (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the use of children for commercial sexual exploitation.	2017
	Ensure that the types of work that children perform in Egypt that expose them to hazardous temperatures, such as brick production, are prohibited for children under age 18.	2017
Enforcement	Publish information on the Labor Inspectorate funding, the number of labor inspectors, penalties imposed and collected, and whether targeted inspections were conducted.	2011 – 2017
	Strengthen the Labor Inspectorate by authorizing inspectors to assess penalties.	2017
	Publish information on training for criminal investigators and the disaggregated numbers of violations, investigations, prosecutions, and convictions for criminal violations of child labor laws.	2011 – 2017
Coordination	Ensure all coordinating bodies are able to carry out their intended mandates.	2017
	Ensure coordination between arresting officers and prosecutors in cases of human trafficking.	2017
Social Programs	Ensure universal access to free public education, especially for refugee children and girls, by addressing the cost of school fees, supplies, and other barriers to education.	2010 – 2017
	Ensure that the Solidarity and Dignity Initiative of the Cash Transfer Program is implemented.	2017
	Expand programs to address the full scope of the child labor problem, particularly in commercial sexual exploitation and in quarrying limestone.	2010 – 2017

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2017, El Salvador made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Labor Inspection Directorate changed inspectors' daily inspections schedules in the agricultural sector to begin earlier in the morning to better verify possible child labor situations and included child labor specific items in interview checklists. In addition, the National Council for Children and Adolescents released a protocol to implement the National Policy for the Protection of Children and Adolescents. However, children in El Salvador engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in illicit activities, sometimes as a result of human trafficking.

Children also perform dangerous tasks in the harvesting of sugarcane. Law enforcement agencies continue to lack sufficient resources to fully enforce child labor laws, and no penalties for child labor violations were issued in 2017.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in El Salvador engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in illicit activities, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in the harvesting of sugarcane. (1; 2; 3; 4; 5; 6) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in El Salvador.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	5.9 (68,431)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	92.3
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	6.1
Primary Completion Rate (%)		93.4

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2; 14; 6)
	Use by gangs to perform illicit activities, including committing homicides, extortion, and trafficking drugs, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4; 21; 14; 6)
	Forced begging, domestic work, and street work (2; 4; 6)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in El Salvador often lack economic and educational opportunities and are vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation and recruitment by gangs for illicit activities, such as committing homicides and trafficking drugs. (22; 23; 24) Children often emigrate to escape violence, extortion, and forced recruitment by gangs, in addition to seeking economic opportunities and family reunification. Once en route, they become vulnerable to human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. (4; 22; 23; 24; 27)

Child labor in El Salvador is predominantly male, with boys comprising approximately two-thirds of child laborers ages 5 to 17. (12; 28; 29; 30) However, girls comprise the majority of children engaged in domestic work in third-party homes. (2; 12; 18) At schools, children are recruited and harassed by gangs, which may cause children to stop attending school. Children who do not attend school are also more vulnerable to child labor, including its worst forms. (4; 5; 27; 31; 32; 33; 34; 35) Although government programs have expanded basic education coverage, gang violence, including the extortion of school children, has hindered efforts to increase school enrollment and decrease dropout rates. (34; 35; 36; 37) The Educated El Salvador Plan created 7 online study programs and outlined additional government efforts to address this problem. (35; 38; 39)

Multiple reports, including by a third-party monitoring group, indicate that the use of child labor in sugarcane harvesting has declined since 2010. (9; 40; 41) The latest government figures, taken by the Ministry of Education in 2015, counted 934 persons under age 18 engaged in the production of sugarcane. (42) The published report of the 2016 Multipurpose Household Survey does not contain information on the number of children working in the sugarcane sector or on the number of children engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in illicit activities. (19; 14)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

El Salvador has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare’s operations that hinder adequate child labor enforcement.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare (MTPS)	Inspect registered businesses for labor violations, including child labor. (10; 20; 14) Maintain a child labor unit dedicated to child labor law enforcement issues. (52) Refer cases of alleged crimes of the worst forms of child labor to the Office of the Attorney General. (10)
Office of the Attorney General (AG)	Enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. Maintain the AG’s Special Unit on Trafficking in Persons and Related Crimes that consists of 12 prosecutors who investigate human trafficking and related crimes. (5; 10; 11; 47) Refer exploited children to the Salvadoran Institute for the Comprehensive Development of Children and Adolescents (ISNA) for social services. (10)
National Civilian Police (PNC)	Enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. Maintain the PNC’s Special Unit on Trafficking in Persons and Related Crimes that investigates cases of human trafficking, including child trafficking. (10; 20; 47; 14) Maintain a hotline that receives complaints about human trafficking for sexual and labor exploitation. (53)
Salvadoran Institute for the Comprehensive Development of Children and Adolescents (ISNA)	Receive referrals from law enforcement agencies on cases of criminal exploitation of children, including for forced labor, human trafficking, and commercial sexual exploitation. Provide child victims with services, including shelter, medical attention, psychological help, and legal advice. (54)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in El Salvador took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

* The government does not publish this information.

In 2017, the Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare (MTPS) reported that its level of funding was inadequate and hampered the labor inspectorate's capacity to enforce child labor laws. The Labor Inspection Directorate changed inspectors' daily inspections schedules in the agricultural sector to begin earlier in the morning to better verify possible child labor situations and included child labor specific items in interview checklists. (14)

In 2017, the MTPS reported that it conducted 961 child labor-specific inspections across all 14 of El Salvador's administrative regions, including some targeted inspections in the sugarcane and coffee sectors. (57) As of October 2017, the MTPS reported that inspections found 2 child labor violations. (14) No fines were collected, as MTPS reported all child labor issues were resolved upon re-inspection. (14)

The government reports that the Labor Committee of the Legislative Assembly is drafting an updated Labor Procedures Code, which will include provisions to streamline the issuance of penalties. (58; 59) The Salvadoran Institute for the Comprehensive Development of Children and Adolescents (ISNA) reported that in 2017 it assisted 14 children engaged in child labor, including 1 child engaged in dangerous work. (60)

Article 627 of the Labor Code specifies a default fine of no more than $60 per violation of all labor laws, including child labor laws. (44) Reports indicate that this amount is insufficient to deter labor violations. (5) The government is currently reviewing national legislation to ensure that monetary penalties for all labor violations are proportionate to the nature of the offense. (58; 59; 61)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in El Salvador took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2017, the Office of the Attorney General (AG) provided training for investigators on the INTERPOL child sexual abuse database, conducted a regional workshop for combating child sexual abuse—an advanced regional workshop to combat child sexual abuse—and a regional workshop on coordination and investigation of online child sexual exploitation. The National Council for Children and Adolescents (CONNA) conducted trainings for 8,500 people on the Special Law for Comprehensive Protection of Children and Adolescents (LEPINA), and the guidelines for the National Protection Plan for Children and Adolescents. CONNA also conducted training for 25 sexual exploitation prevention specialists. (14; 62)

In 2017, the AG's Trafficking in Persons Unit encountered 21 victims of child trafficking for sexual exploitation. This included 7 cases of child prostitution affecting 8 victims, 10 cases of pornography involving 11 victims, and 10 cases of payment for sexual acts with 11 victims. (14)

The AG reported that it lacks sufficient financial resources to maintain the level of staffing, training, and transportation required to meet its obligation to prosecute crimes, including the worst forms of child labor. (63; 14; 62) In addition, reports indicate that increased coordination between the PNC and the AG is needed to improve the investigation and prosecution of criminal child labor violations. (58)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
National Committee for the Eradication of Child Labor (CNETI)	Determine and implement government efforts to combat child labor, including the Roadmap to Make El Salvador a Country Free of Child Labor and its Worst Forms. Chaired by the MTPS, includes 12 government agencies, along with representatives from labor unions, business associations, and NGOs. (2; 12; 20; 64; 14) Maintain a web-based monitoring system that allows government agencies to share and analyze information to coordinate the implementation of the Roadmap. (65; 66; 67; 14)
National Council Against Trafficking in Persons	Coordinate government efforts to combat human trafficking and implement the National Policy Against Trafficking in Persons. (68; 14) Led by the Ministry of Justice and Public Security and composed of 11 government agencies. (1; 47; 69; 14)
National Council for Children and Adolescents (CONNA)	Develop policies to protect the rights of children, including those regarding child labor, and implement LEPINA and the National Policy for the Protection of Children and Adolescents (PNPNA). (45; 70; 71; 14) Composed of Departmental and Local Committees for Children's and Adolescents' Rights, ISNA, the Ministry of Public Security and Justice, the AG, the Human Rights Ombudsman, and other agencies. (14) In 2017, CONNA expanded its response network and youth protection programs, and enacted rules to coordinate protection programs for children and adolescents. (72; 14)
Departmental and Local Committees for Children's and Adolescents' Rights	Implement CONNA's policies, including the PNPNA, at the departmental and municipal levels, as well as receive complaints of child rights violations at the departmental level. (45; 73; 74; 75; 14)

All coordinating bodies appeared to be active during the reporting period. (62)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including with mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor‡

Policy	Description
Roadmap to Make El Salvador a Country Free of Child Labor and its Worst Forms	Serves as the government’s principal policy for eliminating the worst forms of child labor. Aims to eliminate all child labor by 2020, including by reducing poverty, improving education and health, protecting children’s rights, and raising awareness on child labor. (1; 12; 76; 77; 58)
National Policy for the Protection of Children and Adolescents (PNPNA) (2013–2023)	Sets government policies aimed at guaranteeing children’s rights and protecting them from violence and harm, including the worst forms of child labor. Other objectives include improving health services and access to quality education for children, including children with disabilities, and reducing poverty. (12; 71)
National Action Plan for the PNPNA (2014–2017)	Sets a framework for implementing the PNPNA from 2014–2017. Aimed to address PNPNA objectives, including the prevention of violence, the promotion of access to quality education, and the elimination of child labor by focusing on children’s and adolescents’ rights, gender equality, and social inclusion. (12; 78; 79)
National Policy Against Trafficking in Persons	Defines a comprehensive plan to combat human trafficking of adults and children for labor and commercial sexual exploitation. Aims to improve prevention efforts, victim assistance, prosecution, interagency coordination, training, and anti-corruption efforts. (1; 80; 81)
Educated El Salvador Plan†	Outlines six priorities for improving El Salvador’s national education system, including increasing security in schools and improving access to education for vulnerable groups, including children engaged in child labor. (35; 14) In 2017, policy efforts led to better trained teachers, seven online study programs added, and with the help of foreign assistance, the reconstruction of several schools. (14; 37)
Alliance for Prosperity in the Northern Triangle	Aims to create economic growth, increase educational and vocational training opportunities for youth, and reduce violence in Honduras, Guatemala, and El Salvador. Seeks to do this, in part, to reduce the number of unaccompanied minors who leave El Salvador, as well as Honduras and Guatemala, for the United States and who are vulnerable to human trafficking. Signed by the presidents of each country in 2014. (82; 83; 84)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (5; 85; 86; 87; 88; 89; 90; 91; 62)

The government has not incorporated child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the National Youth Policy (2010–2024). (92)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor‡

Program	Description
USDOL-funded Projects	Projects which aim to reduce the incidence of child labor, including: Youth Pathways–Central America (2015–2019), $16.5 million project implemented by Catholic Relief Services in El Salvador and Honduras; Global Research on Child Labor Measurement and Policy Development (2013–2018), $7 million project implemented by the ILO in 10 countries; and Reducing Incidence of Child Labor and Harmful Conditions of Work in Economic Strengthening Initiatives (RICHERS) (2017–2021), $1.5 million project implemented by the Grameen Foundation in El Salvador and the Philippines. (93; 94; 95) More information is available on the USDOL website.
Public Awareness Campaigns†	Government public-awareness campaigns implemented by CONNA and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs to raise awareness about the dangers of human trafficking. Includes CONNA’s “Don’t Risk Your Lives” campaign, supported by UNICEF and IOM. (58; 59; 60) In 2017, CONNA announced the second phase of its “Protection Starts at Home” and “Talk to Me” awareness programs, which promote respect towards the physical, psychological, and sexual integrity of children and adolescents. (14; 60)
Public Awareness Campaigns on Child Labor†	Government public-awareness campaigns implemented by the Ministry of Education (MINED), the MTPS, the Ministry of Health, and CONNA to inform children about the dangers of child labor, including manufacturing and handling fireworks. (96; 63; 97; 98) Produced radio skits, print ads, and technical assistance information in 2017 in coordination with the ILO and FUNDAZUCAR, the social responsibility arm of the Association of Salvadoran Sugar Producers. (62)
Sustainable Families Programs*†	Set of existing and new government programs focused on improving health, education, productivity, security, and eliminating poverty through inclusive and sustainable economic growth and public services. Includes Health and Education Bonus Programs that assist families with cash transfers conditioned on children’s school attendance and health checkups. (99; 100; 1)

Program	Description
Solidarity Communities Programs†	Government programs that aimed to reduce social exclusion and boost household income by increasing access to public services and building human capital that ended in 2017. Included cash transfers conditioned on children's school attendance and health checkups and the Temporary Income Support Program (PATI) that provided financial support and vocational training to beneficiaries ages 16 and older. (1; 101)
School Prevention and Security Plan†	Programs implemented by MINED, the Ministry of Justice and Public Security, and the PNC in schools with high levels of violence. Includes activities such as provision of psychological help, online classes, skills workshops for youth, and increased police patrols. (102; 103) Expanded in 2017 to operate in approximately 1,250 schools. (36; 104)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of El Salvador.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (11; 89; 105; 106; 107; 108; 109)

The government joined UNODC's Blue Heart Campaign to raise awareness against trafficking in persons. (109; 14) During the year, MTPS also increased the number of micro-enterprise advisers from 1 to 15 through the country's provinces, enabling the Ministry to provide additional services for entrepreneurs, including youth. (110) The government implements several programs to reduce the worst forms of child labor by assisting poor families and school children; however, research found no evidence that the government has programs that assist child laborers who may not be living with their families and not attending school, such as children engaged in domestic work. Research could not determine whether the government's efforts to prevent and eliminate child labor in the production of sugarcane addressed the full scope of the problem.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in El Salvador (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Provide sufficient funding and resources to the MTPS and criminal law enforcement agencies to fully enforce child labor laws.	2010 – 2017
	Ensure that penalties are imposed and fines are collected for child labor violations.	2015 – 2017
	Establish monetary penalties for child labor violations that are proportionate to the nature and seriousness of the offense.	2009 – 2017
	Improve coordination between the National Civilian Police (PNC) and the Attorney General (AG) in their investigation and prosecution of criminal cases, including by implementing the regulations of the Special Law Against Trafficking in Persons.	2014 – 2017
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the National Youth Policy for 2010–2024.	2014 – 2017
Social Programs	Collect and publish government statistics on the number of children engaged in the production of sugarcane.	2016 – 2017
	Conduct a study on the use of children in illicit activities.	2009 – 2017
	Improve children's access to education by ensuring that school children are safe in schools.	2011 – 2017
	Implement programs to address child labor in domestic work and ensure programs to combat child labor in the production of sugarcane are sufficient to address the scope of the problem.	2017

Eritrea

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

In 2017, Eritrea made efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor, but was also complicit in the use of forced child labor. The government worked with the UN to approve a Strategic Partnership Cooperation Framework and launch a social program that aims to prevent children from exploitation. However, despite initiatives to address child labor, Eritrea is receiving this assessment because it continued to require children from grades 9-12 who may be younger than 18 years to participate in a national program called Maetot, where they engage in compulsory labor in agricultural, environmental, and hygiene-related public works projects. In addition, children were forced to enroll in the government's compulsory military training program. The government does not make law enforcement data publicly available and national laws and regulations do not identify hazardous occupations or activities prohibited for children. In addition, the government does not have a mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Eritrea engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced agricultural labor. (11) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Eritrea. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		42.5

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2015, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (1) Data were unavailable from Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis, 2018. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, activities unknown (3)
	Herding livestock (4; 3)
Industry	Small-scale manufacturing (5)
	Mining, including gold (6; 7)
Services	Domestic work (5)
	Working in auto mechanic shops, bicycle repair shops, tea and coffee shops, metal workshops, grocery stores, and open markets (5; 8; 4; 3)
	Street work, including vending, cleaning cars, and begging (9; 10; 4)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (11)
	Compulsory participation in Active National Service or the Popular Army prior to the age of 18 for military training, and in agricultural and domestic work (12; 13; 14; 15; 11)
	Forced labor, including in begging (11)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

The Ministry of Education operates a national program, Maetot, under which children from grades 9-12 who may be younger than 18 years are required to engage in compulsory labor in public works projects during their summer holidays. (14; 11) Some children may be required to work on roads, dams, canals, and irrigation projects. (14)

The Proclamation on National Service No. 82/1995 establishes compulsory military training and service, known as Active National Service, for all citizens ages 18 to 40. (16) To graduate from high school and meet the compulsory training component of National Service, students are required to complete their final year of schooling (grade 12) at the Sawa Education and Military Training Camp; these students have typically reached age 18, but some are reportedly younger. (12; 13; 16; 11) Limited evidence suggests that military training includes military discipline and procedures, weapons training, and a 2- to 4-week war simulation. (13) Previous reports found that some students are forced to conduct agricultural activities on government-owned farms, in addition to their military training, and girls may be subject to forced domestic work in military training centers. (14)

The uncertain length of service, inability to earn higher wages in the private sector, and notoriously harsh working conditions in the National Service provoked a significant number of youth, including unaccompanied minors, to flee Eritrea and may have also encouraged many to resort to the use of international smuggling or human trafficking networks. (12; 13; 17; 18; 19; 11; 20; 3) Adolescent children who attempted to leave Eritrea were sometimes detained or forced to undergo military training, despite being younger than the minimum age of 18 for compulsory military recruitment. (13; 11; 21; 3) Children face difficulty accessing education due to a shortage of schools and the inability to afford uniforms, supplies, and transportation. (22; 23; 24)

Research did not find information on whether the government made an effort to collect or publish data on the worst forms of child labor.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Eritrea has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Eritrea's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	14	Article 68 of the Labour Proclamation (25)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 565 and 605 of the Penal Code (26)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 605–607 of the Penal Code (26)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 594–595, 604–605, and 609 of the Penal Code (26)

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No		Article 510 of the Penal Code (26)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment
State Compulsory	Yes	18	Articles 7 and 8 of the Proclamation on National Service (16)
State Voluntary	N/A
Non-State	No		Article 282(d) of the Penal Code (26)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	14‡
Free Public Education	No

‡ Age calculated based on available information (27; 28; 29)

In May 2015, the government announced that it was considering the establishment of a new Criminal Code that contains prohibitions on the commercial sexual exploitation of children. However, the Code has not yet been proclaimed. (30; 31) Laws regarding the commercial sexual exploitation of children are insufficient because the procurement and offering of a child for prostitution and the use, procurement, and offering of a child for the production of pornography and pornographic performances are not criminally prohibited. (26)

The law's minimum age protections do not apply to children working outside formal employment relationships, such as those who are self-employed. (25; 32) Article 69 of the Labour Proclamation authorizes the Minister to issue a list of activities prohibited to children under age 18; however, the government has not determined by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. (25; 33) Laws related to the use of children in illicit activities are not sufficient because offering and procuring a child for the production and trafficking of drugs are not criminally prohibited. (26) Minimum age for voluntary military service is not applicable to Eritrea because all citizens ages 18 to 40 have the compulsory duty of performing Active National Service under the Proclamation on National Service No. 82/1995. (16)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, research was unable to find information on law enforcement agencies' efforts to enforce Eritrea's child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Human Welfare	Enforce labor laws. (30) According to the government, child labor inspectors operate in every administrative zone. (34)
Popular Army	Perform night patrols and refer cases of commercial sexual exploitation of children or other exploitative practices to the Eritrean Police. (9; 35)
Eritrean Police	Enforce laws and investigate referred cases of child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children. (9; 35)
National Security Administration	Work with the Eritrean police to combat the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (36)

Labor Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether labor law enforcement agencies in Eritrea took actions to combat child labor (Table 6).

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Eritrea took actions to combat child labor (Table 7).

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that the government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established one policy related to child labor (Table 8). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including adoption and implementation.

Table 8. Key Policies Related to Child Labor‡

Policy	Description
Education Sector Development Plan (2013–2017)	Establishes 8 years of free and compulsory education for all children. (24)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (38)

Although the government worked with UNICEF in 2013 to develop a Comprehensive Child Policy that includes the goal of preventing and eliminating child labor, research found that the policy has not been adopted or implemented. (39; 40)

Eritrea

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

The government’s compulsory military training requirement for Active National Service for students in grade 12 may inhibit efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor for all those wishing to obtain high school diplomas. In addition, the government’s continued use of compulsory labor through the Maetot program may also impede these efforts.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government participated in one program that may contribute to eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 9). However, gaps exist in this social program, including adequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 9. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
UNICEF Country Program (2017–2021)*	UNICEF program, in collaboration with the government, which expands access to quality basic education for all children, and protects children from violence, exploitation and abuse. (39)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

Research found no evidence of programs that target children working in agriculture, domestic work, and street work, and that specifically address the worst forms of child labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Eritrea (Table 10).

Table 10. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify ILO C. 182 on the Worst Forms of Child Labor.	2013 – 2017
	Establish a minimum age for hazardous work and determine the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, in consultation with employers’ and workers’ organizations.	2015 – 2017
	Ensure that all children are protected by minimum age laws, including those who are self-employed.	2010 – 2017
	Criminally prohibit procuring and offering a child for prostitution and using, procuring, and offering a child for the production of pornography and pornographic performances.	2014 – 2017
	Criminally prohibit procuring and offering a child for the production and trafficking of drugs.	2013 – 2017
	Criminally prohibit the recruitment of children under 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2017
	Establish by law free basic public education.	2016 – 2017
Enforcement	Collect data on labor and criminal law enforcement and make the data publicly available.	2009 – 2017
Coordination	Establish coordinating mechanisms to combat child labor.	2009 – 2017
Government Policies	Adopt and implement the Comprehensive Child Policy.	2009 – 2017
	Ensure that children under age 18 are not recruited into Active National Service.	2009 – 2017
	Cease requiring children to perform compulsory labor under the Maetot program during the school break.	2009 – 2017
Social Programs	Ensure that all children have access to education by building more schools and removing financial barriers to attendance.	2010 – 2017
	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2009 – 2017
	Institute programs to address child labor, including in agriculture, domestic work, and street work, and the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation.	2009 – 2017

Eswatini

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2017, Eswatini made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Eswatini is receiving an assessment of minimal advancement because, in contrast to previous years, evidence suggests that local chiefs did not force children to participate in Kuhlehla, through which residents carry out communal work, including in chiefs' houses or fields, or other customary practices. Additionally, the government provided training to criminal investigators on human trafficking and continued paying for school fees under its Free Public Education program. However, children in Eswatini engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work and herding livestock. Significant gaps in the legal framework remain, including a lack of legislation regulating the labor conditions under Kuhlehla and other customary practices and a de facto compulsory education age that does not meet international standards. In addition, social programs do not adequately address child labor in the agriculture sector.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Eswatini engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work and herding livestock. (1; 2; 3; 4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Eswatini.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	11.7 (35,368)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	92.5
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	13.0
Primary Completion Rate (%)		80.6

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2015, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (5)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 4, 2010. (6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Growing corn, picking cotton, and harvesting sugarcane (7; 2; 8)
	Herding livestock, including cattle, buffalo, goats, swine, horses, donkeys, and sheep (7; 2; 9; 10; 8; 4)
Services	Domestic work (7; 2; 9; 11; 8)
	Street work, including as vendors, bus attendants, taxi conductors, portering, and washing cars (1; 2; 9; 12; 13; 3)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in livestock herding, domestic work, farming, and market vending, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1; 3; 14; 15)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (7; 1; 11; 3; 15)
	Use in illicit activities, including growing, manufacturing, and selling drugs such as marijuana (4)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Beginning in 2012, there were reports that local chiefs forced residents, including children, to perform agricultural work and other essential tasks, such as household chores, through the customary practice of "Kuhlehla," through which residents carry out communal work, including in chiefs' houses or fields. (16; 3; 17; 18; 15; 19) Previous reporting also indicated that residents who refused to work were subjected to either a fine, eviction, confiscation of livestock, and/or refusal of educational scholarships for children. (11; 20; 10) However, in 2017, there were no reports that local chiefs forced residents or children to work, only anecdotal reports that this practice happened in previous years. (16; 3; 17; 18; 15; 17; 18; 15; 21; 22)

In 2018, the Government of Eswatini and the ILO published results from the 2014 Survey on Child Labor in Herding in Rural Areas in Eswatini. (23) The results show that an estimated 72,332 child laborers below the age of 15 years raise bovines, and 20,680 raise sheep and goats primarily in the rural areas of Hhohho, Manzini, Shiselweni, and Lumbobo. (23) Children perform physically arduous tasks while herding in the grasslands and mountainous regions, and risk occupational injury and disease from exposure to dangerous tools, insecticides, and herbicides. Children's injuries sustained during livestock herding include fractures, dislocations and sprains, burns, frostbite, breathing problems, skin problems, extreme fatigue, and snake bites. (23)

Eswatini children, especially girls and orphans, are trafficked within and outside the country to neighboring countries, such as South Africa, for commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor in agriculture and domestic work. (3) Some Mozambican boys migrate to Eswatini, become victims of human trafficking, and subsequently are forced to engage in street work and herd livestock, including cattle. (3; 15) Although Eswatini has a high HIV prevalence, social programs supported by civil society groups have assisted children orphaned or made vulnerable by family members' illnesses or deaths and reduced their vulnerabilities to child labor. (24; 25; 15) However, children, especially those with disabilities, have difficulty accessing education because of school fees and stigmatization by the public. (20; 25)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Eswatini has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Eswatini's legal framework to adequately protect children from child labor, including minimum age law protections.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	15	Article 234 of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act; Section 97 of the Employment Act (26; 27)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 236 of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act (26)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 16, 233, 236, and 237 of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act (26)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 17 of the Constitution; Article 75 of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act; Article 13 of the People Trafficking and People Smuggling (Prohibition) Act (26; 28; 29)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 75 of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act; Article 13 of the People Trafficking and People Smuggling (Prohibition) Act (26; 29)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Sections 42–46 of the Crimes Act; Sections 1–5 and 7 of the Obscene Publications Act (30; 31)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 16 and 49 of Children's Protection and Welfare Act (26)

Compulsory Education Age	No	12/13‡	Section 10 of the Free Primary Education Act (33)
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 3 of the Free Primary Education Act (33)

* No conscription (32)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (34)

Previous reports indicated that local chiefs required residents, including children, to participate in non-communal tasks such as seasonal weeding. This work was performed through the customary practice of Kuhlehla, which was initially established by Administrative Order No. 6 of 1998. (11; 20) The ILO has requested that the government issued legislation to regulate the nature and conditions of Kuhlehla, and ensure the law explicitly states the voluntary nature of participation in such work. (11)

Although Section 10 of the Free Primary Education Act requires parents to send their children to school for the completion of primary education, this educational attainment is typically at ages 12 or 13. As a result, children between the ages of 12 and 13 are vulnerable to child labor, as they are not required to be in school but cannot legally work because they are under age 15, the minimum age for work. (33; 34)

Additionally, Section 97 of the Employment Act applies minimum age protections to children working in industrial undertakings, but it does not cover children working in domestic and agricultural work. (35) Similarly, the Children's Protection and Welfare Act prohibits hazardous work for children in industrial undertakings, including in mining, manufacturing, and electrical work; however, these prohibitions do not cover domestic work or agricultural work. Child laborers engaged in agricultural labor often work long hours, carry heavy loads, work in remote areas, and risk exposure to harmful pesticides. (23) In addition, Sections 13–15 and 23–28 of the Sexual Offenses and Domestic Violence Bill, which the Parliament passed in June 2018 but awaits the King's assent, criminalizes using, procuring, and offering a child for commercial sexual exploitation. (36)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Security that may hinder adequate enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MLSS)	Enforce child labor laws and promote relations between labor, government, and business through tripartite dialogue. (7; 37)
Royal Eswatini Police	Investigate cases involving the worst forms of child labor. (7; 37)
Department of Social Welfare	Refer suspected cases of child labor to the Royal Eswatini Police or Ministry of Labor and Social Security. Offer rehabilitative services to victims of child labor, including orphans. (7; 37)
Director of Public Prosecutions	Prosecute cases involving the worst forms of child labor. (15) Responsible for implementing victim identification guidelines and referral mechanisms for actual and potential victims of human trafficking. (34)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Eswatini took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Security that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the authority to assess penalties.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

* The government does not publish this information.

The Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MLSS) budget was decreased in 2017 by the Cabinet, which resulted in a decline in the number of labor inspectors. The MLSS and NGOs also noted that labor inspectors lacked sufficient resources to conduct inspections, such as vehicles. (2; 34) In addition, the number of labor inspectors is slightly insufficient for the size of Eswatini's workforce, which comprises more than 446,000 workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Eswatini would employ about 30 labor inspectors - which would require the hiring of 15 additional inspectors to meet this threshold. (38; 39; 40)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Eswatini appeared to function effectively with regard to addressing child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Director of Public Prosecutions that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the lack of convictions for crimes involving the worst forms of child labor.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017

In 2017, 598 new investigators received training on combatting human trafficking, which included segments on child trafficking and online child sexual abuse and exploitation. (41)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
Trafficking in Persons (TIP) Secretariat	Coordinate, monitor, and implement programs to combat trafficking in persons, with the assistance of the Anti-Human Trafficking Task Force. (42) The TIP Secretariat, police, and prosecutor's office continue to lack sufficient resources for effective coordination. (15) During the year, the Secretariat sheltered two minors suspected to be victims of trafficking, updated its national action plan, allocated 80,000 Eswatini emalangeni ($6,000 USD) to the victim protection fund, cooperated with the South African government on TIP investigations, and raised awareness about human trafficking via media outlets. (34)
Anti-Human Trafficking Task Force	Exchange information on cases of human trafficking between relevant stakeholders, including the police, immigration, social services, and prosecutors. Comprises a conglomerate of NGOs and government entities, including the Royal Eswatini Police, Director of Public Prosecutions, Attorney General's Office, Department of Social Welfare, Department of Health, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, and MLSS. (7; 43) The Task Force was reestablished in January, met three times during the year, and held public awareness activities on the prevention of child trafficking. (34)

Although the government has coordinating mechanisms that address human trafficking, the government does not have a coordinating mechanism to address all child labor issues, including child labor in agriculture and domestic work.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementing relevant child labor policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Children's Policy (2009-present)	Represents the policy framework of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act. Objectives include the promotion of the rights of children and the protection of children from all types of abuse and exploitation, including child labor. (44) In addition, the policy outlines strategies for the government to improve quality education to children. (44) Research was unable to determine whether actions were taken to implement this policy in 2017.
National Strategic Framework and Action Plan to Combat People Trafficking	Assigns responsibilities to relevant government agencies on trafficking in persons. (45; 46) Research was unable to determine whether actions were taken to implement this policy in 2017.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (47)

In 2014, the government developed a draft Action Program on the Elimination of Child Labor (APEC), but the MLSS has yet to present it to the tripartite body, the Labor Advisory Board, for consultations. The Labor Advisory Board must first approve the policy before it can be adopted. (2; 20; 34) Moreover, child labor elimination and prevention strategies are not included in the Eswatini Education and Training Sector Policy. (48)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the child labor problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues (2011–2017)	USDOL-funded project, implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries, to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016. Established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aimed to improve the evidence base on child labor through data collection and research in Eswatini. In 2017, the project published a survey about child labor used in herding activities in rural areas. Additional information is available on the USDOL website.

Program	Description
Decent Work Country Program (2010–2017)	ILO program that raised awareness of and provided training programs on international labor standards, resulting in the development of national laws related to the ratified ILO conventions. (49; 50) Research was unable to determine whether actions taken during the year.
Free Primary Education Program†	Government program that provides free primary education to approximately 24,000 children starting from age six for a period of seven years or up to grade seven. (2; 51; 34)

† Program is funded by the Government of Eswatini.

Although the government, in collaboration with NGOs, provided child trafficking victims with basic necessities, such as food, clothing, toiletries, counseling, and medical care, programs are not sufficient to address the scope of problem. (20; 52) During the year, a USG-funded project implemented by Heartland Alliance trained judges, magistrates, prosecutors, border agents, and law enforcement officials on victim-centric approaches to investigation, prosecution, and conduction of hearings related to human trafficking. (34) The government has yet to partner with an institution with the appropriate conditions to serve as a shelter for victims of human trafficking and law enforcement personnel need training on victim rights. (15; 34) Moreover, research found no evidence of social programs to address child labor in herding and domestic work.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Eswatini (Table 11)

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Adopt legislation that regulates the work performed through the customary practice of Kuhlehla.	2017
	Establish a compulsory education age that is consistent with the minimum age for work.	2009 – 2017
	Adopt legislation that prohibits the recruitment of children under 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2017
	Adopt minimum age provisions for children working in all industries, including in agriculture and domestic work.	2013 – 2017
	Ensure that the hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children are comprehensive and cover agricultural undertakings and domestic work.	2012 – 2017
Enforcement	Publish information about the Labor Inspectorate’s funding.	2017
	Authorize the Labor Inspectorate to assess penalties.	2016 – 2017
	Provide labor inspectors with refresher courses on the worst forms of child labor.	2017
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO’s technical advice.	2016 – 2017
	Provide adequate resources, including vehicles, to conduct labor inspections.	2013 – 2017
Coordination	Establish coordinating mechanisms that address all child labor issues, such as children working in agriculture and domestic work.	2015 – 2017
	Provide sufficient resources for effective coordination between the TIP Secretariat, police, and DPP to address child labor.	2017
Government Policies	Implement child labor related policies, such as the National Children’s Policy.	2017
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the Eswatini Education and Training Sector Policy.	2010 – 2017
Social Programs	Ensure that children, including disabled children, are able to access free education, including by paying or eliminating school fees.	2013 – 2017
	Develop social protection programs to assist children engaged in child labor in domestic service and herding.	2014 – 2017
	Identify an appropriate partner to provide shelter for victims of trafficking, and ensure all government and partner staff members receive sufficient training to address victims of human trafficking.	2017

In 2017, Ethiopia made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government trained 110 labor inspectors on child labor issues and the Council of Ministers adopted the National Children's Policy of Ethiopia. In collaboration with the World Bank and UNICEF, the government developed Education Operational Response Plans for Oromia, Somali, and the Southern Nations, Nationalities, and Peoples' Region for the 2017/2018 school year. By the end of 2017, the General Education Quality Improvement Project II procured and distributed 178 million textbooks, teaching guides, and supplementary materials. However, children in Ethiopia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced labor in domestic work. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. The law in Ethiopia does not include free basic education or a compulsory age for education, leaving children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. Social programs to combat child labor have not sufficiently targeted sectors with high incidences of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Ethiopia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced labor in domestic work. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (1; 2; 3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Ethiopia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	7 to 14	41.5 (10,202,669)
Attending School (%)	7 to 14	73.1
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	30.8
Primary Completion Rate (%)		54.3

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2015, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (4)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Socio Economic Survey (ESS 3), 2015-2016. (5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Planting and harvesting apples, bananas, coffee, cotton, and khat (6; 7; 3; 8)
	Herding livestock, including cattle (6; 9; 10; 11)
	Fishing
Industry	Mining† gold (12)
	Quarrying† (6)
	Construction,† including carrying heavy loads and digging (6; 9; 11)
	Making pottery products (6)
	Traditional weaving of hand-woven textiles (6; 13)
Services	Domestic work (1; 7; 9; 8)
	Unpaid household services, including carrying heavy loads of water and firewood (6; 7)
	Street work, including shoe shining, assisting taxi drivers, vending, portering, and begging (1; 6; 9; 11; 14)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (11; 14; 15; 16)
	Forced labor in domestic work, herding, street vending, and traditional weaving of hand-woven textiles, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (6; 17; 16)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Children are trafficked from rural areas to Addis Ababa and to other regions of the country for forced labor in the weaving industry and in domestic work. (6; 17; 16) Children also reportedly harvest and sell khat, a stimulant to which they may become addicted due to bodily contact with the plants' excretions during harvest. (3) Families continue to play a role in financing and coercing their children to go abroad or to urban areas to look for work. (18; 17) Children who begin as voluntary migrants may be forced into prostitution or become victims of forced labor. (3)

Many children face barriers to education, including the distance rural children must travel to reach school; a lack of sanitation, which especially affects adolescent girls; the requirement to pay for uniforms and supplies; and a lack of teachers. These factors increase children's risk of entering the workforce at a young age. (9; 19; 3; 8; 20) In the Southern Nations, Nationalities, and Peoples' (SNNP) Region, sexual abuse, harassment of girls, and schools closed due to conflict are additional barriers to education. (19; 21)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Ethiopia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Ethiopia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work and the age for compulsory education.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	14	Article 89.2 and 185.1 of the Labour Proclamation (22)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No	18‡	Articles 89.1, 89.3 and 185.1 of the Labour Proclamation (22)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 89.4 and 185.1 of the Labour Proclamation; Directive on Prohibited Occupations for Young Workers (22; 23)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 18.3 of the Constitution; Article 596 of the Criminal Code; Articles 2.4 and 3–4 of the Proclamation to Provide for the Prevention and Suppression of Trafficking in Persons and Smuggling of Migrants (24; 25; 26)

* No conscription (25)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (22)

Not all Ethiopian laws related to child labor are in compliance with international standards. Article 89.5 of the Labour Proclamation allows children ages 14 to 16 to engage in certain forms of hazardous work following the completion of a government-approved and inspected vocational training course. (22; 27) This contradicts ILO Convention 138, which prohibits hazardous work for all children under age 16. In addition, the Labour Proclamation applies only to children in a contractual employment relationship, which does not conform to international standards that require all children be protected under the law establishing a minimum age for work. (22; 27) Also, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children do not cover traditional weaving, an area of work in which there is evidence of using dangerous machinery, equipment, and tools; or work that involves the manual handling or transporting of heavy loads other than in the transportation industry. (22; 23)

Although it does not appear that there are any laws providing free basic education or a compulsory education age, the Education and Training policy prioritizes government financial support for students through grade 10, providing scholarships to outstanding students, and offering financial assistance to students in deprived regions. (28)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor of and Social Affairs (MOLSA) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs (MOLSA)	Conduct labor inspections of formal worksites at the regional level through its regional Bureaus of Labor and Social Affairs. (9; 29) Through its Occupational Safety and Health Case Team, enforce occupational safety, health, and wage and hour protections, which include child labor laws. (11; 29) Collect and analyze data and make policy recommendations on labor. (29)
Ethiopian Federal Police Commission	Investigate criminal violations of laws that protect against the worst forms of child labor. (30) Through its Special Child Protection Units in Addis Ababa and other major cities, combat child trafficking and assist vulnerable children. (31; 16) Through its Human Trafficking and Narcotics Section, collaborate with the prosecutor's office to investigate human trafficking, prosecute offenders, and report and collect human trafficking data. (32)
Office of Attorney General (OAG)	Prosecute criminal violations of child labor laws. Lead the Anti-Human Trafficking and Smuggling of Migrants Task Force. (9; 30)
Ministry of Women and Children's Affairs	Develop and implement programs to protect vulnerable children and monitor alleged violations of child protection laws, including the worst forms of child labor. (2; 33)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Ethiopia took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the MOLSA that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the authority to assess penalties.

A significant decrease in the funding for the labor inspectorate from 2016 to 2017 prevented proper enforcement of child labor laws, particularly at construction sites, and in domestic work. (9; 29; 3) In addition, the penalties for violating child labor laws range from $11 to $44 and are too low to deter violations. (22; 29) The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Ethiopia's workforce of 52.82 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Ethiopia would employ about 1,321 inspectors. (36; 37; 38)

In 2017, World Vision Ethiopia provided training on child labor to 38 labor inspectors and 661 other government officials. (3; 18; 34) In addition, the MOLSA organized a workshop on child labor and human trafficking for approximately 60 regional government officials, trained 110 labor inspectors on child labor issues, and invested in new monitoring equipment for the inspectorate during the year. (18) In addition, with the support of Addis Ababa's city administration support, the MOLSA worked with clothing designers to develop a program to certify clothing as child-labor free. (18)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Ethiopia took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including collecting and publishing enforcement statistics.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Training for Investigators
Initial Training for New Employees	Yes (30)	N/A (34)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (9)	N/A (3; 34)

Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (9)	Unknown (3)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (9)	Unknown (3)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (9)	Yes (3)

The government completed 1,400 criminal investigations during the reporting period, mainly in the commercial agriculture sector, especially work involving cash crop cultivation. The number of violations relating to children is unknown due to a lack of age verification documentation. (3; 34) Although the government increased its enforcement efforts, it continues to focus on transnational human trafficking for the purpose of forced labor, to the detriment of domestic human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation as a result of child trafficking, which is a known problem in Ethiopia. (16)

Ethiopian immigration and border patrol authorities refer trafficking victims to NGO-run shelters, where they are given first aid and assistance to return home. Although the centers do not disaggregate data for children, NGOs reported that many of those receiving services were younger than age 18 years old. (3) Some of these trafficking victims were returning from Gulf States. (3)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
National Steering Committee on the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Coordinate activities on the worst forms of child labor. Members include the MOLSA, the Ministry of Women and Children's Affairs, and the Ministry of Education. (32)
MOLSA National Forum to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Combat the worst forms of child labor at the national level. Meets twice a year. Includes participants from the Ethiopian Employers' Federation and Confederation of Ethiopian Trade Unions. (32)
National Steering Committee Against Sexual Exploitation of Women and Children	Develop action plans and coordinate activities to combat the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (33)
National Committee to Combat Trafficking in Persons	Address international exploitation, including the worst forms of child labor. Chaired by the Deputy Prime Minister, with representatives from five government ministries and regional presidents that meet twice a year. (26; 39; 40) In 2017, continued to coordinate anti-trafficking efforts and provided in-kind support to NGOs for victim services. (16)
National Anti-Human Trafficking and Smuggling of Migrants Task Force	Develop quarterly action plans and coordinate activities against trafficking in persons and migrant smuggling. Led by the Office of Attorney General and includes representatives from 31 government stakeholders and international organizations such as the IOM, the ILO, and the UNODC. (41; 26; 40)
Child Protection Committees, Child Rights Committees, and Orphans and Vulnerable Children Task Forces	Promote children's rights, provide children with food and school supplies, and train members on child labor issues, case management, international child labor standards, and Ethiopian child labor laws. Members include children, police, health workers, and teachers. (42; 33)

Research was unable to determine whether most of the coordinating bodies were active during the reporting period, indicating that limited committee budgets may still affect their ability to operate and coordinate efforts to address child labor. (9; 43)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor‡

Policy	Description
National Children's Policy †	Aims to promote children's rights and combat child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and child labor. Promotes access to quality primary and secondary education, education in rural areas or for out-of-school youth. (44) Although the policy was drafted in 2009, it was formally endorsed by the Ethiopian Council of Ministers in April 2017. (34)
National Action Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2016–2020)	Includes guidelines on child labor identification, withdrawal, reintegration, and educational policies. Overseen by the National Steering Committee on the Worst Forms of Child Labor. (34)
National Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Persons (2015–2020)	Examines legal and institutional frameworks and responses related to the human trafficking situation in Ethiopia. Aims to provide guiding principles based on international best practices for anti-human trafficking action and the institutional structures and inputs needed to combat human trafficking. (45)

Policy	Description
National Youth Policy	Condemns the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation and illicit work. Led by the Ministry of Youth, Sports, and Culture. Lacks a detailed and specific action plan related to preventing the worst forms of child labor. (46; 47)
UNDAF (2016–2020)	Promotes improved access to education and livelihood services for vulnerable children. Seeks to protect children from abuse, violence, and exploitation, and rehabilitate them. (48)
National Human Rights Action Plan (NHRAP) II (2016–2020)	Aims to develop a comprehensive and structured mechanism to strengthen human rights in Ethiopia, building on the NHRAP I, which included efforts to eliminate exploitative child labor. (49; 50)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (33; 51; 52; 53; 54)

The government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the Education Sector Development Program or the National Technical Vocational Education and Training Strategy. (55; 56) Additionally, Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the above policies policy during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor‡

Program	Description
USDOL-Funded Projects to Address Child Labor	Aim to eliminate child labor through research, capacity building, and increased access to education and decent work opportunities. Includes: Global Research on Child Labor Measurement and Policy Development (2013–2017), implemented in at least 10 countries by the ILO; Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues (2011–2017), implemented in approximately 40 countries by the ILO; and Engaged, Educated, Empowered, Ethiopian Youth Project (2014–2018), a $10 million project implemented by World Vision, Inc. (57; 58; 59) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
ET Productive Safety Nets Project (PSNP4) (2014–2020)†	$2.2 billion World Bank and donor-funded project that aims to improve access to social safety nets, including cash and in-kind transfers to orphans and vulnerable children. (60; 61) By the end of 2017, delivered food, cash, or a combination of transfers to 8 million project participants in 205 million households. (62)
Integrated Basic Social Services with Social Cash Transfer (IN-SCT) (2016–2018)†	UNICEF and the MOLSA-funded project in support of the PSNP4 that aims to improve nutritional and educational outcomes in the Oromia and the Southern Nations, Nationalities, and People's region (SNNP) by providing vulnerable populations, including child laborers, with cash transfers. (63) A midline report published in 2017 indicates service providers are more aware of their roles and work collaboratively, including with law enforcement, resulting in greater awareness of the importance of education at the community level. (64) In 2017, provided 163,337 children with access to education and developed Education Operational Response Plans for Oromia, Somali, and the SNNP regions for the 2017/2018 school year. (21)
General Education Quality Improvement Project II (2014–2018)	$550 million World Bank and donor-funded project that aims to improve learning conditions in Ethiopia through curriculum development, textbook assessment, teacher training, and school construction. (65) By the end of 2017, procured and distributed 178 million textbooks, teaching guides, and supplementary materials; 46,046 primary school teacher trainees and 9,139 secondary school teacher trainees are expected to graduate by 2018. (66)
Forum on Sustainable Child Empowerment (FSCE)	Aims to protect and support vulnerable children. Operates child protection units in police stations and established Community-Based Child Correction Centers to improve support for children in conflict with the law. (18; 67) In 2017, intercepted, rehabilitated, and provided psychosocial support for more than 1,000 trafficked children. (18)

† Program is funded by the Government of Ethiopia.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (9; 30; 68; 69)

Although the government participates in and implements several programs to combat child labor, these programs do not sufficiently target sectors with high incidences of child labor, such as agriculture and domestic work. (9)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Ethiopia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that all children are protected by child labor laws, including children working in non-contractual employment.	2009 – 2017
	Raise the minimum age at which children may enter hazardous work following vocational training from age 14 to age 16, in line with ILO C. 138.	2009 – 2017
	Ensure that the types of hazardous work prohibited for children are comprehensive, including hazardous tasks in traditional weaving.	2016 – 2017
	Establish by law, free basic education and an age up to which education is compulsory that is consistent with the minimum age of employment.	2012 – 2017
Enforcement	Strengthen the Labor Inspectorate by permitting labor inspectors to assess penalties.	2013 – 2017
	Ensure that labor inspectors have sufficient resources to conduct inspections in all sectors.	2009 – 2017
	Ensure that penalties are severe enough to deter child labor law violations.	2013 – 2017
	Significantly increase the number of labor inspectors in accordance with the ILO's technical advice.	2015 – 2017
	Gather and publish information on whether refresher courses are provided for criminal inspectors, the number of penalties applied and collected for child labor violations found, whether unannounced inspections were conducted, the number of prosecutions initiated, and convictions obtained.	2009 – 2017
Coordination	Ensure that established coordinating mechanisms to combat child labor have adequate funding to fulfill their mandates.	2015 – 2017
Government Policies	Develop an action plan on the worst forms of child labor for the National Youth Policy.	2009 – 2017
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the Education Sector Development Program and the National Technical Vocational Education and Training Strategy.	2013 – 2017
Social Programs	Increase access to education by decreasing the distance to schools in rural areas, constructing sanitation facilities, eliminating school-related costs, addressing sexual abuse and harassment of girls, and re-opening schools closed due to conflict.	2010 – 2017
	Develop and/or expand social protection programs to prevent or withdraw children from all relevant sectors of child labor, including agriculture and domestic work.	2009 – 2017

In 2017, Fiji made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government acceded to the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons. In addition, the government hosted the Pacific Islands Regional Consultation in preparation for the IV Global Conference on the Sustained Eradication of Child Labor, and the government has begun to implement its National Action Plan on the Eradication of Child Labor. However, children in Fiji engage in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. The government has not approved the draft National Action Plan for Child Labor or the 5-year Strategic Plan for Combating Child Labor, and the Inter-Agency Trafficking Task Force has not been active since 2012.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Fiji engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (1; 2; 3; 4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Fiji.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		106.4

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2015, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (5) Data were unavailable from Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis, 2016. (6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Cutting,† loading,† weeding, and spraying chemicals† on sugarcane (7; 1; 2)
	Planting, picking, and using chemicals† on tobacco (1)
	Collecting and splitting coconuts, harvesting rice; planting, harvesting, weeding, and spraying fertilizers on roots (including dalo and yaqona ); and planting and harvesting other kinds of fruits and vegetables† (1)
	Pig farming and goat and cattle herding (1)
	Fishing† and deep-sea diving† (1; 8; 2)
Services	Street work, including pushing wheelbarrows for shoppers in markets, vending, washing cars, shining shoes, and begging (1; 9; 10; 11; 12)
	Domestic work (1; 12)
	Working in garages or in retail shops (9; 12; 2)
	Selling fruit (1; 9)
	Collecting bottles† and scrap metal† (1; 12)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1; 13; 14; 15; 16; 17; 3; 18)
	Forced labor in agriculture, begging, and domestic work, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (19; 20; 3)
	Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking (1; 12)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Commercial sexual exploitation of children continued to occur in Fiji, particularly by family members, taxi drivers, foreign tourists, businessmen, and crew on foreign fishing vessels. (1; 16; 3; 17; 18) Parents sometimes send their children to live with families in cities or near schools to facilitate their continuing education and to perform light household work. Research found that some of these children are vulnerable to involuntary domestic work or are forced to engage in sexual activity in exchange for food, clothing, or shelter. (21; 22; 3)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Fiji has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

In 2017, Fiji acceded to the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons. (23)

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Fiji's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including light work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 92 of the Employment Relations Promulgation (24)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 40 of the Employment Relations (Administration) Regulations; Hazardous Occupations Prohibited to Children Under 18 Years of Age Order (25; 26)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Hazardous Occupations Prohibited to Children Under 18 Years of Age Order (26)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 6 and 91 of the Employment Relations Promulgation; Articles 20–21 of the Immigration Act; Articles 102–103 and 111–121 of the Crimes Decree; Article 10 of the Constitution of the Republic of Fiji (24; 27; 28; 29)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 91 of the Employment Relations Promulgation; Article 20 of the Immigration Act; Article 10 of the Constitution of the Republic of Fiji; Articles 111–121 of the Crimes Decree (24; 27; 28; 29)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 91 of the Employment Relations Promulgation; Articles 225–227 of the Crimes Decree; Article 62A of the Juveniles (Amendment) Act (24; 29; 30)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 91 of the Employment Relations Promulgation; Article 58 of the Juveniles Act (24; 31)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment
State Compulsory	Yes*	18	Article 7 of the Royal Fiji Military Forces Act (32)
State Voluntary	Yes	18	Article 7 of the Royal Fiji Military Forces Act (32)
Non-state	No

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Compulsory Education Order; Compulsory Education Regulations (33)
Free Public Education	No

* No conscription (32)

The Employment Relations Promulgation specifies the conditions under which children ages 13–15 may engage in light work, but does not include a list of activities that are permissible. (34; 24) In addition, Fijian law does not criminally prohibit the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups. (2)

Although it does not appear that there are any laws that provide free basic education, the government has a policy that provides for free basic education. (35; 36)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Employment, Productivity, and Industrial Relations that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Employment, Productivity, and Industrial Relations	Monitor compliance with the minimum age for employment requirements and the Employment Relations Promulgation. (10; 2) Oversee 14 Divisional Labor Offices responsible for investigating cases of child labor and making appropriate referrals. (10) In the case of the Child Labor Unit, coordinate activities at the national, divisional, and district levels through interagency committees on child abuse, including conducting trainings on child labor and maintaining a 24-hour phone line to accept reports of child labor and refer children to social services when appropriate. (34; 2)
Employment Relations Tribunal	Adjudicate alleged violations of child labor provisions in the Employment Relations Promulgation. (2)
Fiji Police Force	Enforce laws on child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and illicit activities. Maintain a Human Trafficking Unit and provide training to other police units focused on combating human trafficking. (10; 37) Employ five officers responsible for enforcing criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (34) Collaborate with the Australian Federal Police to combat potential child sex tourism by Australian nationals, who comprise the largest tourist group visiting Fiji. (21)
Department of Immigration	Coordinate with the Fiji Police Force to investigate cases involving underage victims of commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking, which are then tried in the criminal court system. (37)
Departments of Social Welfare and Public Prosecutions	Enforce laws on child trafficking. (38) Operate four homes and provide social services for child trafficking victims. (10; 39)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Fiji took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Employment, Productivity, and Industrial Relations that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the lack of labor law enforcement information and penalty assessment authorization.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (34)	Unknown

Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (34)	Yes (40)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (34)	Yes (2)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (34)	Yes (2)

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Employment, Productivity, and Industrial Relations had approximate total operating expenditures of $8.1 million. (2) Inspections are conducted in the workers' language, including English, Fijian Hindi, and vernacular Fijian. (2)

The Ministry of Women, Children, and Poverty Alleviation continued to fund the National Child Helpline for children who seek counseling, advice, and referrals for support services, as well as to report cases of child neglect and abuse. Research suggests that the helpline has received 33,643 calls since it was established in 2016. (41; 40)

In addition, the Interagency Committee on Child Abuse is responsible for sharing information on child labor cases, and when a referral is made, the committee is duty-bound to monitor the case. (4; 2)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Fiji took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Training for Investigators
Initial Training for New Employees	Yes (37)	Unknown
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (34)	N/A (2)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (37)	Unknown
Number of Investigations	Unknown (37)	Unknown
Number of Violations Found	5 (37)	Unknown
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	0 (37)	0 (40)
Number of Convictions	0 (37)	0 (40)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (37)	Yes (2)

In Fiji, child labor cases can be referred case-by-case to the Department of Social Welfare and Public Prosecutions by criminal authority agencies, including the Fiji Police Force (2).

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the inactivity of the Inter-Agency Trafficking Task Force.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
Inter-Agency Network	Focus on child labor issues at the district and provincial level. Monitor and report cases of non-compliance. (42) Conduct awareness-raising activities in collaboration with the Child Labor Unit. (42) Comprises interagency committees in nine towns in Fiji. (38; 43)
Inter-Agency Taskforce on Beggars	Address issues concerning children who beg and other exploited children. (38) Enforce zero-tolerance policy on child begging. (11)
Inter-Agency Trafficking Task Force	Implement the National Plan of Action to Eradicate Trafficking in Persons and Child Trafficking. Headed by the Department of Immigration. (38; 10; 39)
Inter-Agency Committee on Child Abuse	Develop policies and procedures for the prevention of child labor, including training for communities, schools, and industries in which child labor occurs. (40) Investigate child labor cases, refer children to school, and monitor the cases when a referral is made. (4; 2; 40)

The Inter-Agency Trafficking Task Force has not been active since 2012, and the lack of coordination may limit the government's effectiveness in efforts to combat child trafficking. (10; 11)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the lack of a national child labor action plan.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Plan of Action to Eradicate Trafficking in Persons and Child Trafficking	Guides the government's efforts to prevent and combat trafficking in persons. Focuses on increasing public awareness and education on human trafficking-related issues and prioritizes anti-trafficking training for government officials. (39) Chaired by the Immigration Department, with the Fiji Police Force's Human Trafficking Unit serving as the lead coordinator. (11) Coordinates interagency efforts to investigate and begin formal charges in suspected human trafficking cases. (21)
Free Education Grant	Provides 12 years of tuition-free education for children with Fijian citizenship in 904 eligible primary and secondary schools. Provided approximately $32 million for tuition-free education and textbooks during the 2017–2018 fiscal year, an increase from the previous year. (22; 35; 44; 45; 42; 40)

In October 2017, the government hosted the Pacific Islands Regional Consultation in Nadi in preparation for the IV Global Conference on the Sustained Eradication of Child Labor. (46)

Although the government has not yet approved a draft National Action Plan for Child Labor or the 5-year Strategic Plan for Combating Child Labor, the government has begun to implement the National Action Plan on the Eradication of Child Labor. (34; 22; 47; 48; 40) The government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the Pacific UN Development Assistance Framework. (49; 50)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including addressing the needs of children in rural areas.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor†

Program	Description
Tackling Child Labor Through Education Project (2015–2017)	European Union-funded project that enhanced coordination, enforcement, and monitoring mechanisms to build the capacity of stakeholders in the implementation of policies and programs on formal and non-formal education, school retention, and access to education for out-of-school children; and promoted research and raised awareness on child labor issues. (51)
Safety Net Project†	Program that funds rehabilitation services for female victims of commercial sexual exploitation under age 18. Receive referrals from various entities, including the Fiji Police. (52)
Food Voucher and Bus Fare Assistance†	Ministry of Education program that provides $24 in food vouchers and subsidized bus fares for families who earn less than $7,382 combined income, to offset the cost of education for children attending remote schools. In 2017, the government allocated $216,900 for purchase of new boats and motors to improve access to education for students in rural areas who rely on boats to commute to school. (22; 42; 44; 40)

Program	Description
Tuition Fee Free Grant†	Ministry of Education began to provide a subsidized tuition fee free grant for early childhood education centers or students attending preschool. Government allocated $1,561,476 to all special-needs primary schools, an increase of $267,343. (22)

† Program is funded by the Government of Fiji.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (11; 53)

Fiji has insufficient social programs available to address the particular needs of child victims of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation, especially for boys and for children in remote areas. (54; 55) NGOs provide limited support services, but these are concentrated in the capital city of Suva. (54; 43; 55)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Fiji (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography and the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict.	2013 – 2017
	Establish by law free basic public education.	2016 – 2017
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2017
	Ensure that the law's light work provisions are specific enough to prevent children from involvement in child labor.	2015 – 2017
Enforcement	Publish information on the Labor Inspectorate funding.	2015 – 2017
	Publish information on labor law enforcement efforts, the number and type of labor inspections conducted, trainings provided for labor inspectors, and whether routine inspections are conducted.	2017
	Publish information on criminal law enforcement efforts, including the training system for investigators, the number of investigations conducted, and the number of violations found.	2017
Coordination	Ensure that the Inter-Agency Trafficking Task Force meets regularly to address implementation of the National Plan of Action to Eliminate Trafficking in Persons and Child Trafficking and to strengthen government efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor.	2014 – 2017
Government Policies	Finalize and implement the National Action Plan for Child Labor and the 5-year Strategic Plan for Combating Child Labor.	2013 – 2017
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into Fiji's country program framework for the Pacific UN Development Assistance Framework for the Pacific Region.	2015 – 2017
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2017
	Increase the availability of support services for child victims of commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking, including adequate counseling and specialized shelters, especially for boys and for children in remote areas.	2010 – 2017

In 2017, Gabon made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government launched the Economic Recovery Plan, which includes the goal of improving the quality of public education, addressing the teacher deficit, and accelerating the construction of classrooms. However, children in Gabon perform dangerous tasks in domestic work and transportation. The government lacks prohibitions against the use of children in illicit activities, and the minimum age for work provisions applies only to children in formal employment relationships and excludes children who work in the informal sector. Also, labor inspectors do not have the authority to assess penalties, and they lack the basic resources, such as transportation, fuel, and office supplies, necessary to conduct investigations.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Gabon perform dangerous tasks in domestic work and transportation. (1; 2; 3; 4; 5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Gabon. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	22.3 (83,073)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	94.4
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	23.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		Unavailable

Primary completion rate was unavailable from UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (6)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Deuxième Enquête Démographique et de Santé au Gabon (EDSG-II) Survey, 2012. (7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Fishing, including the production and sale of smoked fish (5)
Industry	Working in sand quarries† (8; 9; 5)
	Working in brick factories (5)
Services	Domestic work (1; 10; 11; 5)
	Street vending, including cleaning market spaces at night and carrying heavy loads† (12; 5)
	Garbage scavenging (5)
	Working in restaurants (8; 9)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Working in transportation† and as mechanics (8; 13; 9; 5)
	Forced labor in markets, restaurants, handicraft shops, sand quarries, farming, animal husbandry, fishing, domestic work, and as mechanics, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2; 11; 14; 4)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2; 3; 15; 10; 4)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Gabon is primarily a destination and transit country for victims of child trafficking from other countries in Central and West Africa. (1; 3; 13; 16; 10; 4) Some parents entrust their children to intermediaries who subject them to child trafficking for labor exploitation rather than providing education and safe work opportunities; however, there is limited evidence of child trafficking occurring within Gabon. (4) A national child labor survey or similar research has not been conducted in Gabon. (17)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Although the Law on General Education guarantees the right to free and compulsory education, in practice students must pay for supplies and school fees, which may be prohibitive. (13; 18; 19; 20) Rural areas also lack schools and teachers, and education beyond primary school is often unavailable. (13; 21; 5) Reports suggest that some children, especially girls, are sexually abused at school. (2; 8; 13; 22) In addition, one report indicates that some indigenous groups and children living in remote areas do not have birth certificates because they may not have been born at hospitals. (8) Birth registration is often required for school enrollment, and out-of-school children are more vulnerable to child labor. (18)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Gabon has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Gabon's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Article 177 of the Labor Code; Article 2 of Decree N° 0651/PR/MTEPS Establishing Individual Exceptions to the Minimum Age for Admission to Employment (23; 24; 25)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 1 of the Hazardous Work List (23; 24; 26)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 2, 3 and 5 of the Hazardous Work List (23; 24; 26)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 4 of the Labor Code; Articles 3, 11–13, and 20 of Law N° 09/04 Preventing and Fighting Against Child Trafficking (23; 27)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Articles 3, 11–14, and 20 of Law N° 09/04 Preventing and Fighting Against Child Trafficking; Decree N° 0031/PR/MTEEF on Children's Work; Article 278 bis of the Penal Code (27; 28; 29; 30)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 260–261 and 263 of the Penal Code (30)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Prohibition of Military Recruitment
State Compulsory	Yes*	18	Article 17 of the Law on the Organization of National Defense and Public Security (31; 17)
State Voluntary	Yes	18	Article 17 of the Law on the Organization of National Defense and Public Security (31; 17)
Non-state	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 1 of the Constitution; Article 2 of Act N° 21/2011 on General Education; Article 344.8 of the Penal Code (20; 30; 32)
Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 1.18 and 1.19 of the Constitution; Article 2 of Act N° 21/2011 on General Education (20; 32)

* No conscription (17)

Article 2 of Decree N° 0651/PR/MTEPS Establishing Individual Exceptions to the Minimum Age for Admission to Employment permits children under age 16 to perform light work with parental permission. However, it does not set a minimum age for light work or specify the kinds of light work that are allowed. (25; 33) In addition, although the Labor Code prohibits work by children under age 16, the minimum age protections do not apply to children outside of formal work relationships, which does not conform to international standards that require all children be protected under the law establishing a minimum age for work. (23; 9)

Laws related to child trafficking are not in line with international standards, as they do not prohibit trafficking of children for the purpose of sexual exploitation. (23; 27; 30) The law also does not criminally prohibit producing pornography, nor the procuring or offering of children for pornographic performances. (30; 14) However, research indicates that in practice, existing laws related to forced labor and pimping may be used to prosecute these offenses. (17)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor, Employment, Youth, and Professional Training (MOL) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Employment, Youth, and Professional Training (MOL)	Receive, investigate, and address child labor complaints through its inspectors. (18) Refer cases of child trafficking to the Ministry of the Interior's Police Force for investigation and the Ministry of Social Protection and National Solidarity (MSPNS) for social services. (5)
Ministry of Social Protection and National Solidarity (MSPNS)	Provide social services and assistance to vulnerable children; assist in repatriation or resettlement processes for victims of child trafficking; operate shelters for victims of child trafficking. (4; 5)
Ministry of the Interior's Police Force	Enforce laws, investigate child labor violations, and refer cases to the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights for prosecution. (18; 5)
Ministry of Justice and Human Rights	Enforce child labor laws by prosecuting child labor cases. (18; 5) Assist in supporting victims of child trafficking while prosecutors and investigators prepare their cases. (34)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Gabon took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the MOL that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the ability to assess penalties.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Although the MOL is supposed to send newly hired labor inspectors to Cameroon for a one-time training session at the Regional African Center for Administration Work, this has not happened since 2014, and no new labor inspectors were recruited during the reporting period. (5) The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Gabon's workforce, which includes over 546,000 workers. (39) According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Gabon should employ roughly 36 inspectors. (39; 40; 41) Inspectors lack the resources, including transportation, fuel, and office supplies, necessary to conduct inspections. (18; 9; 5) Although inspectors have the authority to actively plan inspections, they did not do so in 2017. (5) Labor inspectors in Gabon are responsible for reconciling labor disputes, which may detract from their primary duty of inspection. (42)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Gabon took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including sufficient financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Training for Investigators
Initial Training for New Employees	Yes (36)	No (5)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A	N/A (5)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (35)	Yes (5)
Number of Investigations	Unknown* (35)	1 (5)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (35)	65 (34)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	8 (35)	0 (34)
Number of Convictions	0 (35)	0 (5)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (35)	Yes (5)

* The government does not publish this information.

During the reporting period, 26 police investigators received training on identifying cases of human trafficking. (5) However, like labor inspectors, police investigators lack resources such as transportation, fuel, and office supplies, and coordination among enforcement agencies is weak. (14; 5)

Although 65 child trafficking victims were identified during the reporting period, these cases did not result in prosecution. The government sought financial restitution and support from the perpetrator or foreign embassy of the victim's country of origin. (34) In general, the prosecution of child trafficking cases in Gabon can be difficult due to infrequent convening of the Criminal Court, a failure to prioritize cases involving children, and a backlog of cases. (15; 14; 4; 43) For example, 11 prosecutions from 2015 are still pending. (36; 14)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of adequate funding.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
Inter-ministerial Committee for the Fight Against Child Trafficking (CNSLTE)	Coordinate national efforts against child trafficking and other worst forms of child labor. Led by the MOL, includes representatives from four other ministries and civil society. (5) Remove children from exploitative labor situations, provide social services, and repatriate victims when appropriate. (13; 28; 43; 4) Disseminate the National Manual of Procedures for the Care of Child Victims of Trafficking, which establishes a series of procedures to return victims of child trafficking to their country of origin or facilitate their integration into Gabon. (44; 34) In 2017, drafted a 2017–2018 Plan of Action and in partnership with UNICEF, conducted training on trafficking in persons for 60 labor inspectors and judicial police. (34; 5)

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
National Observatory for Children's Rights	Coordinate the implementation of the Convention on the Rights of the Child, including promoting children's right to education and protection against all forms of exploitation and abuse. (13) Establish and oversee committees to protect children's rights in all provinces. (33) This committee was not active in 2017. (17)
Local Vigilance Committees	Administered by the CNSLTE, committees in provincial capitals identify potential cases of child trafficking, intercept victims, and assist children at risk of child trafficking. (13; 45; 4; 17)

In 2017, budget constraints, civil strikes, and a lack of communication among ministries limited the ability of the Inter-ministerial Committee for the Fight Against Child Trafficking (CNSLTE) to effectively coordinate government actions. In addition, research indicates that members of the CNSLTE occasionally use personal funds to assist victims due to a lack of resources. (4; 34)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementing a policy on relevant forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
CNSLTE's 2016–2021 Plan of Action	Aims to address the worst forms of child labor, with a focus on increasing prosecution of offenders and shortening the length of time victims spend at shelters. (5; 17) In 2017, provided training to labor inspectors. (5)
Economic Recovery Plan (2017–2019)†	Aims to balance public finances, diversify the economy, and reduce poverty. Includes the goal of improving the quality of public education, addressing the teacher deficit, and accelerating the construction of classrooms. (46)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

In 2017, research found no evidence of an active policy to address child labor. In addition, the government has not adopted CNSLTE's 2016–2021 Plan of Action. Although these Plans of Action aim to increase prosecution, the number of prosecutions fell from eight in 2016 to zero in 2017, and the CNSLTE was unable to address its other goal of shortening the duration of time victims spend in shelters. (4) Although the Government of Gabon drafted separate bilateral agreements with Benin, Cameroon, Guinea, Mali, Nigeria, and Togo to combat child trafficking, none were finalized by the end of 2017. (8; 13; 19; 11; 43) In addition, the government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the UNDAF (2018–2022), National Youth Policy of Gabon, and the Education Policy (2010–2020). (47; 48; 11)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Shelters for Children in Need†	Shelters supported by the government and civil society organizations that provide social services to victims of child labor and child trafficking, and other vulnerable children. (16; 43; 38; 11; 4) Victims receive medical care, literacy training, and reintegration support. In 2017, provided services to 65 children and repatriated 42 victims. (5)

† Program is funded by the Government of Gabon.

Although Gabon has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem. (5) Research also indicates that shelter space is insufficient to accommodate all victims, and the government decreased funding for shelters and NGOs that provide social services to human trafficking victims and other vulnerable children. (11; 15; 5; 17)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Gabon (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that minimum age protections are extended to children working outside of formal employment relationships.	2017
	Establish criminal prohibitions for child trafficking for the purpose of sexual exploitation.	2015 – 2017
	Establish criminal prohibitions for producing child pornography and procuring or offering children in pornographic performances.	2015 – 2017
	Establish criminal prohibitions for using children in illicit activities, including both producing and trafficking of drugs.	2009 – 2017
	Ensure that the legal framework for light work establishes a minimum age no younger than 13, determines activities that are considered light work, and specifies the conditions under which light work may be undertaken.	2013 – 2017
	Establish criminal prohibitions for the recruitment of children under age 18 for use in armed conflict by State or non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2017
Enforcement	Ensure that the number of labor inspectors is in accordance with the ILO's technical advice, and that inspectors and investigators receive adequate training, funding, and resources to carry out inspections and investigations.	2009 – 2017
	Strengthen the Labor Inspectorate by authorizing inspectors to assess penalties, and conduct routine and unannounced inspections.	2014 – 2017
	Publish information on the funding level for the Labor Inspectorate and information on the enforcement of child labor laws, including the number and type of inspections conducted.	2009 – 2017
	Ensure that labor inspectors are not tasked with conciliation or arbitration duties, and that they can carry out their primary duties of inspection and monitoring throughout the country.	2009 – 2017
	Ensure that prosecutions related to criminal violations of child labor laws are carried out and perpetrators are punished in accordance with the law.	2016 – 2017
Coordination	Ensure that the CNSLTE has sufficient funds to carry out its mandate, including improving communication and coordination among ministries.	2013 – 2017
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant forms of child labor, such as domestic work and work in transportation, and ensure that existing policies have sufficient resources to be implemented.	2015 – 2017
	Sign agreements with origin countries to combat child trafficking.	2014 – 2017
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into existing policies.	2014 – 2017
Social Programs	Conduct a national child labor survey or similar research to determine the specific activities carried out by working children to inform policies and programs.	2014 – 2017
	Ensure that children have access to education by eliminating school fees, increasing the number of teachers and schools in rural areas, and ensuring schools are free from sexual abuse. Make additional efforts to provide all children with birth registration.	2010 – 2017
	Expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem and ensure that the government continues to provide adequate support.	2010 – 2017

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2017, The Gambia made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the year, the government signed the International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance and the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families. The Gambia also created the National Coordination Committee on Child Labor to conduct child labor investigations and streamline the process to prosecute child labor perpetrators. Furthermore, the government increased the number of Community Child Protection Committees from 31 to 70 and initiated 15 child protection centers to monitor, identify, and report potential cases of the worst forms of child labor. However, children in The Gambia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and forced begging. Gaps in the law remain, including a need to increase the compulsory education age to the minimum age for work. In addition, labor law and criminal law enforcement efforts are limited.

Gaps in the law remain, including a need to increase the compulsory education age to the minimum age for work. In addition, labor law and criminal law enforcement efforts are limited.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in The Gambia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and forced begging. (1; 2; 3; 4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in The Gambia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	20.1 (105,013)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	63.6
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	10.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		70.2

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (5)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Integrated Household Survey on Consumption, Expenditure and Poverty Level Assessment Survey, 2015–2016. (6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including protecting crops by chasing animals (1; 7)
Industry	Working in carpentry, masonry, sewing, plumbing, and in metal welding workshops† (1; 8; 4) Mining† and quarrying† (4)
Services	Domestic work (1; 2; 4) Street work, including begging and vending (1; 2; 9; 10; 4) Scavenging for scrap metal and jewelry at dump sites (1; 11) Working as taxi and bus attendants (1) Working as auto mechanics† (1; 8; 12; 4)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1; 2; 10; 13; 3; 4) Forced begging by Koranic teachers (1; 2; 7; 4) Forced labor in domestic work and street vending, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2; 3)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

In The Gambia, children are internally trafficked and subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, forced labor, and domestic work. Girls and boys from West African countries, including Benin, Ghana, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Liberia, Nigeria, Senegal, and Sierra Leone, are trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation in The Gambia. (3; 4) Tourists from Britain, Germany, Scandinavia, the Netherlands, and Canada also subject children to commercial sexual exploitation in brothels and motels in tourist areas. (14; 3) In The Gambia, it is a common practice to send boys to receive education from Koranic teachers, or marabouts, who sometimes force Koranic students, or almudus, to beg in the streets for money and food and conduct street vending. (14) However, a source indicated that reported incidents had reduced during the year. (15)

Article 30 of the Constitution mandates free compulsory education; however, families are sometimes required to buy books and uniforms, as well as contribute to the school fund and examination fees, which families often cannot afford. Absence from school due to unpaid school fees increases children's vulnerability to child labor. (16; 15) Also, inadequate teaching facilities, low numbers of teachers in rural areas, and limited access to clean water in schools create barriers for children to access education. (4)

The government has not conducted research to determine the activities carried out by children, including in agriculture, domestic work, and forced begging to inform policies and social programs.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The Gambia has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in The Gambia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for compulsory education.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 43 of the Children's Act (17)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 44 of the Children's Act; Article 46 of the Labor Act (17; 18)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 44–45 of the Children's Act (17)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 20 of the Constitution; Article 41 of the Children's Act (16; 17)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 30 and 39 of the Children's Act; Articles 28 and 56 of the Trafficking in Persons Act; Article 13 of the Tourism Offences Act (17; 19; 20)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 26–27, 29–32, and 34 of the Children's Act; Articles 7–9 of the Tourism Offences Act (17; 20)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 31 and 36–37 of the Children's Act (17)

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Military Recruitment
State Compulsory	N/A*		Article 59 of the Children's Act (17)
State Voluntary	Yes	18	Article 59 of the Children's Act (17)
Non-state	Yes	18	Article 31(c) of the Children's Act (17)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16‡	Article 30 of the Constitution; Article 18 of the Children's Act (16; 17)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 18 of the Children's Act (17)

* No conscription (21)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (16; 17; 22; 23; 24)

In 2017, the government signed the International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance. The government also signed the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families, which states in part that children of migrant families cannot be denied access to education in the host country. (4)

In The Gambia, children may commence an apprenticeship in the informal sector at the age of 12 which makes them vulnerable to engage in child labor and not complete basic education. (17)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Trade, Industry, Regional Integration and Employment that hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Social Welfare (DSW)	Combat forced child labor and coordinate the handling of trafficking victims, including working closely with social welfare officers in police units. (25) Operate a 24-hour hotline to address human trafficking and maintain a database of individuals suspected of pedophilia or child trafficking, in collaboration with The Gambia Tourism Board. (3) Maintain an electronic database that contains information on cases requiring child protection, including those involving labor and human trafficking violations. (3) Housed under the Ministry of Health and Social Welfare. (4)
Department of Labor	Conduct labor inspections and enforce labor laws pertaining to hazardous child labor. (4; 26) Housed under the Ministry of Trade, Industry, Regional Integration and Employment. (26)
Child Protection Alliance (CPA)	Promote children's rights and child protection services. Raise awareness about child exploitation. (27; 28; 29) Members include government departments, civil society organizations, UN agencies, NGOs, child and youth organizations, and bilateral institutions. (28) Train journalists about child sex tourism and government officials on the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child. (30; 31)
National Agency Against Trafficking in Persons (NAATIP)	Investigate suspected cases of human trafficking. Members includes investigators, police, members of the National Intelligence Agency, and five prosecutors. (32) Gather evidence for the NAATIP director, who can recommend that the NAATIP prosecutor file charges for human trafficking violations. (32) In 2017, trained two new investigators and met quarterly. (4)
Children's Court	Under the jurisdiction of the National Assembly's Committee on Health, Women, Children, Disaster and Refugees, and Humanitarian Relief, adjudicate cases involving children and determine guardianship of child abuse victims, including child laborers, referred to the court by the DSW. (33) Currently, there are three courts for seven regions in the country. (4)
The Gambia Tourism Board	Combat commercial sexual exploitation of children in tourist areas. (14) Educate the public about child sex tourism and the consequences for violating the Code of Conduct for the Protection of Children and the Tourism Act. (34)
Tourism Security Unit	Prevent unaccompanied children from entering tourist areas and patrol tourist areas for child labor and criminal violations, such as commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking. Has a dedicated child protection division. (14; 25)
Gambia Police Force Child Welfare Unit	Oversee all situations involving children's welfare. (29) Collaborate with the CPA, the DSW, NGOs, and other agencies to assess and identify children engaged in the worst forms of child labor. (4)

Organization/Agency	Role
Community Child Protection Committees	Raise awareness and report cases of labor issues, including child labor, to the authorities.
Village Development Committees	Serve as volunteer arbitrators and mediators for community disputes involving children and other matters. (4)
Neighborhood Watch Groups	Monitor neighborhoods for child exploitation. Maintain five existing groups established by the DSW in urban areas near tourist resorts. (25) Supported by the DSW, which pays allowances to Neighborhood Watch Group members and pays the cell phone credit to report child labor violations. (25)

In 2017, the Department of Social Welfare (DSW) had limited human and financial resources to combat child labor. During the reporting period, the agency reported developing a database to record complaints, investigations, prosecutions, and convictions of child labor. (4) The National Agency Against Trafficking in Persons (NAATIP) reported a lack of financial resources to conduct investigations. It received a budget of $35,000, which was sufficient to cover only salaries and insufficient for transportation and fuel expenses. Due to insufficient funding, NAATIP did not investigate new cases in 2017. (4)

In 2017, the DSW created an additional Neighborhood Watch Group, and Community Child Protection Committees increased from 31 to 70. (1; 12; 11; 4) The government also initiated 15 child protection centers to monitor, identify, and report potential cases of the worst forms of child labor. In 2017, many of the 1,500 Village Development Committees were not trained on child protection and the worst forms of child labor. (4)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in The Gambia took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Trade, Industry, Regional Integration and Employment that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including investigation planning.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2016	2017

* The government does not publish this information.

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of The Gambia's workforce, which includes more than 700,000 workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less-developed economies, The Gambia would employ about 19 inspectors. (36; 37) Although enforcement data were unavailable, the Department of Labor and an NGO reported that the agency had sufficient resources to conduct inspections. (4) However, inspectors are unauthorized to inspect private farms in which children may be working in violation of the minimum age for work. (4)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in The Gambia took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including investigation planning.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Training for Investigators
Initial Training for New Employees	Yes (35)	Yes (4)

Number of Convictions	Unknown* (35)	0 (38)

* The government does not publish this information.

In 2017, the DSW reported that the Gambia Police Force Child Welfare Unit identified 88 children subjected to human trafficking and reunited them with their families. Children identified were from Senegal, Guinea Bissau, and Sierra Leone. (4)

Although Articles 39 and 40 of the Children’s Act prohibit human trafficking and slave dealing of children and carry a penalty of life imprisonment, a source indicates that, in practice, perpetrators are convicted to only 2 years or a fine, or both. These penalties, in practice, are not harsh enough to deter violations. (17; 4)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the capacity for coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the efficacy of coordination efforts.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
National Coordination Committee on Child Labor	Coordinate child labor enforcement processes, including prosecutions of the worst forms of child labor. Led by the DSW, comprises representatives from UNICEF, Department of Labor, NAATIP, Action Aid, Ministry of Basic and Secondary Education, Gambia Teachers Union, Young People in the Media, and the Inspector General of Police. (4) Established in 2017 and held meetings. (4)
DSW	Coordinate government efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor. (14) Leads the National Coordination Committee on Child Labor and operates five neighborhood watch groups to identify and report the worst forms of child labor. (3; 4)
NAATIP	Coordinate, administer, and monitor the implementation of the Trafficking in Persons Act and share information among law enforcement agencies. Created under the Ministry of Justice. Convenes and leads monthly meetings with the National Trafficking in Persons Task Force; a task force focusing on multiple sectors in which human trafficking occurs across the country. (14; 25) The task force includes NAATIP, Ministry of Justice, Department of Immigration, Department of Social Welfare, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Women’s Bureau, Gambia Radio and Television Services, Center for Street Children, and Gambia Police Force. (38)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the lack of a national child labor policy.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor‡

Policy	Description
Child Protection Strategy (2016–2020)	Outlines strategies to improve child protection, including addressing the worst forms of child labor, by increasing awareness and strengthening coordination among government agencies. (39) Research was unable to determine whether action was taken to implement this policy in 2017. (38)
Code of Conduct of The Gambia Tourism Authority for the Protection of Children	Raises awareness of commercial sexual exploitation of children in the tourism industry and among tourists. (14; 40) Requires new hotel staff to be trained on the Code at the beginning of the annual peak tourism season. (14) Research was unable to determine whether action was taken to implement this policy in 2017.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (41)

Research was unable to determine whether the government renewed the National Trafficking In Persons Action Plan. (38) Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to be integrated into the Education Sector Policy. Although the government has adopted the Trafficking MOU with Senegal, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor. (1)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor‡

Program	Description
Combating Child Sex Tourism Project	CPA project, funded by ECPAT Netherlands, that raises awareness about commercial sexual exploitation of children, the Tourism Offences Act, and the Code of Conduct among Tourism Security Unit personnel, hoteliers, travel agencies, and other tourism stakeholders. (1; 42) Program reported not meeting its target because there were incidences of child sex tourism in 2017. (4)
Results for Education Achievement and Development (READ)	$8.5 million World Bank-funded project that focuses on increasing access to basic education and improving the quality of education in lower basic schools. (43) Research was unable to determine actions taken in 2017.
Street Children Center†	DSW-run, with support from international organizations, foreign NGOs, and local businesses, drop-in center in Talinding Kunjang that provides medical care, food, and counseling to street children, including human trafficking victims and almus. (14; 25) Works to prevent children from returning to street begging. (44) Received continued financial support from the government during the year. (4) Research was unable to determine the number of children who benefited from the program in 2017.
Conditional Cash Transfers to the Majaalis†	Ministry of Education program that gives marabouts food rations and approximately $2.56 monthly for each student if the marabouts do not force students to beg. (25) Provides teachers for English, mathematics, and science subjects to Koranic schools. More than 1,000 children have benefited from the program. (1; 14; 45) Received continued financial support from the government in 2017. Research unable to determine program achievements in 2017. (4)

† Program is funded by the Government of The Gambia.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (46; 47; 48)

In 2017, Child Fund Gambia, in partnership with TOMS, sponsored 189,600 shoes to the Ministry of Education to assist with improving access to education for children throughout all regions in the country. (49)

Although The Gambia has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, as programs do not reach all children working in agriculture and domestic work or those vulnerable to human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, forced begging, and street work.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in The Gambia (Table 11).

Gambia, The

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Harmonize provisions of the Children's Act and the Labor Code that regulate apprenticeships and ensure that children are at least 14 years of age in workplace-based apprenticeships.	2017
Enforcement	Ensure that the Village Development Committees receive training on the worst forms of child labor.	2017
	Employ enough labor inspectors to provide sufficient coverage for the workforce.	2016 – 2017
	Strengthen the Labor Inspectorate by initiating targeted inspections based on analysis of data related to risk-prone sectors and patterns of serious incidents.	2016 – 2017
	Publish information about the Labor Inspectorate's funding, training related to child labor, inspections conducted, violations found, and penalties imposed and collected.	2012 – 2017
	Ensure the DSW has sufficient human and financial resources to combat child labor.	2017
	Ensure the Labor Inspectorate has authority to conduct inspections at private farms.	2017
	Publish information about criminal law enforcement efforts, including training on new laws, investigations conducted, violations found, prosecutions initiated, and convictions achieved concerning the worst forms of child labor.	2015 – 2017
Coordination	Ensure penalties for child trafficking are harsh enough to deter violations.	2016 – 2017
	Ensure NAATIP has sufficient funding to conduct investigations on trafficking in persons.	2012 – 2017
Government Policies	Ensure that child labor elimination and prevention strategies are integrated into the Education Policy.	2015 – 2017
	Publish information about the implementation of policies related to the elimination of child labor, such as the Code of Conduct of The Gambia Tourism Authority for the Protection of Children.	2017
	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor, such as commercial sexual exploitation.	2015 – 2017
Social Programs	Publish information about the implementation of social programs, such as the Street Children Center.	2017
	Expand existing programs to address child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation of children, and children working in the street.	2010 – 2017
	Enhance opportunities for children to access education by providing adequate teaching facilities and assigning teachers to rural areas.	2017
	Ensure that children can complete primary school by subsidizing or defraying the cost of books, uniforms, and other fees.	2010 – 2017
	Expand existing programs to address children working in agriculture and domestic work.	2015 – 2017
	Conduct research to determine the activities carried out by children, including in agriculture, domestic work, and forced begging, to inform policies and social programs.	2017

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2017, Georgia made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Despite new initiatives to address child labor, Georgia is receiving this assessment of minimal advancement because it continued to implement a law that delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor. The government failed to remedy the abolition of its Labor Inspectorate, caused by its adoption of the 2006 Labor Code. Since that time, the government has lacked a functioning labor inspection mechanism to monitor, inspect, and enforce child labor laws, including through unannounced inspections. Otherwise, the government made efforts by training labor monitors and improving the ability of vulnerable children to obtain identity documents. Children in Georgia perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Children also engage in the worst forms of child labor, including forced begging. The government lacks a coordinating mechanism to address child labor. In addition, the compulsory education age leaves 15-year-old children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, as they are not required to be in school, but are not legally permitted to work full-time.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Georgia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging. (1; 2; 3) Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (4; 5; 6; 7; 1; 2; 3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Georgia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	2.9 (13,547)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	96.9
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	3.7
Primary Completion Rate (%)		119.1

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (8)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from National Child Labor Survey, 2015. (9)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, activities unknown (10; 11)
Services	Street work, including begging and collecting scrap metal (10; 12; 11)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1; 2; 3; 13; 11) Forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1; 2; 3; 13)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Although estimates regarding the ethnicity and origin of children working on the street vary widely, sources report that children from Roma and Azerbaijani Kurd ethnic minorities make up a significant proportion of these children. (14) NGOs note that a lack of current data on the number and circumstances of children working on the street hinders effective targeting of social services. (14) In 2017, the government, in cooperation with UNICEF, began a program to conduct qualitative research on street children. (11)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Georgia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Georgia's legal framework to adequately protect children from child labor, including with regard to the identification of hazardous occupations or activities prohibited for children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Article 4 of the Labor Code of Georgia (15)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 4 of the Labor Code of Georgia (15; 16)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No		Article 4(4) of the Labor Code of Georgia (15)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 30 of the Constitution of Georgia; Articles 143-i, 143-ii, and 143-iii of the Criminal Code of Georgia; Law of Georgia on Combating Human Trafficking (17; 18; 19)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 143, 143-1, 143-2, 143-3, and 172 of the Criminal Code of Georgia; Law of Georgia on Combating Human Trafficking (18; 19)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 171, 253, 255, 255-1, and 255-2 of the Criminal Code of Georgia (19)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 171 of the Criminal Code of Georgia (19)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment
State Compulsory	Yes	18	Articles 9 and 21 of the Law of Georgia on Military Duty and Military Service (20)
State Voluntary	Yes	18	Article 10 of the Law of Georgia on Military Duty and Military Service (20)
Non-state	No		Article 410 of the Criminal Code of Georgia (19)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15‡	Articles 2 and 9 of the Law of Georgia on General Education (21; 22)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 22 of the Law of Georgia on General Education (21)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (21; 22)

The labor law governing child labor is not in compliance with international standards because it does not apply to informal work. (23; 24) The compulsory education age leaves 15-year-old children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor because they are not required to be in school but are not legally permitted to work full-time. In addition, although Article 4 of the Labor Code establishes age 14 as the minimum age for participation in work that is not harmful to the moral, physical, and mental development of the child, the law does not stipulate specific activities in which children under the legal working age are allowed to engage. (15; 24) The law does not sufficiently criminalize non-state armed groups from recruiting children under 18 because it applies only to mercenaries. (19)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government does not adequately enforce its child labor laws, since it lacks a functioning Labor Inspectorate for the enforcement of labor laws and regulations. (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Health, and Social Affairs (MoLHSA)	Oversee child welfare issues and pursue enforcement of labor laws. (25) Receive complaints through the Child Protection and Social Programs sub-department, and refer complaints of child labor violations to law enforcement agencies for investigation. (26)
Department of Labor Inspection within MoLHSA	Pilot program designed to enforce occupational safety and health laws, as well as prohibitions of forced labor and human trafficking. (10)
Department of Labor and Employment Policy within MoLHSA	Address labor and employment issues, and revise existing laws and policies to be in accordance with international standards. (22)
Social Service Agency within MoLHSA	Administer social benefits such as targeted social assistance, health care, and vouchers for day care. Employ social service agents who identify qualifying families for services and social workers who oversee child protection and family welfare cases. (10)
Ministry of Internal Affairs (MoIA)	Enforce criminal laws related to child labor and child trafficking, and investigate NGO and civilian reports of potential child labor violations. (5; 6; 25)
Central Criminal Police Department within the MoIA	Lead criminal investigations of trafficking in persons, including the trafficking of children, through the Division for Combating Illicit Trafficking of Drugs, Human Trafficking, and Irregular Migration. (26) Identify human traffickers and systematize data on traffickers across various agencies through the Information-Analytical Department. (27) Investigate possible human trafficking schemes by deploying teams of two law enforcement officials in Mobile Units to investigate companies offering suspicious work opportunities abroad. (26; 28)
District Police Units within the MoIA	Collect information on minors within each jurisdiction and visit minors' families to inform them of their rights. Conduct classes for school teachers on children's rights. (29)
Prosecutor General's Office within the Ministry of Justice	Investigate large-scale cases of child trafficking. (6)
Joint Child Referral Mechanism	Ensure interagency coordination of the enforcement of child labor laws and enumerate the procedures for referring children subject to any form of violence, including labor exploitation, to child protective services. (5; 26) Once any ministry identifies a case of child exploitation, the MoIA registers the case. MoLHSA then assesses the child's condition, provides shelter and rehabilitation services to the child as needed, and monitors the child's case. (6)

Following the abolition of the Labor Inspectorate in 2006, the Prime Minister's Decree No. 81, signed in March 2015, established a Department of Labor Inspection within the Ministry of Labor, Health, and Social Affairs. (30; 31; 32) However, existing legislation prevents the Department of Labor Inspection from functioning as a true Labor Inspectorate. In particular, the Law on Oversight of Entrepreneurial Activity requires government agencies, including the Department of Labor Inspection, to acquire a court order in order to inspect any private business. (33)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, the lack of a functioning Labor Inspectorate in Georgia impeded the enforcement of child labor laws. However, the Department of Labor Inspection, a pilot initiative established in 2015 to monitor compliance with occupational safety and health laws and laws prohibiting forced labor and human trafficking, continued to function during the reporting period. (10; 34; 30) The pilot program is an initial step toward establishing a Labor Inspectorate, intended to build the capacity and credibility of the Inspectorate when the organization is fully established. (35) Currently, except in cases of suspected human trafficking or forced labor violations, the Department of Labor Inspection is only able to conduct monitoring of the 150 companies that volunteered to participate in the pilot program and must give companies 5 days' notice prior to a monitoring visit. (30; 36; 37) In addition, labor monitors are unable to impose sanctions or assess penalties for violations found. (11) A source reported that because the State Monitoring Program does not have sanctioning authority and its findings are confidential, the monitoring has little impact on workers. (38)

In 2017, the government created a special working group within the Chief Prosecutor's Office to identify and correct gaps in the government's capacity to enforce laws against forced labor and other forms of labor exploitation. (11)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

All 25 labor monitors received training from the ILO on planning and implementing labor inspections. (39; 40) During the reporting period, the Department of Labor Inspection received a budget of $229,000 and employed 25 labor monitors. Monitors conducted 392 monitoring site visits, none of which were unannounced, and found no violations of child labor laws. (11)

In 2017, the Department of Labor Inspection conducted awareness raising activities at schools in regions where children are particularly vulnerable to child labor in seasonal agricultural work. (11) In addition, the Social Service Agency under MoLHSA provided services to 827 children found living or working on the street and referred them to MoLHSA-managed crisis centers. (11)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Georgia took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including investigation of forced begging.

Table 6. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Training for Investigators
Initial Training for New Employees	Yes (34)	Yes (41)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (34)	Yes (41)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (34)	Yes (41)
Number of Investigations	2 (34)	1 (41)
Number of Violations Found	0 (34)	2 (41)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	0 (34)	2 (41)
Number of Convictions	5 (34)	0 (41)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (34)	Yes (41)

In 2017, the IOM provided training on commercial sexual exploitation to prosecutors, investigators, and judges. (11)

In 2017, the Ministry of Justice issued 14 temporary identification documents, one identity card, and five passports to children who were living on the street or victims of violence. The ability to obtain identity documents is key to reducing vulnerable children's risk of exploitation in the worst forms of child labor. (11)

Research found that the police have, in some instances, refused to investigate cases of forced begging raised by NGOs, claiming that street begging could not be considered a violation of children's rights under the current legislation. (14)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 7).

Table 7. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
Interagency Commission for the Implementation of the Convention on the Rights of the Child	Monitor implementation of the Child Rights chapter of the National Human Rights Action Plan, which is based on provisions of the UN CRC. (34)
Interagency Anti-Trafficking Coordination Council for the Implementation of Measures Against Human Trafficking	Coordinate government efforts against human trafficking, including efforts to protect and rehabilitate victims. (6) Refer child victims to shelters to receive social services. (5) Chaired by the Minister of Justice and comprises representatives from state agencies and non-state entities. (26)

In December 2017, the Interagency Anti-Trafficking Coordination Council finalized revised guidelines for the investigation and prosecution of trafficking cases and the treatment of victims of human trafficking. These updated guidelines require that border police and customs officials receive training on trafficking in persons, including on the standards for interviewing potential child trafficking victims. (41)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 8). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including scope of existing policies.

Table 8. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Human Rights Strategy (2014–2020)	Identifies human rights priorities, including the protection of child rights. Led to the adoption of a National Action Plan on the Protection of Human Rights 2014–2016, which includes objectives to strengthen the provision of services to vulnerable children, such as those living and working on the streets, and requires implementation of ILO C. 138 and C. 182. (42; 43)
National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons (2017–2018)†	Supports development of policy and implementation of activities to address human trafficking. Includes plans to conduct research on commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor with a particular focus on the exploitation of minors. (11)
EU Association Agreement and Association Agenda (2014–2016)	Outlines a framework for cooperation between Georgia and the EU. Requires Georgia to institute a number of initiatives to protect children’s rights, including addressing child poverty, providing adequate resources to the Public Defender to undertake work for children, and focusing on measures to protect children against all forms of violence. (6; 44)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

In 2017, the government drafted its National Human Rights Action Plan for 2018–2020. Anticipated to be adopted in 2018, the plan contains a chapter on vulnerable children. (11)

While the government has established policies to address child begging, child trafficking, and child labor in street work, research found no evidence of a policy to address child labor in agriculture.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, which cover the main sectors where child labor has been identified in the country (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Improved Compliance With Labor Laws in the Democratic Republic of Georgia	$2 million USDOL-funded grant implemented by the ILO to work with the government to improve its ability to enforce labor laws, including child labor laws, and adhere to international labor standards. (45) Key objectives of the project include supporting the establishment of adequate labor law enforcement mechanisms in Georgia through labor inspection and promoting effective tripartite cooperation. (46)
Research on Street Children*†	MoHLSA, MoIA, and UNICEF-administered program to conduct qualitative research on street children. Research will be completed in 2018. (11) In addition, the Ministry of Justice issued a $22,000 grant to two NGOs to improve the process for identification of street children and support reintegration of these children. One NGO identified 105 street children. (11)
Targeted Social Assistance Program and Child Benefit Program†	Social Service Agency-administered social assistance programs designed to eliminate poverty, especially child poverty. The Child Benefit Program is intended to halve extreme poverty among children, and covers about a quarter of the most vulnerable families with children. (47)
Social Rehabilitation and Childcare Program†	Government program with a 2017 budget of $9.2 million that provides assistance to children at high risk of abandonment and children with disabilities; also places abandoned children in appropriate care. (6; 10; 34; 11)
State Fund for Protection and Assistance of (Statutory) Victims of Human Trafficking†	MoLHSA program to protect, assist, and rehabilitate trafficking and domestic violence victims, including minors. (6; 48) Implements the government’s Rehabilitation and Reintegration Strategy, which includes operating trafficking shelters in Batumi and Tbilisi. (5; 49) In 2017, received a total budget of $2.4 million. (11)
Education-Focused Programs for Vulnerable Children	The Ministry of Education and Science funds multiple programs to promote the inclusion of vulnerable children in education. Initiatives include a program designed to increase the school participation of street children, victims of forced begging, and children who are seasonal agricultural workers; a program to increase the number of Georgian language teachers in communities with large ethnic minority populations; and a program to distribute free textbooks to public school students. (10; 26; 37; 50)
UNICEF Country Program (2016–2020)	Joint effort by UNICEF and the Government of Georgia to improve social inclusion of the most vulnerable children. (51)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Georgia.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (11)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Georgia (Table 10).

Table 10. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the minimum age for work applies to all children, including those in informal work.	2017
	Determine and codify the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, in consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2016 – 2017
	Increase the age up to which education is compulsory to 16, the minimum age for work.	2009 – 2017
	Ensure that the law's light work provisions are specific enough to prevent children from involvement in child labor.	2016 – 2017
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2017
Enforcement	Establish a functioning Labor Inspectorate to enforce child labor legislation. Ensure that the Labor Inspectorate has funding to employ a sufficient number of inspectors; that inspectors are capable of performing quality targeted, complaint-based, and unannounced inspections; that inspectors have the ability to assess penalties; and that data on the number and type of inspections, violations, and penalties are made publicly available.	2009 – 2017
	Ensure that legislation permits the Department of Labor Inspection to enter the premises of all businesses to conduct unannounced inspections, and empowers monitors to impose sanctions for the violation of labor laws.	2015 – 2017
	Ensure that labor monitors inspect for compliance with the full range of labor laws, including laws against child labor.	2015 – 2017
	Ensure that cases of forced begging are recognized as criminal acts and receive appropriate and thorough investigation by the Police.	2014 – 2017
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant forms of child labor, including child labor in agriculture.	2017

In 2017, Ghana made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government secured at least five convictions for offenses related to the worst forms of child labor and launched the National Plan of Action for the Elimination of Human Trafficking in Ghana. The government began extending the Ghana School Feeding Program to include schools in refugee camps and ratified the Minamata Convention on Mercury, which obligates signatory countries to incorporate strategies to prevent the exposure of children to mercury in gold mining sites. However, children in Ghana continue to engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in fishing and cocoa harvesting as a result of human trafficking. Although the government made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period, prohibitions related to the commercial sexual exploitation of children and the use of children for illicit activities do not meet international standards. The government also has not acceded to the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography, and resource constraints severely limited government social protection agencies' abilities to fully implement social programs during the reporting period.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Ghana engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced labor in fishing and cocoa harvesting as a result of human trafficking. (1; 2; 3; 4; 5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Ghana.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	24.7 (1,721,914)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	91.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	25.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		95.2

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2017, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2018. (6)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Living Standard Survey, Round 6, 2012–2013. (7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Producing cocoa, including land clearing, using machetes and cutlasses for weeding, collecting cocoa pods with a harvesting hook, breaking cocoa pods, working in the vicinity of pesticide spraying, and carrying heavy loads† of water (2; 5; 8; 9; 10; 11; 12; 13)
	Production of palm oil and cotton, including weeding, harvesting, and acting as scarecrows (10; 13)
	Herding livestock, hunting, and work in slaughterhouses (14; 15; 13)
	Fishing, including for tilapia; preparing bait, nets, and fishing gear; launching, paddling, and draining canoes; diving for fish; casting and pulling fishing nets and untangling them underwater; sorting, picking, cleaning, smoking, transporting, and selling fish; cleaning and repairing nets; and building and repairing boats (1; 2; 3; 9; 16; 17; 18; 11; 13)
Industry	Quarrying† and small-scale mining,† sometimes for gold, including using mercury, digging in deep pits, crushing rocks by hand, carrying heavy loads,† and machine operation† (2; 4; 10; 16; 19; 20; 21; 22; 23; 11)
	Manufacturing and working in sawmills (4; 10)

Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (15; 16; 32; 33; 12; 34)
	Forced labor in begging; agriculture, including herding; fishing, including for tilapia; artisanal gold mining; domestic work; and street work, including vending and carrying heavy loads, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1; 3; 15; 17; 18; 35; 36; 37; 13)
	Forced ritual servitude for girls known as trokosi , including in domestic work for priests (3; 16; 25; 32; 38; 34; 11; 37; 13)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

The majority of children subject to human trafficking are transported within Ghana for labor in cocoa, domestic work, commercial sexual exploitation, and fishing. Children as young as age 4 are subjected to forced labor in fishing in the areas around Lake Volta, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (15; 18; 25; 32; 36; 37) Children also use sharp tools and are exposed to agro-chemicals while working in the cocoa sector. (5; 10)

According to the Constitution and the Education Act, primary education in Ghana is free and compulsory from kindergarten through junior high school. (39; 40) However, in practice, children must pay for school uniforms, fees, and materials, which may be prohibitive for many families. (1; 3; 8; 22; 26; 41; 42; 43; 34; 11) In addition, factors such as a shortage of classrooms, long distance to schools, absence of sanitation facilities, overcrowding in urban areas, sexual harassment of girls in schools, physical violence, verbal abuse, and poor educational infrastructure, particularly in rural areas, severely limit access to education for many children. (1; 8; 22; 41; 42; 11; 34; 13; 13) In response, the government has made efforts to increase the accessibility of public education, including by building schools to reduce the distance students must travel, provide school uniforms, lift birth registration requirements for enrollment, and extend free education through high school in 2017. (44; 42)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Ghana has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

In 2017, Ghana also ratified the Minamata Convention on Mercury, which obligates signatory countries to incorporate strategies to prevent the exposure of children to mercury in gold mining sites. (45; 46) The Ministry of Employment and Labor Relations (MELR) also initiated the process to ratify the ILO’s Protocol of 2014 to the Forced Labour Convention. (47)

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Ghana's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including prohibiting the use of children in commercial sexual exploitation.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Section 89 of the Children's Act (48)

Free Public Education	Yes		Article 25.1.a of the Constitution; Articles 1.1, 1.2, and 2.2 of the Education Act (39; 40)

* No conscription (55)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (55)

Supplementary implementing regulations to the Labor Act, which were drafted in 2016 and include protections for domestic workers, were not issued in the reporting period. (56) Laws regarding the types of hazardous work prohibited for children are not comprehensive as they do not cover work in agriculture or lake fishing, two areas of work where there is evidence of children engaging in dangerous activities such as the use of sharp tools and working underwater. (57; 58; 12) Ghana has drafted two Hazardous Activities Frameworks which would consider such work hazardous, but neither has been adopted. (59; 56) In addition, Ghana's laws do not criminally prohibit the use of a child in pornographic performances. (60)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the MELR that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Employment and Labor Relations (MELR)	Enforce child labor laws. Through its District Assemblies, labor inspectors investigate child labor violations, educate employers on compliance with child labor laws, and conduct inspections. (1; 42; 44) In 2017, received a $113,225 earmark for 2018 to combat child labor. (47)

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of the Interior (MOI)	Through its Ghana Police Service (GPS), investigate, arrest, and prosecute cases related to the worst forms of child labor and operate a 24/7 hotline for reporting crimes. (61) Within the GPS, the Domestic Violence and Victim Support Unit and Anti-Human Trafficking Unit (AHTU) investigate cases and provide support to victims. (3; 35; 44; 13) Through its Ghana Immigration Service (GIS), combat human trafficking through Anti-Human Smuggling and Trafficking Units. (62; 61; 63) In 2017, GIS spent $21,570 to support adult victim services, GPS allocated $1,762 to the Osu Shelter to support victims of child trafficking, and the AHTU expanded from 8 to 10 officers. (61; 63)
Ministry of Justice's Office of the Attorney General	Combat child labor by prosecuting child labor and child trafficking crimes. (44) Within the Economic and Organized Crime Office, the Human Trafficking Unit shares responsibility with the AHTU for combating human trafficking, confiscating proceeds from human trafficking, and providing ongoing training for law enforcement on prevention measures. (64; 65) Although the Human Trafficking Unit was not active in 2017, the Economic and Organized Crime Office continued to collaborate on investigations with GPS on cases of human trafficking. (61)
Minerals Commission	Inspect licensed mining sites and raise awareness of laws that apply to the mining sector with criminal law enforcement agencies. (22)
Ministry of Gender, Children, and Social Protection (MOGSCSP)	Combat child labor and lead government efforts to combat human trafficking. (61) Through its Department of Social Welfare (DSW), operate shelters for vulnerable children, administer juvenile justice, and implement programs to combat child labor. (64; 66; 67; 13) Through its Human Trafficking Secretariat, oversee the creation, implementation, and review of human trafficking policies and ensure proper monitoring, evaluation, and data collection. (61) In December 2017, MOGSCSP established a new hotline to facilitate access to social services, including victims of human trafficking. The hotline received 30 calls between December 19 and 30 and referred one case of suspected human trafficking to the AHTU. (63)
Community Child Protection Committees (CCPCs)/District Child Protection Committees (DCPCs)	Receive complaints of child labor violations at the community and district levels, respectively, and report cases to the GPS, DSW, or traditional authorities, who work with the police to conduct investigations. (22; 68; 69) Participate in the Ghana Child Labor Monitoring System (GCLMS) to monitor, prevent, and withdraw children from the worst forms of child labor in more than 600 communities nationwide as part of the Child and Family Welfare Policy. (14; 31; 43) Many communities either had defunct CCPCs or lacked CCPCs, while some district's DCPCs were inactive. (70)

Although the Attorney General's Department is responsible for prosecuting child trafficking violations, in practice it is often left to the prosecutors of the Ghana Police Service (GPS), who often have minimal formal legal training and whose actions are limited by procedural rules not applicable to state attorneys. (61)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Ghana took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the MELR that hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the authority of labor inspectors to assess penalties.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

* The government does not publish this information.

† Data are from January 1, 2016, to September 30, 2016.

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Ghana's workforce, which includes almost 12 million workers. (71) According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Ghana should employ roughly 833 inspectors. (71; 72; 73) Inadequate resources, including funding, transportation, office space, and office supplies, hamper the labor inspectorate's capacity to enforce child labor laws, particularly in the informal sector in which child labor is most common. (22; 42; 44) In addition, the government did not provide data on the number of child labor violations identified as a result of calls made to the GPS's 24/7 hotline. Formal referral mechanisms continued to be hindered by lack of shelter space and transportation for victims. (44)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Ghana took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including financial resource allocation and training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Training for Investigators
Initial Training for New Employees	Yes (64)	Yes (37; 61)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A	N/A
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (68; 64)	Yes (74; 61)
Number of Investigations	Unknown	196 (63)
Number of Violations Found	84 (75)	217 (63)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	6 (68; 76)	14 (77; 78; 79)
Number of Convictions	1 (80)	5 (44; 77; 78)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (68)	Yes (44)

In 2017, two adults were convicted of child trafficking and sentenced to 5 years' imprisonment; another two adults were sentenced to 1 year's imprisonment for child trafficking, and a fifth adult was fined $122 for the suspected use of exploitative child labor in violation of the Immigration Act. (44; 77; 78) Members of parliament have attempted to discourage investigations or prosecutions and high staff turnover is a challenge, limiting the government's ability to investigate and prosecute these offenses. (81; 37; 44; 42; 61; 63)

Furthermore, criminal enforcement agencies continued to note that poor interagency coordination, and insufficient resources for transportation and victim support resulted in under-reporting of cases and hampered enforcement efforts. (35; 11; 37; 32; 61; 63) In addition, coordination among government officials on human trafficking issues was uneven in different parts of the country. The government relies heavily on NGOs to identify cases of child trafficking, and cooperation improved during the year. (81; 61; 70) The GPS hired 313 police recruits and trained an additional 54 cadet officers on human trafficking issues. (63)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including interagency coordination and cooperation with NGOs.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
National Steering Committee on Child Labor (NSCCL)	Coordinate government efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor and oversee implementation of the National Plan of Action Phase II on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (NPA2), which includes implementation of the GCLMS—a monitoring, data collection, and referral mechanism. (82; 44; 83; 61) Led by the MELR's Child Labor Unit (CLU) and includes representatives from other ministries, employers' and workers' organizations, and civil society. (1; 82; 84; 44; 47) In 2017, conducted monitoring exercises in seven districts, including three cocoa-growing areas, to evaluate the effectiveness of child labor interventions. (83; 63)
Inter-Ministerial Committee on Combat Human Trafficking*	Aims to prevent Ghanaian migrants from becoming victims of human trafficking. Met twice in 2017, including with Ambassadors to destination countries in the Middle East, and MELR subsequently prohibited labor migration to these countries for domestic work to combat human trafficking. (63)
MELR's Child Labor Unit (CLU)	Facilitate the development of policies and laws to combat child labor, coordinate interventions to combat child labor, and oversee child protection committees at the district level. (2; 3; 22; 42; 82; 69) Provide technical support to ministries, departments and agencies, employers' and workers' organizations, and international agencies such as the ILO, IOM, and UNICEF. (1; 44) In 2017, organized a National Day Against Child Labor event, continued developing the NPA2, and contributed to the development of the National Plan of Action for the Elimination of Human Trafficking in Ghana (NPA). (70)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

The Human Trafficking Management Board, which coordinates government policy on human trafficking, was dissolved before the inauguration of President Nana Akufo-Addo in January 2017, and was not reconstituted during the reporting period. (44) Although the CLU was active during the reporting period, it was underfunded and therefore unable to implement all activities as planned. (70)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Plan of Action Phase II on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Against Child Labor (NPA2) (2017–2020)†	Aims to address gaps identified in the first NPA (2009–2015), improve coordination, and reduce the worst forms of child labor to 10 percent by 2020, with a focus on the fishing, mining, and cocoa sectors. (10; 83; 47) In 2017, signed MOUs with relevant ministries and requested cabinet approval for the Hazardous Child Labor Activity Frameworks drafted in 2008 and 2012. (44; 85; 47; 70)
National Plan of Action for the Elimination of Human Trafficking in Ghana (NPA) (2017–2021)†	Aims to improve data collection, enhance victim protection, increase accountability for perpetrators, and emphasize prevention and outreach, including an expansion of the Livelihood Empowerment Against Poverty (LEAP) Program. (86) In 2017, disseminated NPA through a workshop with stakeholders and requested all relevant ministries incorporate the NPA in their 2018 budgets. (87; 44)
Hazardous Child Labor Activity Frameworks	Includes the Hazardous Child Labor Activity Framework and the Hazardous Child Labor Activity Framework for the Cocoa Sector. Both frameworks were developed in consultation with workers' and employers' organizations and identify hazardous activities that should be prohibited for children and are awaiting cabinet approval before implementation. (88; 89; 90)
2010 Declaration of Joint Action to Support the Implementation of the Harkin-Engel Protocol (2010 Declaration) and Its Accompanying Framework of Action	Joint declaration by the Governments of Ghana, Côte d'Ivoire, and the United States, and the International Cocoa and Chocolate Industry. (91; 92; 93) Provides resources and coordinates with key stakeholders on efforts to reduce the worst forms of child labor in cocoa-producing areas. (91; 92) Ensures that all project efforts implemented under the Declaration and Framework align with Ghana's national action plans to promote coherence and sustainability. (91; 92; 93) USDOL-funded projects and some industry-funded projects carried out activities in support of this policy during the reporting period. (93)
Bi-Lateral Commitments to Combat Cross-Border Trafficking	Joint declaration signed by the First Ladies of Côte d'Ivoire and Ghana to combat the worst forms of child labor and advocate for sub-regional cooperation with other First Ladies. (94) A subsequent cooperative agreement between the two governments further operationalizes the declaration, which targets high-risk sectors, provides protection to victims, improves coordination, and prosecutes offenders. (95; 96) An MOU with the Government of Jordan formalizes labor recruitment practices and provides for support and repatriation of Ghanaian victims of human trafficking in Jordan. (64)
Minerals and Mining Policy of Ghana	Prohibits child labor in mining and stipulates children who visit mining sites must be supervised. (97)

Policy	Description
Strategy on Anti-Child Labor and Trafficking in Fisheries	Ministry of Fisheries and Aquaculture Development policy that aims to significantly reduce the incidence of child labor in fisheries by improving child protection systems and increasing prosecution of offenders. (98)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (99; 35)

In 2017, the First Lady of Ghana traveled to Côte d'Ivoire to attend a Conference of First Ladies where attendees signed the Declaration of First Ladies of West Africa and the Sahel pledging to support their governments' efforts to prevent child labor, support victims, enhance regional cooperation, and mobilize resources. (100; 101) However, the National Migration Policy and Free Compulsory Universal Basic Education (F-CUBE) do not include child labor elimination and prevention strategies. (36; 102)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2017, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including funding and adequacy of programs to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor‡

Program	Description
USDOL-Funded Projects	USDOL projects that aim to eliminate child labor. These projects include: Combating Forced Labor and Labor Trafficking of Adults and Children in Ghana (2017–2021),* a $2 million project implemented by Verité; Assessing Progress in Reducing Child Labor in Cocoa-Growing Areas of Côte d'Ivoire and Ghana (2015–2019), $3 million project implemented by NORC at the University of Chicago; Mobilizing Community Action and Promoting Opportunities for Youth in Ghana's Cocoa-Growing Communities (MOCA) (2015–2019), $4.5 million project implemented by Winrock International; CARING Gold Mining Project (ASGM), $5 million project implemented by the ILO in Ghana and the Philippines; and the Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues (GAP), a research project implemented by the ILO in 10 countries. Some projects may be in support of the 2010 Declaration to combat child labor in the cocoa sector. (103; 104; 105; 106) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
U.S. Government-Funded Projects	USG-funded projects aim to improve child protection measures in partnership with the host government. Includes Child Protection Compact Partnership (CPC) (2015–2020), $5 million USDOS-funded project implemented by IOM and local NGO Free the Slaves; Accelerating Care Reform (2016–2020), $8 million USAID- project implemented by the DSW and UNICEF to strengthen the social welfare system; LEAP 1000 (2014–2019), $12 million USAID-project implemented by UNICEF to strengthen the existing LEAP program and fund cash transfers to 6,200 poor households; Sustainable Fisheries Management Project (2014–2019), $24 million USAID-funded project implemented by CRC/URI which includes activities aimed at reducing child labor in the fishing sector; the Complementary Basic Education Program, a $40 million joint contribution between USAID and the UK's Department for International Development to support Ghana's Ministry of Education' efforts to educate and re-integrate out-of-school children into the basic school system; and the USAID-UNICEF $37 million jointly funded Learning Support program, which helps increase inclusive education services for special needs children in primary schools. (107; 108; 109; 110; 111; 112) In 2017, the CPC collaborated with IOM to develop a database on human trafficking (TIPIS), finalized and disseminated Standard Operating Procedures to Combat Human Trafficking in Ghana with an Emphasis on Child Trafficking, and provided the AHTU with six vehicles and operational equipment to facilitate its ability to combat child trafficking. (113; 114; 61; 63) The CPC also trained 13 judges and 541 law enforcement officials and social workers on identifying victims of human trafficking, data collection, using TIPIS, and victim care. (63)
Industry-Funded Projects	Industry-funded projects aim to increase sustainability in the cocoa sector, improve farmer livelihoods, improve access to education, and combat the worst forms of child labor in cocoa-growing areas. Some projects may be in support of the World Cocoa Foundation's CocoaAction (2014–2020) initiative and the spirit of the 2010 Declaration. (93; 115; 116)
Awareness Raising Activities†	Large-scale events by MOGCSP, AHTU, MOI, and MELR to raise awareness of child trafficking issues through radio and television broadcasts, public events, and community activities. (117; 63) In 2017, in support of the NPA, activities included implementing a nationwide awareness campaign, commemorating World Day Against Trafficking in Persons with events in the capital and six regions, providing training to over 100 journalists on human trafficking and investigative journalism, and partnering with a local NGO to raise awareness about human trafficking among traditional leaders. (61; 63)
Livelihood Empowerment Against Poverty (LEAP)†	MOGCSP-administered conditional cash transfer program that provides monetary support to poor households with orphans and vulnerable children on the condition that these children attend school, receive vaccinations, and regularly visit health care facilities. (22; 118; 119; 120) Serves over 213,000 households throughout the country. (120)

Program	Description
Educational Programs†	The Ghana Cocoa Board's Child Education Support Program rehabilitates and builds schools in cocoa-growing areas. (121; 122) Ministry of Education-funded programs under the Free Compulsory Universal Basic Education (F-CUBE) aim to increase school attendance and enrollment. (102; 123) Includes the MOGCSP's Ghana School Feeding Program, which aims to reduce malnutrition and improve attendance among students; the Capitation Grant Scheme, which helps defray the cost of basic education for students in public primary schools; and the Ghana Education Service—Girls' Education Unit, which places girls' education officers at the regional and district levels, and mobilizes communities to enroll more girls in school. (1; 119; 124; 123; 120) Includes the distribution of 400,000–500,000 free school uniforms and exercise books to districts with poor enrollment rates. (125; 119; 124) In 2017, the Ghana School Feeding Program began including schools in refugee camps, and the government extended free education to senior high schools with plans to extend the policy to other grades in the future. (34; 123)
MOGCSP Programs†	Includes programs to support vulnerable children. Its Program to Assist Kayayes provides rehabilitation and reintegration support; the Off the Street Project aims to remove children from the street and reintegrate them into family and educational settings; the Human Trafficking Fund provides financial support to victims. (67; 63) In 2017, assigned two government officials to a privately-run shelter for victim support, allocated $5,112 for shelter operations and victim care at three privately run shelters, allocated $1,176 for the state-run shelter, and allocated additional limited support to rehabilitate parts of a state-run shelter for child trafficking victims through an MOU with the Ministry of Finance. (126; 114; 61; 63) MOGCSP received $110,132 for the Human Trafficking Fund. (61)
mBirths	Ministry of Local Government and Rural Development program, supported by UNICEF and Tigo, to transition from a manual birth registration process to automated birth registration. (127; 128)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Ghana.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (129; 130; 123; 61)

Although the MELR continues to hold high-level discussions to re-establish the National Program for the Elimination of Child Labor in Cocoa (NPECLC), no funds have been allocated to NPECLC for implementation. (44) The CLU, the GPS's Anti-Human Trafficking Unit (AHTU), Ministry of Gender, Children and Social Protection (MOGCSP), and local NGOs cite the lack of funding as one of the primary obstacles in implementing programs to address child labor. (44; 85; 63) In addition, government-run shelters for child victims are poorly managed and did not receive sufficient funding during the reporting period. Furthermore, a Department of Social Welfare (DSW)-operated shelter for child trafficking victims and victims of other forms of abuse in Accra shares its space with a detention center for juvenile offenders, which presents safety concerns for victims. (3; 37; 85; 61)

Although the government has worked closely with industry, NGOs, and international organizations to implement child labor programs in cocoa, fishing, and mining, the magnitude of these programs remains insufficient to address the scope of the problem. (55)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Ghana (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Accede to the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography.	2013 – 2017
	Ensure that laws criminally prohibit all forms of commercial sexual exploitation of children, including by prohibiting the use of a child in pornographic performances.	2009 – 2017
	Ensure that laws criminally prohibit the use of children in all illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs.	2016 – 2017
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2015 – 2017
	Ensure that the types of hazardous work prohibited for children are comprehensive.	2014 – 2017

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure prosecutors who have received sufficient legal training oversee and lead the prosecution of cases of the worst forms of child labor, that government officials do not intervene in criminal investigations, and that these cases are prosecuted according to the law.	2015 – 2017
	Publish information on the amount of funding allocated to the Labor Inspectorate and ensure inspectorates have adequate resources, including office space, transportation, and supplies to effectively carry out their mandate throughout the country.	2009 – 2017
	Strengthen the Labor Inspectorate by ensuring inspectors conduct targeted routine and unannounced inspections, and are authorized to assess penalties for labor violations.	2014 – 2017
	Ensure that labor inspectors receive periodic refresher training.	2013 – 2017
	Significantly increase the number of labor inspectors and investigators responsible for enforcing labor laws in accordance with the ILO's technical advice.	2010 – 2017
	Establish a mechanism to log all calls to the GPS hotline and track cases of child labor for referral to law enforcement or social services providers.	2014 – 2017
	Ensure that criminal enforcement agencies coordinate effectively and receive adequate resources for transportation and victim support.	2015 – 2017
Coordination	Ensure that all coordinating bodies are fully funded and able to fulfill their respective coordinating roles.	2013 – 2017
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into existing policies.	2013 – 2017
Social Programs	Improve access to education by eliminating school-related fees, increasing the number of classrooms, improving access to schools, providing sanitation facilities, and prohibiting sexual harassment in schools.	2010 – 2017
	Ensure that social programs receive sufficient funding to carry out their objectives.	2014 – 2017
	Expand the availability of government-supported shelter services for child victims and ensure victims are not housed in the same facilities as juvenile offenders.	2016 – 2017
	Create, replicate, and expand effective models for addressing exploitative child labor.	2009 – 2017

In 2017, Grenada made a minimal advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. The Ministry of Labor provided training related to child labor to inspectors and made information regarding the Labor Inspectorate's funding levels publicly available. Although research found no evidence that child labor, including its worst forms, exists in Grenada, no study of child labor has been done to confirm this. The government's ability to prevent children from becoming engaged in the worst forms of child labor is limited because existing laws do not comprehensively prohibit child trafficking and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. In addition, there are insufficient prohibitions against children's involvement in hazardous work and illicit activities, including the production and trafficking of drugs.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor, including its worst forms, exists in Grenada. (1) According to the Education Act, public education is free and all children are required to attend school until age 16. (2) However, in practice, some school boards deny access to pregnant girls and adolescent mothers. (3; 4; 5) According to the most recently available data, the primary completion rate for Grenada was only 61.6 percent in 2016. (5)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Grenada has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 2). However, gaps exist in Grenada's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of using children in illicit activities.

Table 2. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Article 32 of the Employment Act (6)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 25 of the Employment Act; Article 4 of the Constitution; Articles 9–11 of the Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act (6; 7; 8)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Articles 9–11 of the Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act (8)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Standard	Meets International Standards: Yes/No	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 137 and 188 of the Criminal Code; Article 12 of the Electronic Crimes Bill; Article 10 of the Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act (8; 9; 10; 11)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Prohibition of Military Recruitment
State Compulsory	N/A†
State Voluntary	N/A†
Non-state	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Articles 2 and 15 of the Education Act (2)
Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 15 and 16 of the Education Act (2)

† No standing military (12)

Article 32 of the Employment Act allows holiday employment for children under age 16, but it does not specify the minimum age, types of work, or number of hours permitted for such work. (6; 13) The Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act does not sufficiently prohibit the trafficking of children, despite establishing heightened penalties for traffickers of children, because it requires the use of force, threats, abuse of power, or other forms of coercion in order to classify an act as human trafficking. (8) The Criminal Code, Electronic Crimes Bill, and Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act do not comprehensively prohibit the commercial sexual exploitation of all children. (10; 9; 8)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 3). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor	Enforce laws related to child labor. (14)
Royal Grenada Police Force	Investigate crimes and enforce laws related to child labor. Help the Child Protection Agency and the Ministry of Social Development and Housing provide emergency services to children. (14)
Ministry of Legal Affairs	Prosecute criminal cases of child abuse in consultation with the Child Protection Agency. (15; 14)
Child Protection Agency	Enforce laws related to child labor by receiving and investigating reports of child abuse. Provide social and protective services to abused children, including by requesting court emergency protection orders. (15; 16; 14)
Ministry of Social Development and Housing	Oversee the Child Abuse Hotline and investigate reports of child abuse. Refer child abuse cases to the Child Protection Agency and criminal cases to the police. (15) Enforce laws related to school attendance and provide programs to support school attendance. (11; 17; 18)
Ministry of Education	Enforce laws related to school attendance through employment of truancy officers. Combat student absenteeism by monitoring students' attendance and facilitating students' access to school transportation and meals. (11; 17; 18)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2017, labor law enforcement agencies in Grenada took actions to prevent child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including penalty assessment authorization.

Table 4. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Labor Inspectorate Funding	0 (1)	$187,266 (14)
Number of Labor Inspectors	6 (1)	6 (14)
Inspectorate Authorized to Assess Penalties	No (1)	No (14)
Training for Labor Inspectors

Table 4. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor (cont)

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Initial Training for New Employees	No (1)	N/A (14)
Training on New Laws Related to Child Labor	N/A	N/A (14)
Refresher Courses Provided	No (1)	Yes (14)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted	20 (19)	Unknown (14)
Number Conducted at Worksites	Unknown	Unknown (14)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	0 (1)	0 (14)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found for Which Penalties were Imposed	N/A (1)	N/A (14)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that were Collected	N/A (1)	N/A (14)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (1)	Yes (14)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (20)	Yes (14)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (1)	Yes (14)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (1)	Yes (14)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (1)	Yes (14)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (1)	Yes (14)

Although labor law enforcement agencies have sufficient resources to respond to reports of child labor, these agencies are typically underfunded and lack the staff and resources needed to fully accomplish their missions. (1; 17; 20)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2017, criminal law enforcement agencies in Grenada did not take actions to prevent the worst forms of child labor (Table 5). Gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators.

Table 5. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2016	2017
Training for Investigators
Initial Training for New Employees	N/A (19)	No (14)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (1)	N/A (14)
Refresher Courses Provided	No (1)	No (14)
Number of Investigations	0 (1)	0 (14)
Number of Violations Found	0 (1)	0 (14)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	0 (1)	N/A (14)
Number of Convictions	0 (1)	N/A (14)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (1)	Yes (14)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor. However, the government refers adolescent mothers and girls who leave school due to pregnancy to the Program for Adolescent Mothers rather than reintegrating them into the mainstream educational system. (4)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor. However, research found no evidence of current research on the worst forms of child labor in Grenada.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO PREVENT CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, the following actions would advance the continued prevention of child labor in Grenada (Table 6).

Table 6. Suggested Government Actions to Prevent Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Establish the minimum age for hazardous work as 18 and identify hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children.	2009 – 2017
	Prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, including drug production and trafficking.	2011 – 2017
	Establish minimum age requirements of at least age 13 for holiday employment and define the activities, conditions, and number of hours permissible for such work.	2014 – 2017
	Ensure that the law establishes sanctions for all perpetrators of child trafficking, including in cases that do not show force, threats, or coercion.	2015 – 2017
	Enact legislation prohibiting the use, procuring, or offering of a child for all forms of commercial sexual exploitation.	2016 - 2017
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2017
Enforcement	Provide sufficient funding and resources to allow agencies responsible for the enforcement of labor laws to fulfill their mission.	2015 – 2017
	Publish labor and criminal law enforcement data, including information on the number of labor inspections conducted at worksites.	2016 – 2017
	Authorize the Labor Inspectorate to assess penalties.	2015 – 2017
	Ensure that criminal investigators receive training related to the worst forms of child labor.	2015 – 2017
Policies	Adopt and implement a policy to address the reintegration of pregnant girls and adolescent mothers in mainstream education.	2016 – 2017
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor, in order to inform policies and programs.	2009 – 2017
	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible, in order to ensure that all children are provided with basic education and complete their schooling, including pregnant girls and adolescent mothers.	2015 – 2017
